ISLE OF ORNSAY see SLEAT (ISLE OF SKYE).

KILMALLIE is a parish, originally partly in Argyll, but altered by the Boundary Commission, and consisting of two portions, one on the east of Loch Linnhe, from Fort William south to Ballachulish, and the other westward of the Caledonian canal, from Achnacarry to Loch Quoich, the boundary parishes being Lismore and Appin on the south, Kilmonivaig on the north and Glenelg on the west; both are in the Lorn poor combination, and contain the burgh of Fort William (which see) and the villages of Ballachulish North and Onich. The parish church of Kilmallie is in Corpach village. The West Highland railway connects at Helensburgh with the North British railway.

Ben Nevis, the chief object of attraction in this district is the highest attainable point in the British Isles, being 4,406 feet above the level of the sea, and upon the summit the Scottish Meteorological Society erected an Observatory, opened in November, 1883, at a cost of nearly £6,000, but this is now closed. The ascent to the summit is rendered comparatively easy by a winding path or bridle road from the county road at Achintee, constructed by the directors of the Observatory. A charge of one shilling is made for each person who makes use of this path in ascending the mountain, and three shillings for each person on horseback. Those who wish to use the path are supposed to provide themselves with the necessary road-permits before starting, and to show them to the caretaker of the road. Many tourists ascend Ben Nevis at evening, in order to see the sun rising in the North Sea. Should they be so fortunate as to attain the topmost region when it is fine, and unobscured by clouds or mist, the view will amply compensate for the toil. There are now upon the summit refreshment rooms, with sleeping accommodation, open during the tourist season.

Col. Donald Walter Cameron of Lochiel C.M.G., D.L., J.P., Sir John Stirling-Maxwell bart. F.S.A., D.L. and Lady Fairfax Lucy are the principal land owners. The area of the parish is 205,640 acres; population in 1911, 3,797, of which 2,002 were in the burgh of Fort William; rateable value, burghal, £12,018; and landward, £13,561. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 907.

KILMONIVAIG is an extensive parish in the south-western part of the county, about 45 miles in length and varying in breadth from 5 to 25 miles; it is bounded on the north by the county of Ross and the parish of Glenmoriston and Urquhart, on the north-east by Boleskin and Abertarff, on the east by Laggan, south-east by Argyllshire, south-west by the parish of Kilmallie and east by Glenelg, and is in the Lorn poor combination. The kirktown is on the north bank of the river Spean, 9¼ miles north-east from Fort William and close to Spean Bridge station on the West Highland railway, and has Established and Roman Catholic churches. Loch Lochy and Loch Oich form part of the Caledonian canal, which crosses the parish from Inverlochy on the south-west border to Invergarry, at the mouth of Glen Garry, in the north-east. The parish is mountainous, the most prominent heights being Ceanna Mhaim, 2,203 feet, in the north; Ben Tee, 2,956 feet, and Ben Choire, 3,066 feet, below Glen Garry: Creag Meaghaiah, 3,700 feet, in the east; Aonach Beag, 4,060 feet; Stob Ban, 3,237 feet; Benna Lap, 3,066 feet, and Carn Dearg, 3,084, in the north. A mile and a half north-east from Fort William is Inverlochy Castle, rebuilt by order of the Scottish Government in the reign of Edward I. of England, by one of the Cumyn family, and the western tower is still called the Cumyn tower. The castle, as at present existing, comprises four large round towers, 30 feet high, connected by a wall, or screen, 20 feet high and 10 feet thick, the whole forming a quadrangle of large dimensions; the wall is in a fair state of preservation, but the towers are much decayed. Inverlochy House, the property of Helen, Lady Abinger, is now (1921) unoccupied. On the west bank of the river Lochy and east of the canal are the ruins of Tor Castle.

The principal landowners are the trustees of the late Lord Abinger (d. 1892) Sir John M. Stirling-Maxwell bart. F.S.A. the Mackintosh of Mackintosh, and the trustees of the late Edward Ellice esq. M.P. (d. 1880). The area comprises 267,233 acres; rateable value, £27,366; population in 1911, 1,700 civil parish and 1,234 ecclesiastical parish.

GLENGARRY is a quoad sacra parish partly in this parish and partly in Glenelg and Boleskin and Abertarff, and is given under a separate heading.

KINGUSSIE and INSH form a united parish in the south-east of the county, at the head of Strathspey; the first mentioned is a small town and police burgh on the banks of the Spey, 740 feet above sea level, with a station on the Forres and Perth section of the Highland railway, 44 miles south-east by road, but 46½ by rail, from Inverness, and 25 south-west of Grantown. The parish extends 20 miles from north to south by about 3 to 10 in breadth, and covers an area of 184 square miles; some miles to the south-west is Tulloch station, on the West Highland railway. An iron bridge over the Spey, erected by the third or Badenoch District Committee of the County Council, was opened for traffic December, 1894. The Police Act was adopted by the burgh in 1867, and it is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. Water is supplied by gravitation. An auction is held here by Messrs. Macdonald, Fraser and Co. Limited, of Perth, in April and August, and two in October. The County Building here is used for the justices of peace courts for the district of Badenoch, and a sheriff small debt court is held in January, May and September. A newspaper called the "Badenoch Record" is published every Saturday. There are three burial grounds in the place, two of which are known to be of great antiquity, the walls of the churches to which they belonged still remaining. On the south bank of the river, opposite the village, stand the ruins of barracks erected by the English Government during the Scottish Rebellion, and burnt down in 1745, after being captured by Prince Charles Edward's forces. Here the clans, dispersed at Culloden, reassembled to the number of about 8,000 under Lord George Gordon. About five miles from Kingussie, on the Perth road, is Invernahavon Moor, celebrated for a hard-fought battle between the clans Macintosh and Cameron, and in which Cluny and the M'Phersons ultimately interfered. Col. James E. B. Baillie M.V.O., V.D., J.P. who is the superior of the Burgh of Kingussie, Sir George Macpherson-Grant bart. Charles J. Brewster Macpherson esq. D.L., J.P. Albert C. Macpherson esq. J.P. and J. D. Fletcher esq. D.L., J.P. are the chief landowners.

NEWTONMORE is a village in this parish, 3 miles south of Kingussie, and has a station on the Highland line. There is an Established Mission church, and a United Free church, erected in 1897, and the Public Hall, erected in 1912. The principal landowner is Charles J. B. Macpherson esq. D.L., J.P. Population in 1911, 644.

DALWHINNIE, 10 miles further south, near the head of Loch Ericht, is partly in this parish and partly in the parish of Laggan, on the heights of the forest of Badenoch, and on the Highland road to Inverness from the south and 50½ miles from Inverness. There is a station here on the Highland line. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late William H. Dunlop and Sir John F. Ramsden bart.

The area of the parish is 114,381 acres; rateable value, landward, £22,982; area of burgh, 405 acres; rateable value, £7,962; the population in 1911 was 2,464, with 1,171 in the burgh. Population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911: Kingussie, 2,199; Insh, 291.

LAGGAN is an extensive parish and village in the district of Badenoch, extending from east to west, a distance of 18 miles and from north to south about 22, and bounded on the north by the parish of Boleskine, Kingussie on the east, by Blair Atholl, Perthshire, on the south, and by Kilmonivaig on the west. The village, at Laggan Bridge, is on the river Spey, 11 miles south-west from Kingussie, about 23 south-east from Fort Augustus, and 8 south-west from Newtonmore station on the Perth, Forres and Inverness section of the Highland railway, and has Established, United Free and Catholic churches. The river Spey, which takes its rise from a small lake of the same name in the western part of the parish, runs through in an easterly direction, receiving in its course the waters of the Markie, Mashie and Trium. Loch Laggan, a beautiful lake, extending about 8 miles in length by one in breadth, lies on the south-west extremity of the parish. Ben Alder, 3,757 feet, Ben Eiblaun, 3,611 feet, and Beinn a' Chlachain, 3,569 feet above sea level, are peaks in the Grampian Mountains. Dalwhinnie is partly situated in this parish and partly in that of Kingussie. Ardverikie Lodge, a shooting establishment on the south-eastern bank of Loch Laggan, is the property of Sir John F. Ramsden bart.; the lodge was erected by James, 1st Duke of Abercorn K.G. and was the residence of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria for about six weeks in the year 1847. Nine miles south-west of Kingussie, on the Fort William road, stands Cluny Castle, the seat of Albert C. Macpherson esq. J.P. The principal landowners are A. C. Macpherson esq. Duncan J. Macpherson esq. J.P. and Sir John F. Ramsden bart. of Ardverikie. The area comprises 151,916 acres; rateable value, £13,935, population in 1911, 754.

MOY and DALAROSSIE form a united parish in the north-eastern part of the county, 27 miles in length by a breadth of about 5 to 10 miles; bounded on the south-east by the parishes of Duthill, Alvie, Kingussie & Insh, on the west by Boleskine and Abertarff, north-west by Daviot and Dunlichity and north-east by the county of Nairn, and in the small debt court district of Inverness. A part of the parish formerly in Nairnshire has, under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889, boundary order 49, been transferred to the parish of Cawdor in that county. The village of Moy is on the south bank of Loch Moy, with a station at Moy, and another at Tomatin, both on the Aviemore and Inverness section of the Highland railway, and is 12 miles south-east from Inverness by road. There is an Established church both at Moy and Dalarossie, a Free Church, and a Free Presbyterian Meeting Hall at Findhorn Bridge. Moy Hall, a mile north-west of the village, is the seat of The Mackintosh of Macintosh; Kyllachy House, of W. E. Mackintosh esq.; Glen-Kyllachie, of William Dalziel Mackenzie esq. D.L., J.P. and Tomatin House, of Lachlan McBean esq. and New Lodge, Clune, of Col. George Mackintosh C.B., C.B.E. J.P. and these, with the Rev. Canon Mackintosh, are also the principal landowners. Corrybrough House, Tomatin, is the residence of W. H. Malkin esq. also a landowner. The area comprises 105,968 acres; rateable value, £12,309; the population in 1911 was 688 in the civil parish and 696 in the ecclesiastical parish, of whom 8 were in Nairnshire.

ISLE OF SKYE

THE Isle of Skye is a large island off the north-western coast of the mainland of this county, from which it is separated by Sleat Sound and Kyle Rhea; Loch Alsh, Kyle Akin and the Inner Sound dividing its northern portion from Ross-shire. It comprises the parishes of Bracadale, Duirinish, Kilmuir, Portree, Sleat, Snizort and Strath and the quoad sacra parish and waternish of Stenchol. The village of Portree, on the east side, is the capital, and contains the sheriff's court, while the seven parishes form the poor combination of Skye. Its length from north to south is 45 miles, and its breadth varies from 5 to 20 miles; its shape is very irregular and its coast is deeply indented by sea lochs, the largest being Loch Snizort on the north, running about 8 miles into the land, Loch Eishart on the south-west, about 7 miles and Loch Dunvegan on the west, about 6 miles; the first and last of these lochs divide the northern head of the island into three promontories, Duirinish, Waternish and Trotternish, the latter and eastern being the district which is connected with the wanderings of Prince Charles Edward in 1746, and it also contains the two remarkable groups of mountains known as the Quiraing and the Storr Rock. The principal mountainous district in the island lies between Loch Eishart on the south of Broadford and a line drawn from Portree to Struan Inn, a little east of Loch Bracadale, and including in its south-eastern corner the Cachullin Hills, which rise to 3,200 feet above sea level, and contain the celebrated weird fresh water loch of Coruisk, a sheet of water about 2½ miles long, entirely inclosed by lofty hills. There are many small rivers falling into the different bays and sea lochs (which latter include at least 16 large lochs). At Loch Slappin is the celebrated spar cave. The island was celebrated for its race of pipers, and a sort of college for pipers existed at Borreraig. Round the coast are a number of forts and castles, some of which are now ruinous, but a few are still occupied, and of these the chief are Armadale, Dunvegan, Duntulm, Knock, Castle Moll and Eilean Donan, while near the head of Loch Snizort stands the house of Kingsburgh, on the site of the old house to which Flora Macdonald, by the advice of Lady Margaret Macdonald, guided Prince Charlie when they landed from South Uist. The seven parishes (which include some small neighbouring islands) comprise an area of 428,966 acres, and the island is mostly in the hands of three large proprietors, who between them own about 300,000 acres. In 1901 the population of the seven parishes was 14,561. The island is principally occupied as grazing farms, producing great numbers of sheep and black cattle and some small horses, but a large portion of the land is rented by what are termed crofters, who combine farming and fishing for a livelihood. Formerly great quantities of kelp were produced here; there are also marble quarries. The fisheries off this coast, especially in the sound between Skye and the mainland, are sometimes very productive. The coasts are indented with many fine and secure ports, the principal of which are Portree and Broadford on the east, the Isle of Ornsay on the south, and Dunvegan and Stein on the north. At Broadford a stone pier, 700 feet long, was completed in 1892 by the Fishery Board at a cost of £10,000, and affords good accommodation. There is a steamer pier at Kyle Akin and a ferry to the mainland, and a small harbour and pier at Uig in Loch Snizort. The fairs in Skye are held as follows:—May, Broadford cattle, Thursday after last Tuesday; Portree cattle, last Tuesday; August, Broadford cattle, Thursday after third Tuesday; Portree cattle, third Tuesday; September, Broadford cattle, Thursday after third Tuesday; Portree cattle, third Tuesday.

BRACADALE is a parish, occupying the west side of the centre of this island, bounded west by the Little Minch, south by Loch Scavaig, east by Portree parish and north by Snizort and Duirinish; it is 20 miles in length from north to south by 10 in breadth and includes the islands of Soay and Wiay. Steamers from Oban call at Loch Scavaig with visitors for Loch Coruisk and Airds Cave. This parish is in the small debt court district of Portree and the Skye poor combination; the kirktown lies at the head of Loch Struan, 10 miles north-west from Portree, and has Established and Free churches; in the parish are also the hamlets of Talisker, Drynoch and Carbost, at which latter place there is a distillery, but the principal occupation of the inhabitants is agriculture. At Borlin, on Loch Eynort, is a burial ground, with ruins of two chapels, and at Trien, by the head of Loch Harport, are similar remains. The southern portion of the parish is occupied by the Cuchallin Hills, a group of mountains which rise to a height of 3,260 feet above the sea level, and enclosed in the irregular square formed by the inner sides of these hills, and about a mile from the head of Loch Scavaig, lies a sheet of water about 3 miles in length and half that in breadth, the hills surrounding which come down to the water's edge and show no sign of verdure or life, while an almost perpetual mist hangs over the tops and sweeps over the water, giving the whole a gloomy, deserted look; the surplus waters fall over the edge of the hill into Loch Scavaig. Norman Magnus Macleod esq. C.M.G., D.L., J.P. (the Macleod) and the Board of Agriculture for Scotland are the principal landowners. The area comprises 93,164 acres; rateable value, £4,088; the population in 1911 was 805.

DUIRINISH is a parish, in the north-west angle of this island, bounded south-west, west and north-west by the Little Minch, east by Loch Snizort and south by the parish of Bracadale; it extends 18 miles from north to south and its extreme breadth is 15 miles, but in the northern part it is cut into three headlands by the Lochs Follart (or Dunvegan) and Bay; it is in the poor combination of Skye and small debt court district of Portree. Cattle and sheep markets are held four times a year at Dunvegan on the Friday before the Portree market in May, August and September, and on the Monday before the Portree market in November. The western portion of the parish is known as Duirinish, and has Established and Free churches, and that to the east of Loch Follart as Waternish, which has also Established and Free churches, and there is a Free Presbyterian church at Glendale; Duirinish has some singular hills 1,500 feet high called McLeods' Tables and McLeods' Maidens. In the Waternish district there is a ruined church and burying ground, and at Trumpan, north of this, are the remains of a chapel, 51 feet long, with a burial ground, in which stands a roughly wrought pillar or shaft called the "Trying Stone of Trumpan;" here was buried the unfortunate Lady Grange, a Jacobite heroine. Edinbane and Dunvegan are villages in this parish, and near the latter, which is 24 miles north-west from Portree, stands Dunvegan Castle, the seat of the Macleod of Macleod C.M.G., J.P., D.L.; it stands on an elevated mass of rock on the shore of Loch Follart, and is said to date from the 9th century; the fabric was enlarged by Masdair Crotach in the reign of James VI. and contains some antiquities connected with the family. This parish was celebrated for its pipers, and young pipers were sent to study music under them. Kenneth Macleod Robertson-Macleod esq. J.P. Norman Magnus Macleod esq. C.M.G., D.L., J.P. (the Macleod), Nicol Martin esq. Lord Napier of Magdala, and Allan R. Macdonald esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 80,067 acres; rateable value, £5,663; population in 1911, 3,093 in the civil parish and 2,385 in the ecclesiastical parish.

HALIN-IN-WATERNISH is a quoad sacra parish in Duirinish civil parish. Population in 1911, 708.

KILMUIR is a parish, forming the north eastern point of this island and the northern extremity of the district of Trotternish, and its kirktown is 20 miles north-by-east from Portree, and has Established, United Free and Free churches. The parish, which extends 12 miles from north to south, by a breadth of 4 to 7, is in the poor combination of Skye and the small debt court district of Portree, and is bounded south by the parish of Snizort and on the other three sides by Loch Snizort and the Minch; a chain of hills runs down the centre of the parish, the northern portion, known as the "Quiraing," being remarkable for a collection of singular shaped peaks surrounding a turf platform, at the entrance to which is a tall needle-shaped rock; these hills lie 16 miles north of Portree; and 5 miles to the north-west is Duntulm Castle, the old residence of the Macdonalds, situated on a rock jutting out into the Minch and occupying, it is believed, the site of an old Viking fort. In the churchyard of Kilmuir is the grave of the Jacobite heroine, Flora Macdonald. The Board of Agriculture for Scotland are the sole landowners. The area of the parish comprises 34,251 acres; the population in 1911 was 1,964 in the civil parish and 887 in the ecclesiastical parish.

PORTREE is a village, seaport and parish in the east centre of this island, and the head of a sheriff court and of the poor combination of Skye; it is the capital of the island and lies about 109 miles (via Invermoriston) west from Inverness, and 74 north from Tobermory; it is reached by steamer from Oban, or from Kyle of Lochalsh by railway steamer. The village is seated a little above the shore, at the summit of a somewhat steep acclivity, thickly planted with trees. There are three banking establishments, two good hotels and posting houses, the Portree hotel and the Royal, and a mill, built in 1850, for the manufacture of tweeds, plaids, yarns and carpets. The quay, erected in 1819, has been much improved by Lord Macdonald (who owns this part of the town), at a cost of £3,000, and is available for trading steamers and ships at all states of the tide, which rises from 12 to 16 feet; the bay is safe and spacious, having a depth of from 5 to 12 fathoms, and the anchorage is excellent. The exports are sheep, black cattle, wool, salt herrings, salmon (chiefly for London), and cod and ling, both salt and dry, principally for Glasgow and Liverpool. A sheriff court is held every Thursday during the session. On a high rocky promontory, projecting some distance into the bay, stands an octagonal tower, built in 1834, by Dr. Alexander M'Leod, and affording a splendid view of the surrounding scenery. There are Established, United Free and Free Presbyterian churches. The Episcopal church of St. Columba is a building of stone, in the Early English and Decorated styles, erected in 1884 as a memorial to the late Right Rev. J. G. R. Mackarness, Bishop of Argyll and the Isles, at a cost of about £2,500, and consists of chancel, nave, organ chamber, and a tower at the south-west angle containing one bell, and surmounted by a saddleback roof: there are 150 sittings. A rectory house was built in 1893, at a cost of £800. The living is now (1921) vacant. The Ross Memorial Cottage Hospital was erected in 1893 at a cost of about £700, in memory of David Ross, surgeon, and a native of Portree, and contains 5 wards with 4 beds in each ward and 2 single wards. In a secluded spot near the harbour is a deserted burial ground, with traces of a chapel. Lord Macdonald and Messrs. Baird and Co. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 56,915 acres; rateable value, £3,389; the population of the parish in 1911 was 2,431, including 14 inmates and 4 officials in Skye Combination Poorhouse.

RAASAY ISLAND is about 13 miles long and 2 to 4 broad, and lies to the east of Skye, opposite Portree, being separated from it by the sound of Raasay, which is about 4 miles wide. There are Free and Free Presbyterian churches. It is the property of Messrs. Baird and Co. A new pier has been built. To the north of a hill, called "Dun Caan," are the ruins of Brochel Castle, and at Clachan, on the southern point of the island, are the remains of the church of St. Moluac, a structure of Early Pointed date, with lancet windows and a square-headed doorway. The area is about 18,000 acres; the population in 1911 was 324.

RONA ISLAND lies off the northern extremity of Raasay, from which it is separated by a strait passable for small vessels. It is about 4 miles in length by 1 in breadth. The little arable ground which occurs in Rona surrounds a scattered village which lies at the bottom of the bay, and contains nearly all the population of the island. Messrs. Baird and Co. are sole proprietors of the island. There is a very fine lighthouse here. The population in 1911 was 133.

FLODDA, or Fladday, is a small island about 1½ miles long, lying off the north-west angle of Raasay. Messrs. Baird and Co. are sole proprietors of the island. The population in 1911 was 45.

TIGH is also an island in Portree parish. Population in 1911, 6.

SLEAT is a parish forming the south east end of the island, and divided from the district of Moidart on the mainland by the Sound of Sleat and Kyle Rhea. The two villages in this parish are Ardvasar at the south end of the parish, and Isle Ornsay on the north-east, the latter being about 9 miles from Ardvasar. Its kirktown is about 10 miles south of Broadford, and has an Established church, built in 1681, and containing mural monuments to Donald Macdonald, of Armidle, d. 12 May, 1771, and Sir James Macdonald bart. d. 1766. There are also United Free and Free churches. The parish, which is in the poor combination of Skye and the small debt court district of Portree, is 21 miles in length from north-east to south-west by 5 in breadth, is bounded on the north by Loch Slapin and the parish of Strath. The small Island of Ornsay, on the west side of the Sound of Sleat, is included in this parish. About 7 miles south of the village of Isle Ornsay, and half a mile from the shore, is Armadale Castle, the seat of Lord Macdonald, a large modern house standing in fine grounds, with a private pier close by, but only for small boats, and in a bay a little north of the village and 3 miles south from Isle Ornsay, are the ruins of Knock Castle. Lord Macdonald is the principal landowner. Steamers call regularly at Armadale, where a new pier has been erected. This port is exactly opposite the railway terminus at Mallaig. The area comprises 41,553 acres; rateable value, £3,005; population in 1911, 1,373 in the civil parish and 1,385 in the ecclesiastical parish.

SNIZORT is a parish and village on the east side of the island, bounded east by Portree and Stenscholl parishes, south by Bracadale and Portree parishes, west by Loch Snizort (a considerable arm of the sea to the west of the district of Trotternish), and north by Kilmuir parish; it is in the poor combination of Skye, and small debt court district of Portree; the kirktown lies at the head of Loch Snizort, 7 miles north-west from Portree, and has Established, Free and United Free churches; and at Uig to the north west is a Mission church and an ancient burying ground. The Storr Rock, a remarkable pinnacle of rock about 3 miles from the east coast of the parish, standing 2,350 feet above sea level, can be visited either from Portree (7 miles) or Uig. On the west side of the parish, close to the shore of Loch Snizort, stood the old house of Kingsburgh, where Prince Charles Edward found shelter on his way from South Uist to Raasay. Kenneth L. Macdonald esq. Lord Macdonald and the Congested Districts Board are the principal landowners. The area comprises 53,283 acres; rateable value, £8,741; the population in 1911 was 1,708.

STRATH is a parish in the south east portion of the island and contains the villages of Broadford, Kyleakin and Torrin, the first of these being 24 miles south-east of Portree, at the head of a small bay, and steamers call here as well as at Kyleakin: the parish is in the poor combination of Skye and small debt court district of Portree, and 16 or 17 miles in length from east to west, by 10 from north to south; it includes Pabbay and Scalpay Islands, and is bounded south by the parish of Sleat and north by Portree, the Inner and Cuchullin sounds forming the boundaries east and west. There are Established, United Free and Free churches, each with attached missions, and a Baptist chapel. A little east of Kyleakin are the ruins of Castle Moil; the kirktown is 7 miles north-west of Broadford, and there is a ferry from here to Loch Alsh, on the mainland. A few miles south-west of Broadford is Kilchrist, where is a burying ground and the remains of a church of some size, a plain cross 5½ feet long and several slabs. In the western part of the parish, on Loch Slapin, is Kilbride, where there are traces of a burial ground and a chapel, a rudely wrought shaft, 8 feet in height, and a well, called St. Aunat's; at Ashig, between Broadford and Kyleakin, are similar remains, the well being covered in by a low structure formed of large stones. Lord Macdonald, W. L. Johnson esq. and the trustees of Sir D. Currie are the principal landowners. The area comprises 69,765 acres; rateable value, £4,285; the population in 1911 was 1,959, of whom SCALPAY ISLAND had a population of 27 and PABAY ISLAND 5.

BROADFORD contains valuable marble quarries. The number of fishing boats registered under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to Broadford on Dec. 31st, 1918, was 429, of 1,472 tons.

THE SMALL ISLES

THESE isles, forming a parish, consist of the islands of Canna, Eigg, Hyskier, Muck, Rhum and Sandy; of these Eigg only was originally in this county, the other four having been transferred from Argyllshire by Boundary Order No. 91, under "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889;" these five islands lie off the coasts of Moidart and Skye in a curved line extending from north-west to south, and are divided from the large island of Skye by the Cuchuilin sound. Rhum and Eigg can only be approached by boat from the eastern side, the heavy swell from the Atlantic rendering the western coasts inaccessible. The parish church is on Eigg Island, where there is also a Roman Catholic church and a Free Mission church; here also is the post office.

CANNA lies 5 miles to the north-west of Rhum, and is 18 miles in circumference; it contains two open and neglected burial grounds, in one of which is a broken cross about 6 feet in height, and in the other some slabs and a column of red stone, and there are traces of the ancient church of St. Columba; at the east end rises Compass hill, a bold headland with perpendicular cliffs. The island is the property of Allan Gilmour Thom esq. The population in 1911 was 39, including 10 shipping.

EIGG is an island lying 4 miles south-east of Rhum and 7 south-west of the Promontory of Sleat, in the Isle of Skye; the island consists of a mass of trap rock, slightly higher at the northern extremity and sloping to the south, where there is a singular columnar rock of porphyry, about 1½ miles long, running east and west, rising about 470 feet in height and narrowing at the top to 10 feet in width. There is also in this part of the island a cave, 225 feet long, in which in the 16th century the MacDonalds, who then inhabited the island, took refuge when it was invaded by the Laird of Macleod, who by lighting fires at the entrance suffocated the whole 200 to death; on the east side are remains of the ancient church of Kildonan, a rudely built structure, 56 feet in length, and containing a carved slab and an upright stone bearing a cross with squared centre and expanding arms within a circle. The area comprises 7,275 acres, and is wholly the property of Sir William Petersen K.B.E. Population in 1911, 181.

HYSKIER is a small island on which is a lighthouse. Population in 1911, 3.

MUCK is a small island lying 4 miles south-west from Eigg and 15 miles north from Ardnamurchan point; it is about 3 miles long by 1 in breadth, is more level than the other islands and affords pasture for cattle; the principal occupation of the inhabitants is fishing. There are remains here of a small monastery, planted by St. Columba early in the 7th century. This island is the property of Lieut. W. I. L. McEwen. Population in 1911, 38.

RHUM island, the largest of the group, 8 miles in length and 6 or 7 in breadth, lies about 9 miles west of Sleat point and 15 north of Ardnamurchan point, and is wild and mountainous, the two principal peaks being Haskeval, 2,659 feet above sea level, and Benmore, 2,300 feet; at Kilmory, on the north, is a small burial ground and traces of a chapel, a stone bearing an incised cross, and an upright slab of slate, inscribed to Catherine Henderson, d. 5 May, 1843, and her husband, Walter Cowan; the landing place is in Loch Scresort, on the eastern coast, and the island belongs to Sir George Bullough. The population in 1911 was 94.

SANDY, a small island lying to the south of Canna, close under Compass hill, is the property of Allan Gilmour Thom esq.; the population in 1911 was 41.

The area of the whole islands comprises 37,748 acres; rateable value, £3,214; the population in 1911 was 396.

URQUHART and GLENMORISTON form a united parish, on the western side of Loch Ness, about 28 miles in length by a breadth of 5 to 9, bounded on the north by the parish of Inverness, north and north-west by Kiltarlity, south-west by the county of Ross, south by Kilmonivaig parish and east by Boleskine and Abertarff and Loch Ness.

DRUMNADROCHIT is a village in this parish, near the mouth of Glen Urquhart, 14 miles south-west from Inverness and near to Temple pier, at which David MacBrayne's Royal Mail steamers, plying between Inverness, Fort William, Oban and Glasgow, call three times a week between October and June and daily during the season. At Urquhart are Established and United Free churches, and at KILMARTIN an Episcopal church. The ruins of Urquhart Castle stand on a low rock projecting into Loch Ness, and Glen Urquhart, containing the estate of Balmacaan and its extensive deer forest, opens above the ruins: the mansion is now occupied by Lord Tredegar O.B.E. The falls of DIVACH are about 2 miles south from Drumnadrochit.

MILTON and Lewiston are also villages in this parish, the former situated 1 mile west, and the latter 1 mile south from Drumnadrochit.

BALNAIN is a hamlet in the parish.

The area of the entire parish comprises 122,708 acres; rateable value, £10,597; the population in 1911 was 1,675 in the civil parish and 1,382 in Urquhart ecclesiastical parish.

GLENMORISTON (or Invermoriston) is a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parish of Urquhart and Glenmoriston, 13 miles south-west from Drumnadrochit and 27 from Inverness, and has Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The principal landowner in Glenmoriston is Ian Robert James Murray Grant esq. D.L. Population in 1911, 293.

KINCARDINESHIRE

Occasionally called the Mearns (and improperly Mearn-shire), is a small county on the eastern coast, bounded on the north and north-west by Aberdeenshire, on the east by the North Sea, and the south and south-west by Forfarshire. Its form describes nearly that of a triangle, having its base resting on Forfarshire, with the apex at Girdleness, on the south side of the Bay of Aberdeen, from which to the mouth of the North Esk river is its longest side, being about 30 miles, while its greatest breadth (which is at the base) is 22 miles, narrowing to 1 mile at Girdleness; the north-west boundary line shows a projection occupying the middle third of the distance, and about 7 miles at its widest part. The area of the county comprises 3,812 square miles, 244,482 of land (of which 450 acres was in Aberdeen city) and 1,206 of water. In size Kincardine is the twenty-first of the Scottish counties, and in population the nineteenth; its population in 1901 was 40,923, and in 1911, 41,008 (of which 11,428 was in Aberdeen city); the number of males was 19,760 (Aberdeen city, 5,416) and females, 21,248 (Aberdeen city, 6,012). The number of inhabited houses in 1901 was 8,743, and in 1911, 9,222 (Aberdeen city, 2,299); uninhabited, 689 (Aberdeen city, 80) and building, 21 (Aberdeen city, 7).

Name and Early History.—The shire takes its name from Kincardine, formerly a small town in the parish of Fordoun, and which was the seat of the county courts &c. until the year 1600, when they were removed to Stonehaven. Kincardine, which has dwindled to a mere hamlet, was formerly connected with an ancient seat of royalty called Kincardine Castle, of which only the foundation of the walls can now be traced. The phrase Mearns, before referred to, after strict investigation, is in all probability merely of local meaning; but it is generally said to have been affixed to this part of Scotland from its having become the property of Mernia, a brother of King Kenneth II., another brother called Angus conferring his name upon the neighbouring county of Forfar. In former times the hollow of the Mearns was the only passable access to the North of Scotland, owing to the hills occupying uninterruptedly all the rest of the breadth inland, except at this point, and it was the common passage for armies going to and fro since the earliest periods of history; yet, unless a great battle between Galgacus and Agricola took place here, as some historians aver, this county has not been the theatre of any extraordinary events, nor the scene of any great military achievements. The peasantry of the shire have always been considered a very able and industrious race of men; and the "men of the Mearns" is a proverbial expression of old date, implying trustworthiness and integrity.

Soil, Surface, Produce &c.—The county is almost exclusively of an agricultural character, for although it has the advantage of so extensive a range of sea coast, it possesses no harbour of any commercial importance. The soil of Kincardine is of a very productive kind, and is cultivated in a style nowhere surpassed in Scotland. The crops raised are oats, barley and turnips, and small fields of rye are to be met with. Attention is also devoted to the feeding of cattle, and on the hills numbers of black-faced sheep are reared. The chief crops, as shewn by the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1920," are: Oats, 30,521 acres; barley, including bere, 13,091; wheat, 1,070; beans (to be harvested as corn), 49; rye, 129; peas, 4; total of all corn crops, 44,902 acres; turnips and swedes, 16,213 acres; potatoes, 4,588; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. for fodder, 355; other crops, 30; rye grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 44,450; bare fallow, 18. The total area of land is 244,482 acres, of which 43,700 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing); 8,393 permanent grass; 110,662 arable land, and 25,275 of woods and plantations. The live stock in 1920 included 3,675 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, one year and above, 335; under one year, 350; cows in milk, 5,489; cows in calf but not in milk, 372; heifers in calf, 306; other cattle, two years and above, 5,628; one year and under two, 7,256; under one year, 5,000; ewes kept for breeding, 14,816; other sheep, one year and above, 4,927; under one year, 15,043; sows kept for breeding, 258; other pigs, 1,475.

The salmon fisheries yield a valuable rental, the fish being packed in ice and sent to the southern markets. The white or sea fishing employs many of the inhabitants, the species caught comprising whiting, cod, ling, halibut, turbot, soles &c. Herring fishing is prosecuted during July and August, and is a source of much profit, many persons being employed in the curing of the fish. There are no fishing boats registered in the county, but those used would come under the head of Aberdeen or Montrose. Manufactures as yet have not made much progress in this county, the principal being the making of woollens, flax and tow spinning, and net rope and twine manufacturing. There are also one or two tanneries, breweries and distilleries. The county is destitute of coal, marl and limestone, all of which deficiencies bear hard upon agricultural improvement; these drawbacks, however, seem to have excited more strongly the spirit of enterprise amongst the agriculturists, who import lime in great quantities from other districts by means of the Firth of Forth. In Arbuthnot parish, and near St. Cyrus on the sea shore, beautiful bepples and jaspers are found. The only minerals raised in 1919 were gravel and sand, 100 tons; igneous rock, 10,586 tons, and sandstone, 159 tons.

The coast is partly flat and partly rocky, and at the north-eastern corner of the county terminates the chain of the Grampians, where they form what is called the Girdleness, which presents to the sea a bold face of rock from 60 to 80 feet high. The chief mountains and eminences are Mount Battoch, 3,465 feet in height; Clacknabane, 2,370; Clairniemount, 2,000; Kerloch, 1,890; the Hill of Fare from 1,500 to 1,700; Scolty Hill, 1,500; and Strathfanella, a detached Grampian, from 1,200 to 1,500 feet above the level of the sea. The county in its more level parts is highly embellished by the country seats of its numerous resident proprietors, each amid its own thriving woodland.

Rivers and Railways.—In the south portion of the county the Luther water and other smaller streams fed from the Grampians empty themselves into the North Esk, which debouches into the bay south of St. Cyrus; next come the Bervie, which has almost the nature of a loch and reaches the sea at Bervie town; then the Cowie just north of Stonehaven, and the Carron issues at the same town; the Dee flows through the north-west corner of the county, and along the north boundary to Girdleness; the Dye water flows north to the Feugh at Strachan, and thus joins the Dee, and the Aven skirts the south-west border. There are no large lochs. The railways are two in number, both converging at Aberdeen, and passing through the county from south to north, and from west to north. The first is the Caledonian railway, which, entering the county at Marykirk, runs north-east to Stonehaven, and thence along the coast to the Dee, opposite Aberdeen. The second is the Deeside railway, which, leaving Aberdeen, skirts the north border and passes through the north-west corner, by Banchory on to Ballater.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Kincardineshire comprises 20 civil parishes, and 20 complete and parts of four ecclesiastical parishes; it contains within its limits a royal burgh—Bervie, and three police burghs—Banchory, Laurencekirk and Stonehaven. Aberdeen with Kincardine send three members to Parliament in three divisions, Kincardine and Western forming one division, comprising the county of Kincardine, inclusive of all burghs situated therein, except the burgh of Inverbervie and that portion of the county of the city of Aberdeen which is situated within the said county of Kincardine, together with the county districts of Alford and Deeside, inclusive of all burghs situated therein. The county parliamentary constituency for 1919 was 23,055.

ARBUTHNOTT is a parish in Kincardineshire poor combination, nearly 5 miles in length, bounded on the west by Fordoun, or the great hollow of the Mearns, the streams of Bervie and Forthy forming the line of division, and on the north-west by Glenbervie and Kinneff. The present church of the Establishment was founded as early as the 13th century, and consecrated on the 3rd day of August, 1242, by Bishop de Bernham; the portion now in use comprises the nave and chancel of the old church: the chancel was for many years used as a place of sepulture by the Allardyce family, and a small chapel adjoining it, originally dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was the burial place of the Arbuthnott family. The modern woodwork and galleries were consumed by fire in 1889. The celebrated Dr. Arbuthnott, the intimate friend of Pope and Swift, was the son of a former minister and a native of this parish. A district church was erected at FIDDES in 1910. Arbuthnott has since 1641 given the title of viscount to a family of the same name which became distinguished in the 12th century, Sir Robert Arbuthnott, for his loyalty to Charles II., being created Baron Inverbervie and Viscount Arbuthnott by that monarch, and the present peer resides at Arbuthnott House. Acreage of the parish, 9,584; rateable value, £6,909; population in 1911, 674.

Sub-Post Office, Arbuthnott; Mrs. Innes, sub-postmistress. Letters for Arbuthnott should have Fordoun, Kincardineshire added. Fordoun is the nearest money order & telegraph office, 3½ miles dist

AUCHINBLAE AND FORDOUN

AUCHINBLAE, a village in the parish of Fordoun, is pleasantly situated on the banks of the Luther water, 26 miles south-by-west from Aberdeen, 16 north from Montrose, 11 south-west from Stonehaven, 6 north-east from Fetter cairn, 5 north from Laurencekirk, 3 west from Fordoun station on the Caledonian railway and in Kincardineshire poor combination. In consequence of the salubrity and pureness of the air and the many beautiful and romantic walks in the immediate neighbourhood, it is much frequented during summer by families from the sea-coast towns of Arbroath, Montrose, Stonehaven and Aberdeen. The town was lighted by gas in 1840, but the use of this is discontinued and paraffin oil substituted. The present parish church, erected in 1829, and standing on a high rock, is a large edifice in the Gothic style, with a western tower about 100 feet in height. The United Free church stands in the valley. The Episcopal church of St. Palladius, at Drumtochty, built in 1886, will seat 153 persons. A public hall was erected in 1870 by subscription, at a cost of £500. There is a distillery belonging to the Auchinblae Distillery Co. and a branch of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. There is a golf course of nine holes, and there are tennis courts and a bowling green. Fordoun parish extends from east to west about 10 miles, and in breadth about 7. The southern part is level, but the north is mountainous, having a thin soil and inferior in fertility to the lower part. In the western part of the parish, about a mile north-east from Fettercairn, is Castleton farm and St. Catherine's burial ground, formerly part of the old town of Kincardine, which ceased to be the chief town of the county in the reign of James VI. when Stonehaven obtained that distinction. In the vicinity are the remains of the royal palace or castle of Kincardine, which appears to have been a royal residence previous to the death of Kenneth III. in 994: it stands on the termination of a small ridge at an elevation of about 60 or 80 feet above the adjoining plain, and affords a fine view of the most beautiful part of the Howe o' the Mearns. In was in this palace that John Baliol resigned his crown to Edward I. of England, July 2nd, 1296: in the 17th century the palace came into the possession of the Earl of Middleton, after whose decease it became ruinous, and was utilised as a quarry. Near to Fordoun House are distinct vestiges of a Roman encampment, and on the hill above Newlands are the remains of a pre-historic grave mound. About a mile west of Drumtochty Castle, in a retired and secluded glen, are the sites of several oratories and seven wells, one of which, a fine spring called "Brightwell," is considered to be among the most copious in Scotland. An auction mart is held at Fordoun every Saturday for the sale of cattle &c. The area of the parish is 26,859 acres; rateable value, £20,713; population in 1911, 1,717, of which number 427 were returned for Auchinblae.

BANCHORY-TERNAN is a parish on the banks of the Dee, in Kincardineshire poor combination and Stonehaven small debt court district. It is bounded by Durris on the east, Kincardine O'Neil on the west, Midmar on the north and Strachan on the south. The river Dee is here crossed by an iron truss bridge (1789-1829) of 175 feet span, and three stone arches. The village of Banchory, founded in 1805, stands on the north side of the Dee, 18 miles south-west of Aberdeen, and has a station about half a mile distant on the Deeside branch of the Great North of Scotland railway. In 1885 it became a burgh by adopting the police Act of 1862, and is governed by nine commissioners, with the usual officials under the Act. It is lighted with gas from works belonging to a Limited Company. The parish church, which stands at the east end of the burgh, was erected in 1824, and is in the Gothic style, with a tower and clock, and affords sittings for 1,250 persons. The United Free church, in the High street, erected in 1880, at a cost of £3,000, upon land given by Sir Robert Burnett, 11th bart. (d. 1894), is an edifice of pink and white granite, in the Early English style, with a tower 100 feet high, containing an illuminated clock: the church will seat 700 persons. There is also another United Free church. The Episcopal church of St. Ternan, built in 1851, will seat 160 persons. The Rev. William Watson Hawdon B.A. of Durham University, has been rector since 1903. The Town Hall, a building erected in 1873, contains a large hall for entertainments. The Banchory Club and Library, held in the Town hall, was opened January, 1893: it contains over 1,000 volumes: a small annual subscription fee is charged to members. The Post Office is in the High street and was erected in 1910. There are branches here of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. A public park of about 16 acres was opened on the 3rd of August, 1887, the land for which was presented by the late Sir Robert Burnett bart.: it has been beautifully laid out, at a cost of about £800, and there is a large sheet of water, which in winter time is resorted to for skating and curling. On the road from the village to the railway station is an ornamental drinking fountain, erected in 1879 to the memory of Col. William Burnett Ramsay, of Banchory Lodge. The parish is finely wooded and contains several gentlemen's seats and residences. In the parish are two or three lochs, one of which was some time ago drained and brought under cultivation. The water supply for the city of Aberdeen is taken from the Dee at the western boundary of this parish, about 3½ miles above the village of Banchory. Inchmarlo House is the seat of Frederick B. Grotian esq.; Raemoir House, of Mrs. Innes and Riverston, of Miss Ramsay. About half-a-mile south of Banchory is the Bridge of Feugh, a place much frequented by visitors. The bed of the Feugh here is very rocky and the stream forms a picturesque cascade, and afterwards falls into the Dee. The cattle shows of the Deeside Agricultural Society are held at Banchory in July of each year. Auction sales for horses, cattle, sheep, pigs &c. are held fortnightly on Wednesdays. The parish contains an area of 20,079 statute acres; rateable value, £ ; area of burgh, 546 acres; rateable value, £31,385; population in 1911, 3,377, the burgh containing 1,633.

CRATHES, 3½ miles east, is in Banchory parish and has a station on the Deeside railway. Crathes Castle is the seat of Col. Sir Thomas Burnett bart. D.L., J.P.

BRIDGE OF CANNY is 3 miles west.

BERVIE (or Inverbervie, as it is frequently written) is a parish and royal burgh in Kincardineshire poor combination, with a railway station on the Montrose and Bervie section of the North British line (there is also a station on the same line in the village of Gourdon); it is 13 miles north-by-east from Montrose, 10 south-by-west from Stonehaven and 25 south-by-west from Aberdeen, on the coast road from the last-named city to Dundee, and at the mouth of the Bervie, here crossed by a bridge of a single span of 103 feet. At the mouth of the river is a small basin, which opens into an extensive bay, navigable for vessels almost at any time. The principal trade of the town is the spinning of flax. The river is a fine stream, and in the driest season always has an abundance of water. The town is well lighted with gas, and the electric light has also been introduced into several of the public works. Bervie was constituted a royal burgh by charter from King David II. as a return for the kindness and hospitality with which he was received by the poor inhabitants, when he was forced in here by stress of weather, and the spot where he landed is still called Craig David. James VI. renewed the charter, confirming all the privileges and immunities granted by King David. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and four councillors. Together with Montrose, Arbroath, Brechin and Forfar, it forms the Montrose parliamentary district, constituted under the "Reform Act" of 1832, and returning one member. The sheriff small debt court, which used to be held in Bervie, is now removed to Stonehaven. Registration courts are still held once a year. There is a church of the Establishment and a United Free church. The area of the parish is 2,331 acres; rateable value, landward, £4,523; area of burgh, 208 acres; rateable value, £5,256; population in 1911, 2,391; of this number 1,173 were returned for the royal and parliamentary burgh. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1920 was 239.

GOURDON is a fishing village, one mile from Bervie. Population in 1911, 1,117.

COOKNEY, including Netherley, Newtonhill and Muchalls, was created a quoad sacra parish and registration district in 1859 out of the northern side of Fetteresso. The parish, bounded on the east by the North Sea and on the south by Fetteresso, is about 6 miles long from west to east and 4 miles broad, the soil along the coast being well cultivated and fertile, but there is much barren land to the west. Most of this was at one time common, but it was divided among the neighbouring heritors, and is now under cultivation and much improved. The parish church is 5 miles north-north-west from Stonehaven and about 3 miles from the village of Skateraw. There is also a United Free church at BOURTREEBUSH. At Muchalls, which has a station on the Caledonian railway, is the Episcopal church of St. Ternan, built in 1831, and seating 276 persons. Here also is a coast guard station. Blackhills Cave here was explored in 1896, and found to consist of two large chambers. Muchalls Castle, formerly a residence of the Burnett family, now (1921) unoccupied, was built in the 17th century and is beautifully decorated. There is a fishing village, Skateraw, in the parish. Population in 1911, 1,278.

DRUMLITHIE AND GLENBERVIE

DRUMLITHIE is a village in the parish of Glenbervie, 22 miles south-west of Aberdeen, 18 north from Montrose, 7 north-by-west from Bervie and about 7 south-west from Stonehaven, on the road to Laurencekirk, situated nearly in the centre of the east side of the county, and has a station on the Caledonian railway. Here also is a United Free church, and the Episcopal church of St. John the Baptist, served by the rector of St. Palladius's church, Drumtochty, Fordoun. The parish of Glenbervie, which is in Kincardineshire poor combination, is upwards of 6 miles in length, by a breadth of 3 in some parts and 5 at others; it is bounded on the west by the Water of Bervie and Fordoun, on the east by Dunnottar and Fetteresso, on the south and south-east by Arbuthnott and on the north by the hills of Strachan and Durris. The soil of the upper part of the district is of bluish clay, and in the lower a dry fertile loam. The northern portion of the parish lies partly among the Grampian Hills. The river Bervie bounds the district partly on the west, and the Carron has its source within it. The hamlet of Glenbervie, which stands in the vicinity of the former river, is a barony of the Douglas family, and has an Established church. In the churchyard are interred some of the ancestors of the poet Robert Burns. The parish of Glenbervie contains 15,056 statute acres; rateable value, £7,746; population in 1911, 779.

DRUMOAK, which is partly in Kincardineshire and Aberdeenshire, will be found with the information for the latter county.

DUNNOTTAR, anciently spelt Dunfother, is a parish of an irregular form, the eastern side running from Stonehaven to the south, a distance of 5 miles and from thence about 5 miles north; abutting on the parishes of Kinneff and Glenbervie, from thence descending to the Carron Water at the base of Carmont Hill, where Dunnottar and Glenbervie are met by the parish of Fetteresso. The seaward boundary of the parish is a continuous chain of rocks and cliffs containing many caverns, which render Dunnottar one of the most romantic places on the east coast. It is in Kincardineshire poor combination. The principal object of interest in the parish is Dunnottar Castle, within the walls of which formerly stood the parish church. It is seated on a perpendicular rock, 150 feet above the level of the sea, and about 3 acres in extent, and is almost separated from the land by a deep chasm. The oldest part of the present ruins, known as the Earl's tower, was built towards the end of the 14th century by Sir Robert Keith, whose ancestor led the cavalry at Bannockburn. During the Commonwealth, the regalia of Scotland were placed for safety under the care of the Ogilvies, but the castle being attacked by General Lambert, the regalia, by the direction of Mrs. Ogilvie, were secretly removed to the manse of Kinneff, and then concealed under the flooring of the church, below the pulpit. After a siege by Cromwell's army of eight months' duration the castle was ultimately surrendered to the Cromwellians upon honourable terms in May, 1652; later it was used as a state prison, and the Covenanters' stone in Dunnottar churchyard preserves the memory of those who perished there. The castle was dismantled shortly after the rising of 1715, when its proprietor, George (Keith), Earl Marischal, was attainted for high treason. Since that period the castle became by purchase the property of Sir Alexander Keith, of Dunnottar and Ravelston, and is now the property of the Rt. Hon. Viscount Cowdray. The fabric is still fairly entire. Here is an Established church. The old town of Stonehaven is in this parish, which embraces an area of 7,781 acres; rateable value, landward, £7,644; burghal (Stonehaven), £5,164; population in 1911, 2,255, of whom 1,601 were in Stonehaven.

Letters are received from Stonehaven. Rural postmen leave Stonehaven for delivery in country, one delivery daily; postmen collect letters & take them to post office. Stonehaven is the nearest money order & telegraph office

EDZELL, which is partly in Kincardineshire and Forfarshire, will be found with the information for the latter county.

FETTERCAIRN is a parish and village, the latter being 98 miles north-by-east from Edinburgh, 12 north-west from Montrose, 16½ south-west from Stonehaven, 11 north from Brechin, and 5 north-west from Laurencekirk, and situated on a small streamlet, a tributary of the North Esk. The parish is in Kincardineshire poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Laurencekirk. The river is here crossed by the Bridge of Gannachy, which springs from the precipitous rocks on either side, at a great elevation above the water. The nearest railway station is Laurencekirk, 5 miles distant, on the main line of the Caledonian railway. Here are Established and United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Andrew, at Fasque, built in 1847, affords 102 sittings: the living, value £200, has been held since 1909 by the Rev. Charles Frederic Arabin Wimberley M.A., of Durham University. In the village is a large public hall, containing a billiard room, reading room and library; here also is a branch of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, and in the neighbourhood is a large distillery. In the village square stands the ancient cross of Kincardine. About a mile west is a ruin called "Fenella's Castle," in connection with which is a singular tradition concerning the murder of Kenneth III. by a powerful lady named Fenella, in revenge for the death of her son, who was slain by that monarch in rebellion. At one end of the village stands a graceful arch, erected to commemorate the visit of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort, on the 21st September, 1861. There is also a fountain erected to the late Sir John Stuart Forbes, of Fettercairn, d. 27 May, 1886. The parish of Fettercairn lies at the foot of the lower range of the Grampians, and extends considerably into the Mearns; the soil on the west is light and sharp, with a small mixture of moss; on the east it becomes deeper and of a fertile clay loam. The name of the parish is derived from the said Fenella cairn or castle and the eminences or moraines in the vicinity. The principal landowners are Maj. Sir John Robert Gladstone bart. (Vice-Lieut. of the county), Lord Clinton, Charles Alan McInroy esq. and Sir William Mitchell Thomson bart. K.B.E., M.P. The area is 14,846 acres; rateable value, £11,625. Population, 1911, 1,301 in the civil parish and 1,259 in the ecclesiastical parish.

FETTERESSO is a parish about 10 miles in length and between 5 & 6 in breadth, bounded on the south by the parish of Dunnottar, on the west by Glenbervie, Durris and Maryculter, on the north by Maryculter and Banchory-Devenick, and on the east by the North Sea. There are two quoad sacra parishes within Fetteresso, Rickarton on the west and Cookney on the north; these parishes will be found under separate headings. The principal streams are the Carron and the Cowie, which run from west to east; the former divides the parish from Dunnottar for about 5 miles, entering the sea at Stonehaven; the latter has a similar course and termination. The parish church is within the burgh of Stonehaven, which is partly in this parish. An Isolation Hospital for the county was erected in 1903, and contains 19 beds, 16 cribs and 3 cots. The salmon fishery is carried on here. Fetteresso Castle is the seat of Major R. W. Duff D.L., J.P. and was once the ancient abode of the Earls Marischal, but has since been altered. Ury House, a fine modern building, is the residence of Sir John Lawrence Baird bart. C.M.G., D.S.O., M.P. The greater part of the town of Stonehaven and also the village of Cowie are in this parish. The area of the parish is 27,247 statute acres; rateable value: landward, £26,142; burgh (Stonehaven), £22,997; the population in 1911 was 4,961, of which 2,665 were in Stonehaven Police Burgh. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 3,335. The total population included 9 officials and 139 inmates of Kincardineshire Combination Poorhouse.

JOHNSHAVEN AND BENHOLM

JOHNSHAVEN is a seaport village, in the parish of Benholm, 14 miles south-west from Stonehaven and 4 south-west from Bervie, situated at the bottom of a hill between the coast road and the sea, and a little off the main thoroughfare between Aberdeen and Montrose, 29 miles south-west from the former town and 9 north-east from the latter, in the small debt court district of Stonehaven, with a station on the North British railway. It contains a flax tow spinning mill. The parish of Benholm, which is in Kincardineshire poor combination, forms a square of nearly 3 miles, lying on the shore of the North Sea, bounded on the north by Bervie and on the south by St. Cyrus. The land is level on the coast, and the interior consists of hill and dale, and beneath the surface is deposited good freestone and limestone. There is an Established church, a chapel of ease and a United Free church: here also is a Masonic hall, and coastguard, lifeboat and police stations. The old tower of Benholm is still standing. The principal landowners are Miss Scott, the trustees of the late Lady Cranstoun (d. 1899), and John Rust esq. The area of the parish of Benholm is 4,892 acres, rateable value, £8,795; the population in 1911 was 1,276, of which number 852 were returned for Johnshaven.

KINNEFF, with which are incorporated the parish of Caterline and the districts of Kinghornie and Barras, lies on the sea coast south from Dunnottar, and is bounded by Arbuthnott on the west and Bervie on the south. It is in Kincardineshire poor combination, and extends from the Water of Bervie to the northern point, about 5 miles along the coast, which is exceedingly bold and rocky. The parish church is about 3 miles north-east from Bervie terminal station, which is on a branch from Montrose of the North British railway; here also is a United Free church. At Caterline is the Episcopal church of St. Philip. Upon the margin of the sea, not above 100 yards distant from the parish church, are the ruins of Kinneff Castle, the seat of a branch of the Scottish De Montforts, burnt in 1336 by the Regent Moray; a quarter of a mile north are the ruins of Whistleberry Castle, probably once occupied by Sir Patrick Gray, of Kinneff, Captain of the Guard to James IV.; at Kinghornie, in 1341, David II. landed on his return from France. The old castle of Fiddes, also in this parish, and recently restored, is famous as the scene of the legend of Thrummy Cap, a poem written in broad Scotch, in 1796, by John Burness, a cousin of Robert Burns. A lighthouse was erected on Tod Head in 1897. In Kinneff church the regalia of Scotland were deposited from 1651 to the Restoration, being ingeniously conveyed by Mrs. Grainger, the minister's wife, out of the Castle of Dunnottar, while besieged by General Lumbert, and secreted under the flooring of the church, beneath the pulpit. There is a harbour and village at Caterline. Good trout fishing may be got, and salmon fishing in Bervie Water. The area is 7,247 acres (on ordnance survey); rateable value, £7,535; population in 1911, 835.

LAURENCEKIRK is a parish and police burgh, 93 miles north-by-east from Edinburgh, 10 north from Montrose and 14 south-west from Stonehaven, situated on the main road from Perth to Aberdeen, and has a station on the Caledonian railway. The parish is in Kincardineshire poor combination. Formerly a mere hamlet, seated amidst an uncultivated tract of country, it is indebted for the consequence it enjoys at the present day to Lord Gardenstone, a judge of the court of session, who, in the year 1772, took it under his fostering care and patronage. In 1779 he procured for the place the privileges of a burgh of barony, with the right of holding a weekly market. It is governed by a burgh council. A police court has been established and is held when occasion requires. Branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited are established here, and there is also a savings bank. The parish, formerly called "Conveth," is 4 miles in length and 3 at its greatest breadth. A ridge of hills stretches through the whole extent, from east to west, sloping gradually to the north and south; the small river Luther passes through the district and numerous brooks intersect it. The name Laurencekirk is derived from the dedication of the old church to St. Laurence. There are Established, United Free and Episcopal churches. In 1866 a public hall was erected by subscription, at a cost of some £1,400, called St. Laurence Hall. There is a brewery, motor engineering works and an extensive cattle auction mart. A fair is held on the first Wednesday in March (St. Anthony's fair—old style). Horse market on the Monday before the first Friday in March. Cattle and grain markets are held every Monday throughout the year. The principal landowner is Mrs. Pearson, of Johnston Lodge. The area of the parish is 5,613 acres; rateable value, landward, £5,489; area of burgh, 570 acres; rateable value, £8,137; in 1911 the population of the parish was 1,921, and the town 1,438.

NIGG is a parish and village situated near the termination of the ridge of the Grampian mountains and bounded on the north by the river Dee, which separates the parish from Aberdeen, and on the south and west by Banchory-Devenick. It extends 4 miles in length by 2 in breadth. The village is distant 2 miles south from Aberdeen, and about 2 miles north from Cove Bay station on the Caledonian railway, and has an Established church. The coast is bold and rocky, the north-east point, called "Girdleness," being a remarkable promontory, on the south side of the estuary of the Dee, and having a lighthouse. Near the small bay of Nigg are the ruins of the old parish church, dedicated to St. Fitticks. The district comprises the fishing village of Torry, which has a small harbour and a pier. Torry is now included in the city of Aberdeen for municipal, school board and parochial purposes. The Victoria Bridge, a granite structure, now spans the Dee and connects Torry with Aberdeen. Cove Bay is also a small fishing village in the parish, 4 miles south from Aberdeen, with a station on the Caledonian railway, and has an Episcopal Church dedicated to St. Mary, which is served from Aberdeen; there is also an East Coast Mission Hall. The parish has an acreage of 3,979; rateable value, £13,288; population in 1911, 1,573.

ST. CYRUS, formerly called Ecclesgreig, is a parish and village, the latter being 4 miles south-west from Johnshaven, between the coast and the road from Montrose, and having a station on the Montrose and Bervie railway. The parish, which measures 7 miles in length and 3 in breadth, lies partly on the sea shore, having Benholm on the east, Garvock on the north, and Marykirk on the north-west and the North Esk river washes part of its western boundary; the parish is in the small debt court district of Stonehaven. There are Established and United Free churches. General Stratton, a hero of the Peninsula and Waterloo, left legacies for the poor of the district. The charities also include the interest on £1,000, left by Col. Orr, and distributed as follows:—one-fifth to the poor, the other four-fifths for the oldest, youngest, shortest and tallest brides married in the Established church here. The principal landowners are Capt. Maurice Cecil Forsyth-Grant M.C., J.P. the Earl of Kintore P.C., G.C.M.G. David Scott Porteous esq. D.L., J.P. James B. Grahame esq. and the trustees of the late Barron Grahame esq. The sea salmon fisheries along the coast of the parish are very valuable; the yearly rental amounting to about £2,800, and of the river fishings to about £1,560. The surface of the parish is pretty level, but is intersected with several glens and rivulets, and elevated in some places to little hills. More than three-fourths of it is arable. The burn in Den Finella forms a beautiful cascade by falling over a rock 64 feet in height. On a peninsular rock, the base of which is washed by the sea, stand the ruins of the Kame of Mathers, formerly the residence of the Barclay family. The Castle of Lauriston is also an ancient building. The parish, which contains limestone quarries and plenty of excellent freestone, has an area of 8,227 statute acres; valuation roll, £17,871; population in 1911, 1,222.

STONEHAVEN (or Stanehive) is a seaport and the county town of Kincardine and a police burgh within the parishes of Dunnottar and Fetteresso, 110 miles north-by-east from Edinburgh, 68 north-east from Perth, 66 south-south-east from Banff, 35 north-by-east from Arbroath, 23 north-east from Montrose, 15 south from Aberdeen and 10 north-north-east from Bervie. It is a favourite summer resort, being situate on a beautiful bay of the sea, within three-quarters of a mile of a station on the Caledonian railway, on the coast of the North Sea, at the mouth of the Carron stream, and flanked on both sides by lofty hills. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. The place, though not a royal burgh, is of considerable importance, and comprises the old and new towns; the former lies on the south bank of the Carron, adjacent to the harbour, in the parish of Dunnottar; the other on a peninsula, or angle, formed by the Carron and the Cowie, in the parish of Fetteresso, the two being connected by a bridge forming a continuation of the road from the south to Aberdeen. The new town is laid out on a regular plan, having broad streets, with a square in the centre, in which stands a good market house, erected in 1827, and surmounted by a tower with spire 130 feet in height. The town hall, in Allardice street, opposite the market house, was erected in 1878, at a cost of £4,000; it is vested in the Council, and contains news and reading rooms. The harbour is a natural basin, sheltered on the south-east by a high rock which projects into the sea, and having on the north-east a quay that affords every facility for loading or unloading vessels. The shipping of the port is chiefly employed in the coal, lime and potato trade, and occasionally in exporting grain. The celebrated Royal Glenury Distillery is in the vicinity, and the manufacture of woollens is carried on, besides which there is a tannery, where a large quantity of leather is produced, a brewery, a jute spinning mill and a net factory. Here also are two banking houses, one savings bank and several good hotels. The sheriff ordinary court is held every Wednesday in time of session. One newspaper is published here, the "Mearns Leader," every Friday. The Established Church of Dunnottar is situated near the town, that of Fetteresso being within the borough boundary. There are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches in the town. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St. James, and the Very Rev. Dean William Leslie Christie M.A. of Aberdeen University, has been rector since 1890. There are cemeteries at Fetteresso and Dunnottar, both about 1 mile distant. A weekly grain market and cattle sale is held on Thursday. Fairs: May 27th, feeing; November 27th, feeing. Annual holidays: Second Monday in May, third Monday in June and second Monday in September. The principal landowners are Sir John Lawrence Baird bart. C.M.G., D.S.O., M.P. Major Robert William Duff D.L. Rev. W. D. Innes, W. H. Ritchie esq. H. O. Ritchie esq. and Eric. H. Anderson esq. O.B.E. The area of the burgh is 354 acres; rateable value, £29,413; population in 1911, 4,266.

STRACHAN parish is bounded on the east by Durris, Fetteresso and Fordoun, on the south also by the latter parish and Fettercairn, on the west by Lochlee and Birse in Aberdeenshire, and on the north by Banchory Ternan, in the Kincardineshire poor combination and Stonehaven small debt court district. The village is distant 3½ miles south from Banchory. The parish is 11 miles in length, by from 7 to 9 in breadth, containing an area of 41,684 statute acres, and is for the greater part a mass of hills, some of which belong to the range of the Grampians. Clochnabane, more than 2,300 feet high, rises within the parish, the land of which is low towards the north, on which quarter it is bounded by the Dee, where it is tolerably well cultivated and some of it planted, strawberries being extensively grown. The river Feugh passes through this parish and falls into the Dee at Banchory. The village is 4 miles from Banchory railway station, and has Established and United Free churches. Population in 1911, 527; area 41,684 acres; rateable value, £5,982.

KINROSS-SHIRE

THIS small inland county formed the north-western quarter of Fifeshire up to the year 1426, and at the Revolution (1689) was enlarged by the addition of Orwell, Cleish and Tulliebole, which parishes before that period formed a portion of Fifeshire; Perthshire being its northern boundary, and Clackmannan on the western border. In figure the county takes the form of a square, although the line of its boundary is very irregular. It extends from east to west about 13 miles; and from north to south about 11 miles. The total superfices of the county amounts to 81.9 square miles, or 52,410 acres of land, and 3,439 of water; in the county are seven lakes; of cultivated land there are 35,350 acres, and of uncultivated 3,093 acres. This is the smallest of the Scottish counties except Clackmannan, and in population numbers the least. Its name is significant of its local situation, importing the "Head of the peninsula." The population in 1901 was 6,981 and in 1911, 7,527 (3,617 males and 3,910 females). The number of houses in 1911 was:—Inhabited, 1,848; uninhabited, 244; building, 13.

Soil, Surface, Produce &c.—The boundaries or outskirts of the county are generally hilly; and the shire may be described as an open vale or plain, environed by uplands and hills. The Ochil hills, which separate the district from Strathearn, are the northern boundary; the Lomond hills are the eastern; Benarty hill the south-eastern, and Cleish hills the south and south-western. These eminences are generally adapted for pasture and the rearing of cattle; but they are likewise in several places suited to cultivation. In the Ochil range, Slungie hill is 1,354 feet, and Tilliery 1,787, while Benarty is 1,131 feet above sea level, and Dumglow, in the Cleish range, 1,241. The original condition of Kinross resembled that of the contiguous county of Fife, having been of a moory, mossy nature. Up to a comparatively recent epoch the lands were bleak and unreclaimed—a circumstance partly attributable to a certain local characteristic—namely, the remarkable peculiarity in its proprietary of being much divided into farms, each owned in feu by its tenant; there are, in consequence, more resident lairds in proportion to its extent in this part of the country than are to be found in any other division of Scotland. The farms, it appears, were feued about the commencement of the 18th century from the house of Kinross to the tenants then in possession, whose descendants inherit the properties, paying for them an exceedingly trifling duty or quit-rent. The marches of the various farms not having been accurately defined, and being more confused by the practice of "runrig," it was long before the county manifested any very active signs of improvement. Within the recollection of persons still living, few districts were worse cultivated, or less profitable than Kinross-shire; but the prime minister Pitt's institution of rack-rent taxation, in conjunction with other circumstances (among which undoubtedly may be included the good example exhibited by neighbouring agriculturists), ultimately induced a spirited change; and now the progress of agriculture—the mode of draining, inclosing and planting—can compete with those of Fife and most other districts. Drainage, on an extensive and effectual system, has been carried into operation on the Carse, east from Loch Leven, and on its margin; in all directions in this particular quarter productive arable fields present themselves, in place of desolate moors and sombrous mosses. Oats and barley are the crops most cultivated, but great attention is paid to the growing of turnips and potatoes. The chief crops as shown by the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1920," are:—Oats, 8,159 acres; wheat, 172; barley, including bere, 411; rye, 128; total corn crops, 8,888; turnips and swedes, 2,542; potatoes, 1,527; rape, 130; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 3,098 acres; pasture (not for hay), 6,268 acres. The total area of land is 52,392 acres, of which 13,811 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing); 11,008 permanent grass; 22,575 arable land.

The live stock in 1920 was: horses, used for agriculture and brood mares, 813; unbroken horses, 379; other horses, 134; cows in milk, 1,109; cows in calf, but not in milk, 96; heifers in calf, 193; other cattle, two years and above, 1,662; one year and under two, 2,248; under one year, 1,006; ewes kept for breeding, 10,965; other sheep, 14,988; pigs, 687.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 39; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 48; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 16; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 17; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 15; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 29; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 30; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 77; above 300 acres, 21; total, 292.

At this day many good roads intersect the shire, and various parts of it are sheltered by thriving plantations. The manufactures of the county are only of moderate importance, and consist chiefly in the weaving of linen fabrics, and the making of plaids, tartan shawls, and other woollen goods. The only mineral raised is coal, the total being included with the Argyllshire in the "Mineral Statistics for 1919."

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—There are no rivers of magnitude in this county; the only ones that can be named are the Gairney, on the southern boundary of Kinross parish; the South Quelch, that runs below the town of Kinross; and the North Quelch, on the northern border of the parish—all of which, and a few rivulets besides, discharge themselves into Loch Leven. This beautiful and noble expanse of water (for which see Kinross town) lies at the east end of a wide vale, and nearly in the centre of the county; the small river Leven issues from it, and pursues an easterly course through Fifeshire. Besides Loch Leven there are a few minor lakes, or (as they are properly termed) tarns, on the eminences above Cleish. The railways (part of the North British system) consist of a line coming from Alloa and entering the county near Rumbling Brig, which at Kinross is joined by another line which runs up north from Dunfermline through Kelty and Gairney Bridge, and the united line sweeping round the north end of Loch Leven, leaves the county at Burnside.

Kinross-shire contains only five complete parishes, and has only one town, Kinross, with a population in 1911 of 3,094. The county, which has no parliamentary burgh, joins with Perth in returning two members to Parliament in two divisions, viz.: Kinross and Western and Perth. The Kinross and Western division comprises the county of Kinross, inclusive of the burgh of Kinross, together with so much of the county of Perth as is contained within the Central, Highland and Western County districts, inclusive of all burghs situated therein. The parliamentary constituency of Kinross-shire in 1919 numbered 26,261.

BLAIRINGONE is a village and a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parishes of Fossoway and Tullibole in this county, Clackmannan and Dollar in Clackmannanshire and Muckhart in Perthshire, and is 2½ miles south-east from Dollar station on the Devon Valley and Stirling section of the North British railway. The church is a plain edifice of stone, built in 1836, and the interior has since been refitted at considerable expense. It contains two very fine stained glass memorial windows: against the south gable, below the bell, a very handsome war memorial of Kemnay granite has been erected, and bears the names of 19 men who fell in the Great War (1914-18). It was chiefly owing to the liberality of the late Mr. Wylie, of Arndean, that the parish was endowed, and at his death he bequeathed a further sum to increase the value of the living. The population in 1911 was 418, viz.: Kinross-shire, 291; Clackmannanshire, 120; Perthshire, 7.

CLEISH is a parish and village; the parish on the southern border of the county, is oblong in form, about 6 miles in length by a breadth of about 2; it is bounded on the north by the parish of Kinross, on the east, south and west by the county of Fife, and is in the small debt court district of Kinross; the village is 3 miles south west from Kinross, 7 north from Dunfermline, 2½ south from Balado (Cleish road) station on the Devon Valley and Stirling section, and 2¾ north-west by west from Blairadam station on the Dunfermline and Perth section of the North British railway.

MARYBURGH is a hamlet 5 miles south from Kinross; the mining village of Kelty Bridge is at the southern end of this parish, but the village of Kelty is entirely in the parish of Beath, county of Fifeshire:

BLAIRADAM is a railway station 3½ miles south-east from Kinross. There are quarries of free stone in the parish, and coal is extensively wrought on the estate of Blairadam, which occupies a large part of this parish and of Beath and Dunfermline, and is the seat of Sir Charles Elphinstone Adam bart. D.L., J.P. The two hamlets of Maryburgh and Kelty Bridge lie on the estate. The principal landowners are Sir C. E. Adam bart. and William Young esq. A range of hills, called Cleish hills, runs along the south side of the parish, affording fine pasturage for sheep. The rest of the soil is under tillage, which is the chief employment of the inhabitants. The area comprises 6,403 acres; rateable value, £16,338; population in 1911, 546.

CROOK OF DEVON, see FOSSOWAY

FOSSOWAY and TULLIEBOLE form a united parish in the western part of the county, bounded on the north by the parish of Forgandenny, on the east by Orwell and Kinross, south by Cleish and the county of Fife and on the west and north-west by the counties of Clackmannan and Perth; it is in the small debt court district of Kinross and has two stations, Crook of Devon and Rumbling Bridge, on the Devon Valley and Stirling section of the North British railway. A part of the parish was formerly in Perthshire, but under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889 (boundary order No. 120), a large portion was transferred to this county for civil purposes; the remainder was retained in its original county, but attached to the parish of Glendevon. The parish contains two small rural villages, named Blairingone and Crook of Devon; the latter is on the river Devon, 6 miles west from Kinross, and has a railway station. There are Established and United Free churches. POWMILL and CARNBO are hamlets in the parish. At Powmill is a Public Hall erected in 1910 by Mrs. Moubray. About 2 miles from Crook of Devon, following the course of the river, and about 7 from Kinross, is the celebrated Rumbling Bridge, and a little further on is the equally famous Cauldron Linn, noted also for the picturesqueness of the surrounding scenery, and since the opening of the Devon Valley railway the locality has become much frequented by tourists. The trustees of the late Major Lord Charles G. F. M. Nairne M.V.O. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 15,796 acres; rateable value, £15,183; population in 1911, 1,059 in the civil parish and 805 in the ecclesiastical parish, of which 37 were in Perthshire.

KELTY BRIDGE, see BEATH (FIFESHIRE).

KINNESSWOOD, see PORTMOAK.

KINROSS is a town and police burgh, nearly in the centre of the county, and a parish, extending 6 miles from east to west by 5 from north to south, and is bounded south by Fifeshire, north by the parish of Orwell, east by Portmoak and west by Fossoway. The town, which has two stations (Kinross junction and Loch Leven) on the North British railway, is 27 miles north-west from Edinburgh (via Forth Bridge), 19 south-west from Cupar-Fife, 17 south from Perth and 10 north from Dunfermline, and is the head of a sheriff court district, courts being held every Tuesday during session; it stands at the foot of the vale of Kinross, on the shore of Loch Leven, with the North road running through it, and formerly consisted of one main street and several ancient looking lanes, but has been partly rebuilt and much improved. The Town Hall was built in 1868. The County Buildings, in which the courts are held, were erected in 1826, at a cost of £2,000, and a police station has since been added. The parish church is a modern building in the Gothic style; there are also two United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Paul, an edifice in the Gothic style, was erected in 1875 and consecrated in 1881, and affords 150 sittings: the incumbency has been held since 1918 by the Rev. William Macintosh M.A., Ph.D. of Aberdeen and Halle Universities. The public Free Library, the gift of the late Andrew Carnegie esq. LL.D. was erected, with museum attached, in 1905, on a site presented by Sir Basil T. G. Montgomery bart. and has a reading room, billiard room, and lending department of upwards of 5,000 books. The Isolation Hospital is situated at a little distance from the town. A golf course has been laid out near the Kinross Junction railway station. The Royal Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the British Linen Co. Bank have branches here. There is a woollen spinning mill and a linen power loom factory in the town, and shawl weaving is carried on. The "Kinross-shire Advertiser" newspaper is published here every Friday for Saturday. At the hamlet of Tillyochie, in the parish, and 3 miles distant from the town of Kinross, there is a woollen spinning mill. Kinross House, the property and residence of Sir Basil T. G. Montgomery bart. is a mansion designed and built by Sir William Bruce, the architect of the modern part of Holyrood House; it stands near to the northern entrance to the town, and close to the landing place from Loch Leven Castle, the ruins of which occupy a prominent position on an island at the north-west end of the loch; this castle is best known as the prison of Queen Mary, who owed her escape from it to the devotion of George Douglas, a son of Lady Douglas, who as wife of the custodian of the castle was virtually the Queen's jailer; George Douglas arranged a series of signals with the Hamiltons and her other adherents, and bringing her by boat to the landing place near the churchyard, threw the castle keys into the loch, and placed the Queen, 2nd May, 1568, in the care of her friends; in 1805, a number of keys, supposed to have been those thrown into the loch, were found near this landing, and eight small keys of antique make were also discovered nearer to the castle. The first mentioned are now in the possession of the Earl of Morton, the others being in the Antiquarian Museum at Edinburgh. The loch is twelve miles in circumference, and contains four islands, the largest of which occupies nearly 100 English acres; upon this latter stood the ancient priory of St. Serf (or St. Servanus), and there are still remains of a church, apparently of Romanesque character, with an internal length of 21 ft. 6 in. and 14 ft. 6 in. wide. There seems to have been a still earlier monastic foundation, and an abstract of the chartulary of this house is in the register of the priory of St. Andrews, to which David I. about 1145, granted the island of Lochleven. The loch is stocked with trout of a red colour and first-rate quality, besides perch &c. The excellent sport obtained, and the other attractions of the locality, draw a yearly increasing number of visitors. The fishing season begins on the 6th March and closes on the 6th September. Rod fishing begins generally in April, for which there is an ample supply of boats on the loch. The general appearance of the country is hilly and for the most part agricultural. Sir Basil T. G. Montgomery bart. and Alexander Price Haig esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 7,252 acres; rateable value, £29,428 (not including railway rate); area of burgh 257 acres; rateable value, £10,477; the population in 1901 was 2,655 and in 1911, 3,094, including 2,618 in the burgh.

MILNATHORT is a large village in the parish of Orwell, and a station on the Edinburgh and Dunfermline to Perth section of the North British railway; it is on North Queich water, 2 miles north from Kinross and 9 north-west from Leslie. The local government is carried on by a Parish Council. There are three places of worship, the parish church and two United Free churches; the Milnathort United Free church, erected in 1868, at a cost of £3,000, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and has a tower with spire 125 feet high. The Public Hall, standing in the centre of the village, also has a tower with spire and containing a clock. A weekly sale of live stock is held on Monday at the auction mart, adjoining the railway station, and a corn market is also held on the same day. A feeing market is held here in October. The Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited have branches here. The Reid Memorial School was founded by Mrs. Reid, of Thomanean, in memory of her late husband, but has since been taken over by the Kinross-shire Education Authority; there is also a public school. The population in 1911 was 1,178.

ORWELL is a parish, on the northern border of the county, about 7 miles in length by a breadth of about 4; it is bounded on the south by the parish of Kinross and Loch Leven, on the west by Fossoway and Tulliebole, north by Perthshire, and east by the county of Fife and the parish of Portmoak, and is in the small debt court district of Kinross. The parish contains the large village of Milnathort (which see), 2 miles north-east from which is the Mawcarse Junction station, on the Edinburgh and Dunfermline and Perth section of the North British railway, for the Kinross and Ladybank branch. Middleton, Dalqueich and Seggie are hamlets in the parish, from 1 to 2 miles distant from Milnathort. The parish is bounded on the north by Forgandenny and Arngask, on the east by Strathmiglo and Portmoak, on the south by Fossoway and Kinross, and by Fossoway on the west. Here are Established and United Free churches. The greater part of Orwell is fine arable land, well inclosed and planted. The Ochil Hills Sanatorium, an establishment for the treatment of consumption and other forms of tubercular disease, has been erected at a cost of £40,000, on an elevated plateau 800 feet above the sea level, and about 3 miles north-west from Milnathort. It stands on a dry and gravelly soil and is protected on the north, north-east and north-west by wooded hills, the principal front being directly south. The building comprises 60 bedrooms for patients, all with a southern aspect, dining, drawing and writing rooms, a library and various apartments for medical treatment. Baths of different kinds are provided on each corridor. The attached estate includes miles of beautiful walks amid sheltering pine trees, and within walking or driving distance there are many places of great historical interest and natural beauty. On the low ground, towards Loch Leven, stands the ruins of the ancient castle of Burleigh, formerly the residence of the Lords Balfour of Burleigh. H. Purvis-Russell-Montgomery esq. D.L., J.P. Major Simpson and Alfred McIntosh esq. are the principal landowners. Adjoining the village of Milnathort is a 9 hole golf course. There is also a Public hall. The area comprises 13,118 acres; rateable value, £19,457; population in 1911, 1,983, of which 1,178 were in the village of Milnathort.

PORTMOAK is a parish on Loch Leven, extending 6 miles north to south by a breadth of 2 to 4 miles; it is bounded on the north by Strathmiglo, on the east by Leslie and Kinglassie, on the south by Auchterderran and Ballingry, and on the west by Kinross and Orwell, and is in the small debt court district of Kinross. Kinnesswood is a village in the parish, on the east side of Loch Leven, 5 miles east from Kinross and 2½ south-east from Mawcarse Junction station on the North British railway. The village is famous as the birthplace, 27 March, 1746, of Michael Bruce, a Scottish poet of note; the house in which the poet was born, and in which he died, 6 July, 1767, has been restored. Scotlandwell is also a village in the parish, 5 miles west from Leslie and 3 south-east from Mawcarse Junction station. Balgedie is a hamlet 3 miles south-east from Milnathort. Besides the parish church, there are also two United Free churches, one at Portmoak and the other at Easter Balgedie. Bishophill, the western peak of the Lomonds, is in this parish, and occupies a large portion of the area in the north-east. This hill is 1,150 feet above Loch Leven and 1,492 feet above sea level, and contains lime and freestone. Wells of pure water are numerous on the west side of the hill, and in one place, near Scotlandwell, there are three, with a copious flow of water. Andrew Winton, the chronicler of Scotland, was a native of this parish, which for twenty-eight years was under the charge of the Rev. Ebenezer Erskine, one of the founders of the Secession church. Sir Basil T. Graham-Montgomery bart. is the principal landowner. Fife and Kinross Joint Sanatorium for the treatment of tuberculosis patients is in the parish. This institution has considerable land for farming. The area comprises 9,841 acres; rateable value, £10,472; population in 1911, 845.

KIRKCUDBRIGHTSHIRE

A COUNTY in the south-west of Scotland, on the Solway Firth, and the only remaining "stewartry," or district, once governed direct by the king by means of his steward (or stewart); the name, however, is all that exists of this ancient jurisdiction, the district being treated in all respects as the other counties, the county occupying the eastern portion of the ancient district known as Galloway; Wigtownshire being the other part on the west. It is bounded by Dumfriesshire on the east and north-east; on the south by the Solway Firth; by the county of Ayr on the north and north-west, and by Wigtownshire and Wigtown Bay on the west. In extent it measures, from south-east to north-west, about 44 miles, by a breadth varying from 20 to 30 miles; the narrowest part being on the north and towards its north-western limits; it comprises 575,832 acres of land and 6,686 of water. About 192,100 acres is under cultivation. This shire in point of size is the eighth, and in population the nineteenth of the counties of Scotland. The population in 1901 was 39,383, and in 1911, 38,367, viz.:—Males, 18,069; females, 20,298. The inhabited houses in 1901 were 8,576, and in 1911, inhabited, 8,911; uninhabited, 671; and building, 30.

Early History.—After being overrun by the Strathclyde Britons, who appear to have dislodged the Picts and Scots, who originally came to this district from Ireland, it was colonised by the Romans in 79 A.D. when they crossed the Solway Firth; these retired in 410 and the Cumbrian Britons took possession of all the west country, with their capital at Dumbarton; this connection with Cumbria continued for some time. In Kirkcudbright town Edward I. spent some time during the warfare of 1300, when he subdued Galloway, of which this stewartry then formed a part, and in 1455 it was visited by James II. in the course of his march through Galloway. A few years later, in 1461, Henry VI. with his queen and court, fled thither after his defeat at Towton; and in 1508 James IV. was hospitably entertained in the town. Queen Mary spent her last night in Scotland at Dundrennan Abbey.

Soil, Surface, Produce and Manufactures.—The soil of the county is principally composed of loam mixed with sand, incumbent sometimes on gravel, and in many places on rock. Four of the most northerly parishes—Carsphairn, Dalry, Kells and Balmaclellan—are commonly designated the district of "Glenkens." If a line be drawn from the centre of Kirkpatrick-Irongray parish to Gatehouse-of-Fleet, all to the north-west, with little exception, is mountainous; while the south and east parts exhibit a fine champaign and cultivated country. The principal eminences in the shire are Criffell (or Crawfell), 1,867 feet; Cairnsmuir, 2,331; Cairnsmore, 2,612; Corscrieve, 2,668, and Merrick, 2,764 feet above the level of the sea. The ancient forest formerly covering this district can now only be traced in trifling remnants on the banks of the streams. It appeared that, so early as the 12th and 13th centuries, this hilly territory was under a productive process of agriculture, originated and improved by the monks of the different abbeys in the district; and it is upon record that in the memorable year 1300, when Edward I. subdued Galloway, he caused considerable quantities of wheat to be exported from the harbour of Kirkcudbright to Cumberland, and even to Dublin. In these times the staple products were wheat and oats, the culture of barley, peas and beans being very limited. In the 18th century measures were adopted to improve its agricultural capabilities, and the inclosure of the land with fences was the first attempt; but this judicious preliminary was encountered by a riotous opposition from the population, who rose in considerable numbers, under the title of "levellers," and proceeded to demolish the newly formed boundaries; and they were not subdued until the most energetic measures were employed. The county subsequently steadily advanced, and towards the close of the century the district could compete with adjacent shires in agricultural prosperity. Planting has been introduced by several noblemen and gentlemen of the stewartry, and much has been accomplished in reclaiming moss lands. The principal cereal grown is oats, and turnips and potatoes are also cultivated.

The chief crops as shown by the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1920," are:—Wheat, 21 acres; barley, including bere, 188 acres; oats, 28,900 acres; rye, 59 acres; beans, 30 acres; total corn crops, 29,198 acres; potatoes, 1,956 acres; turnips and swedes, 11,160 acres; mangolds, 76 acres; cabbage, 47 acres; rape, 2,104 acres; vetches, tares &c. 66 acres; bare fallow, 103 acres; rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, for hay, 10,999 acres; pasture (not for hay), 39,569 acres. The area of the county (exclusive of water) is 575,832 acres, of which 349,508 acres is mountain and heath land used for grazing; permanent grass, 84,986 acres; arable land, 95,326 acres.

The live stock in 1920 comprised 3,508 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares; stallions, 54; unbroken horses, one year and above, 1,097; under one year, 466; other horses, 787; cows in milk, 16,636; in calf but not in milk, 807; heifers in calf, 4,527; bulls, 986; other cattle, two years and above, 10,822; one year and under two, 12,235; under one year, 8,917; ewes kept for breeding, 144,899; other sheep, one year and above, 50,654; under one year, 138,326; sows kept for breeding, 745; other pigs, 10,094. The number of horses, cattle and sheep reared in the county is moderately large, and the breed of horses known as Galloways has given way to others of a large and stronger variety, while for dairy purposes the Ayrshire cattle are gradually superseding the black Galloway cow. Sheep and swine have considerably increased in numbers.

The district is very nearly destitute of coal, which, as well as the greater part of the lime used, is brought from Cumberland. In 1919, as shown by the "Mines and Quarries General Report and Statistics," 24,111 tons of igneous rocks (which includes granite) were raised. Marl is found in great plenty, especially in the loch of Carlinwark, which contains an inexhaustible store of the best shell marl. The mineral wealth of the county consists chiefly in its granite, which is extensively wrought in the neighbourhood of Dalbeattie and Creetown, and for the polishing of which there are works at both places. Besides the salmon fishings at the mouths of the rivers, the Solway Firth affords good fishing; the boats employed in which are registered in the adjoining county of Wigtown. The manufactures are of small value, and consist principally in the making of woollen goods.

Rivers, Railways &c.—The stewartry is intersected by numerous streams, which, uniting, form four considerable rivers; these are—the Dee, the Ken, the Cree, and the Ure. The Ken is considered the largest, joining the Dee below Loch Ken and then debouching at Kirkcudbright Bay. All these rivers rise in the north, and empty themselves into the Solway Firth or the Irish Sea. The smaller streams are the Fleet, the Tarf, the Deogh, and the Cluden. The Solway Firth, in a circular form, washes the coast of the stewartry, from the Nith to the Cree, a space of 45 miles; and along the shore of this estuary the coast is bold and rocky, the cliffs in some instances rising to a great height. The Glasgow and South Western railway work this county, running a line from Dumfries, via Dalbeattie and Castle Douglas, to New Galloway, with a branch line from Castle Douglas to Kirkcudbright. From Castle Douglas the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire Joint railway runs to Newton Stewart, Stranraer and Portpatrick, which connects with the steamers for Ireland from Stranraer.

Divisions, Representation &c.—The shire, or stewartry, comprises 28 civil parishes, and 33 whole and part of 1 ecclesiastical parishes; these latter being included in the presbytery and synod of Dumfries and the presbytery of Kirkcudbright (with a few in that of Wigtown), synod of Galloway. There are 2 royal burghs, Kirkcudbright and New Galloway, and 4 police burghs (Castle Douglas, Dalbeattie, Gatehouse and Maxwelltown). Kirkcudbright and New Galloway, in conjunction with Stranraer, Wigtown and Whithorn (in Wigtownshire), formerly sent one member to Parliament, but under the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885," these towns were included in the counties to which they belong. Under the "Representation of the People Act, 1918," Galloway, which comprises the counties of Kirkcudbright and Wigtown, inclusive of all burghs situated therein, returns one representative. In 1919 the parliamentary constituency numbered 32,687.

NEW ABBEY is a parish and village, in the stewartry and poor combination of Kirkcudbright, and in the small debt court district of Dumfries; the village, situated near the mouth of the Nith, is 6 miles from Killywhan station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 80 miles south from Edinburgh, 12 north-east from Dalbeattie, 30 north-east from Kirkcudbright, and 7 south from Dumfries. The parish, which is bounded on the east by the Solway Firth, originally called Kirkinder, takes its modern name from the Cistercian abbey, founded here in the 13th century, by Devorgilla, daughter of Alan, Lord of Galloway, and wife of John Balliol, of Barnard Castle, co. Durham, the founders also of Balliol College, Oxford, and parents of John Balliol, King of Scotland. The ruins, which occupy an area of 240 by 150 feet, include the piers and arches of the church: the area being used as a burying ground. The extreme outer walls, or precincts, enclose over 20 acres. On the north and south lie the woods of Shambellie, and on the south Loch Kinder, and the dark braes of Criffel, the lofty hill of which rises to the height of 2,000 feet above the sea, from which it is 3 miles distant. Besides that of Kinder, there are two other lakes in the parish, namely, Lochend and Lochabber. The old parish kirk, built with part of the material of the abbey, stood on the south side of the ruins. The present parish church, built in 1876, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and about 1896 was redecorated at the expense of the congregation. On the Glen Hill, a continuation of the Criffel Range, is a monument, erected in commemoration of the battle of Waterloo, 18 June, 1815. It is 50 feet in height, enclosing a winding stair, and on the base is an inscription. The St. John's Lodge, No. 162, of Freemasons, New Abbey, and the Sweetheart Lodge of Oddfellows, also of New Abbey, hold monthly meetings here. Kinharvie House, the residence of the Duchess of Norfolk, and Shambellie House of Mrs. Stewart, are in this parish. The Duchess of Norfolk, Major Julian Oswald and William Stewart esq. are the principal landowners. The parish of New Abbey comprises an area of 13,177 acres; rateable value, £6,021; population in 1901, 957 and in 1911, 742.

BEESWING is a small hamlet in the parish, about 6 miles north-west of New Abbey village, 3 from Lochanhead station and 1 mile from Killywhan station on the Glasgow and South Western railway: it contains an United Free church.

AUCHENCAIRN is a quoad sacra district, in Rerrick parish, the village being 8 miles south from Dalbeattie station on the Dumfries and Castle Douglas section of the Glasgow and South Western railway, 8 south from Castle Douglas, 10 east from Kirkcudbright, and 21 south-west from Dumfries, on the main road between the two last-named towns. It is much frequented during the summer months for its excellent bathing. Mines of barytes, copper and ironstone were at one time worked here with success. In the village are two hotels, which afford excellent accommodation. At the mouth of Auchencairn Bay lies the small and lofty Island of Heston, which affords excellent pasture for sheep, and also harbours a great number of rabbits. There is an Established church and a United Free church, erected in 1844, and re-constructed in 1876 at a cost of £1,400; it now seats 460. The principal landowners are William Douglas Robinson-Douglas esq. M.A., D.L., J.P. and John Fortune esq. Population in 1911, 641.

BORGUE is an agricultural parish and small village in the poor combination and small debt court district of Kirkcudbright, on the west side of Kirkcudbright Bay, and is bounded on the west by Wigtown Bay. The village is about 5 miles south-west from Kirkcudbright station on the Glasgow and South Western railway and 6 from Gatehouse, and has Established and United Free churches. A Celtic cross of granite and a clock in the tower of the parish church were erected in 1920 as memorials to the 39 men of the parish who fell in the Great War. A flower show is held annually in August; president, Rev. William J. Pennell. This was the birthplace of William Nicholson, a Galloway poet, to whom a monument was erected in the village in 1901. Sir Robert C. Gordon bart. Maj. Sir Chas. Dunbar Hope-Dunbar bart. D.L., J.P. Douglas Brown esq. G. G. B. Sproat esq. J.P. and Andrew Pringle esq. are the principal landowners. Acreage, 13,502; rateable value, £12,962; population in 1911, 1,023.

BUITTLE is a parish in the poor combination of Kirkcudbright, 5 miles from Dalbeattie station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 18 south-west from Dumfries, 14 north from Kirkcudbright, and 6 south of Castle Douglas. The parish is bounded on the east by Urr, on the south by the Solway Firth, and on the west by Kelton, and is a fertile and agricultural district, 8 miles in length and 3 in breadth. Palnackie (or Garden), the principal village in this parish, is on the Water of Urr, where there is a good harbour, having at ordinary spring tides a depth of 30 feet of water, and capable of receiving vessels of 200 tons. The parish church, built in the year 1819, is an edifice in the Gothic style, with a Norman tower; the ruins of the old church still remain. William Douglas Robinson-Douglas esq. M.A., D.L., J.P. William Jardine Herries Maxwell esq. M.A., D.L., J.P. and Major Wellwood Maxwell J.P. are the principal landowners. The parish contains an area of 11,446 acres; gross rental of parish, 1920, £11,904 3s. 1d.; population in 1911, 825.

CARSETHORN, see KIRKBEAN.

CARSPHAIRN is a parish and village on the river Deugh, in Kirkcudbright poor combination and small debt court district. The village is 10 miles south-east from Dallmellington terminal station (in Ayrshire), on a branch from Ayr of the Glasgow and South Western railway, 13 north of New Galloway and 32 north of Kirkcudbright, and has Established and United Free churches. The parish is somewhat extensive, but mountainous and thinly populated, and is bounded on the east by the Ken water, on the north by Ayrshire and on the west by the Polmaddie Burn and Loch Doon, and is chiefly devoted to grazing. This parish, together with the parishes of Dalry, Kells and Balmaclellan, forms the district of Glenkens—famed for its true breed of black-faced sheep and black cattle, as well as for good horses of the Galloway breed. Major F. A. Cathcart is the principal landowner. Acreage, 54,727; rateable value, £9,016; population in 1911, 360.

CASTLE DOUGLAS is a quoad sacra parish, town and burgh of barony in the parish of Kelton, and poor combination and Commissary Court of Kirkcudbright, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western and Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railways, 90 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 18 west by south from Dumfries, 15 north-east from Gatehouse, and 10 north-north-east from Kirkcudbright. The town is situated on the road between Gatehouse and Dumfries, in a pleasant, fertile district, on the banks of the Carlingwark loch, and derives its chief importance from its weekly markets and extensive auction sales; it was originally a village, but in 1792 was erected by the proprietor, Sir William Douglas, into a burgh of barony, and is now governed by a Town Council. Castle Douglas and its vicinity appear to have been the arena in ancient times of many hostile encounters, when the ancient Douglases dwelt in the castle of Threave, and were lords of the district; and on the west side of the town are remains of encampments and breastworks, thrown up against the castle; on the south-west bank of the loch is a spot termed the "gallows lot," or "plot," said to have been the place of execution in former times. Near the head of the lake lived, it is said, a blacksmith named M'Kim, or M'Min, and his sons, who, according to tradition, made the large cannon called "Mons Meg," shown at Edinburgh Castle, forged by them at Buchan Croft, near Carlingwark House. Threave House is the property of Edward Gordon esq. and the residence of Mrs. Gordon. The Town Hall, in St. Andrew street, is a building of red sandstone, erected at a cost of £1,300, and was enlarged in 1907; and here a police court is held on the first Tuesday in each month. The Diamond Jubilee Cottage Hospital in Academy street, erected by public donations, amounting to over £2,000, was opened in 1899 and is available for 12 patients. In the town are branches of the Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Bank, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited; there is also a Savings Bank, established in 1840. Castle Douglas parish church, near Carlingwark loch, built in 1868, and enlarged in 1881, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and affords 720 sittings. The Episcopal church of St. Ninian, erected in 1874, is a building of whinstone and granite, in the Early English style, and will seat 150 persons. The United Free church in King street has a steeple of red sandstone. The principal public school, in Cotton street, is a building of red sandstone, erected in 1910 at a cost of £8,000. A market for cattle, sheep and grain is held on Mondays. Fairs: February 13th, or the following Monday, for horses; the last Monday in March, for hiring servants; September 23rd, or the following Monday, for hiring and for horses, and November 13th, or the following Monday, for horses. The population in 1911 was 3,016; rateable value, burghal, £21,588.

COLVEND, a parish adjoining Kirkbean, is in Kirkcudbright poor combination and small debt court district; 5 miles north from Dalbeattie station on the Dumfries and Castle Douglas section of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The parish, which is on the Solway Firth, is entirely agricultural, and remarkable only for its scenery. Along the coast of Colvend and Southwick are several large caves, and three of the hills in the united parish exceed 1,300 feet in height. Near Craigneuk Point is a heap of stones called "Coulthart's Cairn," supposed to be connected in some way with the ancient Galloway family of Coulthart, of Coulthart. Kippford, Rockcliffe and Douglas Hall are popular bathing places, visited during the summer by families from many parts of Scotland. There is an Established church. Sir Mark John Mac-Taggart-Stewart bart. V.D., M.A. Col. Edward Philippe Mackenzie, Major Julian Oswald, Capt. R. F. Hanbury and the Hilton trustees are the principal landowners. The parish has an area of 18,157 acres; rateable value, £10,067; population in 1911, 1,143 in the civil parish and 696 in the ecclesiastical parish.

CROSSMICHAEL is a parish and village in the poor combination and small debts court district of Kirkcudbright, with a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire Joint railway and is 5 miles north-east from Lauriestone, 3¼ north-west from Castle Douglas, 91 south-south-west from Edinburgh, 19 south-west from Dumfries and 6 south-south-east from New Galloway, pleasantly situated on the east banks of the Dee, which river is crossed, about a mile and a half from the village, by an elegant stone bridge, over which passes the high road leading to Lauriestone. The parish lies nearly in the centre of the stewartry, having the Urr water on the east, and the Dee on the west. Two small lakes, which have an outlet to the latter river, furnish good perch and pike fishing. The parish church stands in the village, but of the cross from which the place derives its name there are now no remains. There is a hospital for infectious diseases, erected in 1904 for 21 patients, at a cost of £4,000. Greenlaw, in this parish, was formerly the residence of Robert, 4th Viscount Kenmure, who died in 1663 at the old fortress of Greenlaw, the remains of which still exist. Robert Gordon, son of William, 6th Viscount, who was beheaded on Tower Hill, 24th February, 1716, succeeded to the estate in 1737, and began the erection of the present house, which he had not completed at his death, 10th August, 1741. The estate of Greenlaw continued in the possession of the Gordons till 1880, when it was sold to John Ross Coulthart, of Ashton-under-Lyne, in the county of Lancaster, banker, but the present owners are the trustees of the late John Ross Coulthart McGuffie esq. Besides the remains of the old fortalice of Greenlaw, there are also in the parish the foundations of a monastery. The Barony Isle of the river Dee is said to have been a consecrated spot, where the Druids had a temple in the midst of a grove of oaks. There is also a Roman burying-place, several Pictish cairns, in which human bones have been found; and British encampments, near which stone weapons of various descriptions have been discovered. Mollance is the residence of John Neilson esq. D.L., J.P. and Auchendolly, of Col. Archibald Hume D.L., J.P. The trustees of the late John Ross Coulthart McGuffie esq. Lieut.-Col. Sir G. W. Abercromby bart. D.S.O. William Gillespie esq. Col. Archibald Hume D.L., J.P. the Misses Duncan and Mrs. Stewart are the principal landowners. The area is 9,934 acres; rateable value, landward, £13,247; burghal (Castle Douglas), £1,853; the population in 1911 was 1,196, of which 111 are in Castle Douglas town.

DALBEATTIE is a town, burgh and quoad sacra parish, locally in the parish of Urr, poor combination of Kirkcudbright and Castle Douglas small debt court district, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and is 87 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 13½ north-by-east from Kirkcudbright, 13 south-west from Dumfries, and 6 east from Castle Douglas, on the Dalbeattie burn, a tributary of the Water of Urr, which is here navigable for vessels of 150 tons. The harbour, called Dub-o'-Hass, is about five miles from the Solway Firth. The harbour and river are now under the care of the Urr Navigation Trust. The burgh has communication by sea with the western ports, and by railway with many large inland towns, and has also several considerable falls of water, which are utilized for the working of various paper, bobbin and corn mills, and timber sawing works; in the neighbourhood are granite quarries. The government of the burgh is vested in a provost, two bailies and six councillors, who are elected by the ratepayers of the three wards into which the burgh is divided under the General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862. A police court is held on the last Wednesday in each month. The town is lighted with gas. The Established church, in Craignair street, occupies a site presented by the late Mr. Maxwell, of Munches, and was built in 1879 at a cost of £3,876 (exclusive of the spire, erected by Mr. Maxwell), from the plans of Messrs. Kinnear and Peddie, architects, of Edinburgh, and opened 27th January, 1880. There are five stained windows in the apse, placed as memorials to Mr. Stewart, and the church affords about 850 sittings. The Congregational chapel (Mount Zion), was erected in 1866, and seats 350. The United Free church, Mill street, built in 1843, was rebuilt in 1882 in the Romanesque style, and affords 560 sittings. Christ Church (Episcopalian) is a Mission church, erected in 1875, in the Early English style, and will seat 164 persons. St. Peter's Roman Catholic church, erected in 1814, is in Craignair street. There are Conservative and Liberal clubs, and branches of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited. About four miles north-east from Dalbeattie are the ruins of Corra Castle, formerly the residence of Lord Herries, but now the property of the Maxwells, of Terregles. Mary, Queen of Scots, it is said, passed a night here after the battle of Langside Moor, 13th May, 1568. Three miles north-west is the moat of Urr. William Jardine Herries Maxwell esq. M.A., D.L., J.P. Miss E. M. Copland and Lawrie McKie Hutchison esq. are the principal landowners. Rateable value of burgh, £13,245; population in 1911, 3,553.

DALRY (or ST. JOHN'S) is a parish and village on the east bank of the river Ken, bounded on the north-east by Dumfriesshire and south-east by the Garple Burn, in Kirkcudbright poor combination and small debt court district, 9 miles north from Parton and 8 miles north from New Galloway stations on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire Joint line, 3¼ miles north of New Galloway, the same distance from Balmaclellan, and 24 north of Kirkcudbright. The southern portion of the district lies in a beautiful valley of rich arable land; the high grounds are pastoral, and graze considerable numbers of cattle and sheep. The village is surrounded with delightful scenery, and there is a good hotel (the Lochinvar). Water is supplied by gravitation. Here is an Established church and a United Free church. St. John's Public Hall was erected in 1858, at a cost of nearly £400, and enlarged and remodelled in 1887, at a cost of £700, and is used for public meetings, lectures &c.; there is also a Public Library, a golf course and a bowling green. In the churchyard is a stone erected to the memory of two Covenanters, with a long inscription in rhymed couplets. Fairs are held on the first Friday in July and in October. In the parish are several lakes; the largest, Lochinvar, covers an area of 50 acres, and within it stands the remains of an ancient castle, formerly belonging to the Gordons, Knights of Lochinvar, and subsequently, from 1633, Viscounts of Kenmure and Lords Lochinvar, but these titles became dormant on the death of Adam, 8th Viscount, 1 Sept. 1847. Charles William Forbes esq. John McTurk Alexander esq. Major Julian Oswald, Thomas McTurk esq. Col. John Murray Kennedy M.V.O., V.D., D.L., J.P. and the trustees of the late Augustus F. M. Spalding esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 34,503 acres; rateable value, £9,771; population in 1911, 807.

NEW GALLOWAY is a small town and royal burgh, in the parish of Kells, and poor combination of Kirkcudbright and in the small debt court district of Kirkcudbright, with a station 5 miles distant on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire Joint railway, 84 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 24 west from Dumfries, 18 north-east from Newton-Stewart, 14 north-west from Castle Douglas, 8 north-west from Parton and 20 north-north-west from Kirkcudbright. The town is pleasantly situated on the west bank of the river Ken, over which an elegant stone bridge of five arches was erected in 1821. The business of the place is confined to local handicraft. The burgh charter was conferred by Charles I. and the municipal government is vested in a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. The inhabitants attend the parish church of Kells. The Town Hall stands in the centre of the town, and has a public clock; there is also a reading room. A fair is held on the first Thursday in October. The population in 1911 was 352; area 107 acres; rateable value, £1,700.

GATEHOUSE is a modern town and burgh of barony, partly in the parish of Anwoth, but chiefly in that of Girthon, and is 6 miles south-by-east from Dromore station on the Portpatrick branch of the Caledonian system, 8 north-west from Kirkcudbright terminal station, 8 west from Tarff station on a branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway, 105 south-south-west from Edinburgh, 50 east of Portpatrick and 33 south-west from Dumfries. The town is charmingly seated at the head of Fleet Bay, in a romantic and fertile vale, embosomed by hills and lofty eminences, some of which are clothed with woods, interspersed with rich pasturage. The town is well and regularly built, the streets running in straight lines and crossing each other at right angles Gatehouse was erected into a burgh of barony in 1795, and is governed by a provost, magistrates and Town Council, under the "Town Councils (Scotland) Act, 1900." At the foot of the High street flows the river Fleet, which is here crossed by a good stone bridge, and at this point the river meets the tide, and becomes navigable for vessels of 60 tons burthen. The navigation was considerably improved by the late Mr. Murray, who, at a cost of £3,000, cut a canal in a straight line, which, besides deepening the river, reclaimed many acres of land, since which a commodious quay has been constructed. The exports of Gatehouse are principally grain, timber, and wood, and its imports lime and coal. There are some saw mills propelled by water power. Mines of lead and copper were some years since wrought to advantage, and specimens of copper from the Enrick mine, shown at the London Exhibition of 1851, were then pronounced to be the richest in Europe; the copper mine at Enrick and another near Drumruck have been recently worked, but without much success. In High street stands a square tower of grey granite 75 feet high, which had its origin in a sum of £30, left by Andrew Findlay, watch maker, in 1867, for the purpose of erecting a public clock; the tower was erected in 1871, at a cost of £300, raised by public subscription, and the fine clock was presented to the town by the late H. G. Murray-Stewart esq. D.L., J.P. at a cost of £160. The public hall, in High street, built at a cost of £1,400, contains a fine oil painting, by the late John Faed R.S.A. of Ardmore. The parish church of Girthon, erected in 1817, in place of an ancient church at the "Clachan" of Girthon, now in ruins, was greatly improved, and a new tower erected in 1898, at a cost of more than £1,000. There is also a Roman Catholic church, a masonic lodge, a library, and a reading room.

On a hill near the town stands a plain monument or column of stone, erected to Samuel Rutherford, an eminent Scotch divine for some years minister of Anwoth. The column, which overlooks the church where he preached, was struck and thrown down by lightning in 1847, but rebuilt soon after. The chief hotel is the Murray Arms, in which it is said Burns wrote the well-known "Scots wha hae." The market day is on Saturday, the cattle markets on the second Saturday, monthly; and the fairs are held on the Saturday before the 29th of June and the last Saturday in September. The population in 1911 was 1,032; rateable value, £3,067.

GELSTON (or GILSTON), see KELTON.

GIRTHON is a parish, in Kirkcudbright poor combination and small debts court district; bounded on the east by the Airie brook, north by the river Dee, and west by the Fleet water, it is 7 miles from Gatehouse station on the Portpatrick branch of the Caledonian railway, and 8 west-by-north from Kirkcudbright terminal station on a branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway. The parish church is locally in Gatehouse. There is also a Roman Catholic church. Barlay Mill, a short distance from Gatehouse, is the birthplace of the brothers Thomas Faed R.A. (1826), John Faed R.S.A. (1820) and James Faed, the well-known artists. There are traces of three Roman encampments in the parish of Girthon. Cally, the only mansion in the parish, is the property of the trustees of the late Col. J. W. Murray Baillie, who are lords of the manor, and is the residence of Lord Elphinstone D.L., J.P. The area is 33,369 acres; rateable value, landward, £6,081; burghal (Gatehouse), £2,616; the population in 1911 was 1,174; of this number 746 were in the town of Gatehouse.

KELLS is a parish, in the poor combination of Kirkcudbright and small debt court district of Kirkcudbright, and contains the town and railway station of New Galloway (which see); the parish is bounded east by the Ken water, north by Pulmaddy burn, and west and south-west by the river Dee. Loch Ken, which adjoins the town, is 4½ miles long and in many places more than a mile broad, and abounds with pike and perch. The parish church, built in 1822, and serving also for New Galloway, is an edifice of stone with a square central tower. In the churchyard is an ancient tombstone carved with the arms of the Coultharts and Macturks, and a monument to a covenanter. The ancient castle of Kenmure, which stands a short distance south, was once a place of considerable strength, and here, it is said, Mary Queen of Scots lodged one night, on her way from this country to England. John Seaforth Maitland Gordon esq. Charles W. Forbes esq. Vice-Admi. Sir Arthur John Henniker-Hughan bart. C.B., R.N. Lord Donington J.P. Col. John Murray Kennedy M.V.O., D.L., J.P. and Sir John Wood bart. M.A., M.P. are the principal landowners. The area is 48,521 acres; rateable value, landward £7,800; burghal (New Galloway), £1,700; the population in 1911 was 847, of which number 352 were returned for New Galloway.

KELTON is a parish, in the southern part of the county, bounded on the south by the parishes of Kirkcudbright and Tongland, and containing the greater part of the police burgh of Castle Douglas; it is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Kirkcudbright; from Castle Douglas, Kelton Kirk is 1½ miles south, and half a mile further south is the small village of Kelton Hill, or Rhonehouse. Gilston, or Gelston, is a village 3 miles south-east. The ruins of the ancient castle of Threave, formerly the stronghold of the Douglas family, stand on an island in the Dee, a mile north of Kelton. Gelston Castle is a modern mansion, formerly the residence of Sir William Douglas, founder of Castle Douglas. Carlinwark loch, south of Castle Douglas, is upwards of a mile in length, and has an area of 118 acres; it contains a number of small islands, and is plentifully stocked with pike and perch. The parish church, a plain structure with a belfry, affords about 520 sittings. The extensive horse fairs formerly held at Kelton Hill have been transferred to Castle Douglas. Edward Gordon esq. of Threave, Sir G. W. Abercromby bart. D.S.O. William Campbell esq. Major Francis William Maitland-Kirwan, Charles A. Phillips esq. Major Sir Charles Dunbar Hope-Dunbar bart. D.L., J.P. Lieut.-Col. John M'Kie D.S.O., D.L., J.P. and W. Robinson-Douglas esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 11,208 acres: rateable value, £30,596; the population in 1911 was 3,746, including 2,905 in Castle Douglas.

KIPPFORD, see COLVEND.

KIRKBEAN is a small parish and village, in Kirkcudbrightshire poor combination and in the small debt court district of Kirkcudbright; the village, situated in the northern part of the parish, about a mile from the sea, is 10 miles from Southwick (the nearest) station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 4½ south of New Abbey and 12 south-east from Dumfries. The parish is bounded on east and south by the Solway Firth. This little place possesses some notoriety, if not distinction, from having been the birthplace of John Paul Jones, a "sea adventurer," and a commodore in the United States navy, who was born 6 July, 1747, and was the son of the gardener at Arbigland; from 1775 to 1779, as captain of the "Providence," he did much damage to English shipping, and died at Paris, 15 July, 1792. The conspicuous mountain called Criffel stands partly within the parish and partly within that of New Abbey; there are also slight traces of the castles of Cavens and Wreath, both of which were the property and occasional residence of James, 4th Earl of Morton and Regent of Scotland, 1572-8. Southerness is a small village situated at the extreme point of the coast, which runs to the Solway Firth, and is resorted to for bathing purposes. On the point is a lighthouse. Carsethorn and Preston Mill are small hamlets also in this parish, both about a mile distant from the village of Kirkbean; the former is a favourite resort for bathers during the season. Major Julian Oswald and the trustees of the late Capt. William Burdett Blackett, who was killed at Ypres in November, 1914, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 8,938; rateable value, £8,983; population in 1911, 711 in the civil parish and 677 in the ecclesiastical parish.

KIRKCUDBRIGHT (G. Circ Cudbricht, Cuthbert's kirk) is a royal burgh, the capital of the stewartry, a parish and the head of a poor house combination, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 100 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 55 east from Portpatrick, and 28 south-south-west from Dumfries. The town occupies a peninsula on the east side of the Dee, about 6 miles from the confluence of that river with the Solway Firth, and is of considerable antiquity; it is regularly built, and consists of six or seven distinct streets, at right angles with each other, and the houses have a respectable and comfortable appearance. The harbour is the best in the south; at the ordinary spring tides the depth of water is 30 feet, and at the lowest neap tides 18 feet. The river is navigable for two miles above the town, to the Tongland bridge, designed by Thomas Telford, the famous engineer, and consisting of a single arch of 110 feet span. The iron bridge, erected across the Dee here during the period 1865-8 at a cost of £10,000, and opened 8 July, 1868, is of the bowstring lattice construction, and is 500 feet long by 23 feet broad, consisting of five fixed spans of 71 feet each, and a compound span of 98 feet, which latter turns on a cast iron cylinder filled with concrete, to allow of the passage of vessels of considerable burthen; on the parapets is a reproduction of the burgh seal, together with the names of persons concerned in the erection of the bridge. A small fort erected here by the lords of Galloway was afterwards superseded by a castle belonging to the Crown, and governed, with the town, by a constable. During the lord-hip of the Douglases in Galloway, Kirkcudbright became a burgh of regality under their influence, and on the forfeiture of their rights, James II. erected the town into a royal burgh by charter dated at Perth, 26th October, 1455. This grant was renewed and confirmed by Charles I. 20 July, 1633, and the burgh has since been under the government of a provost, two bailies, and fourteen councillors, with a treasurer and chamberlain. The Sheriff Court House, erected at a cost of £8,583, on the site of the old Stewartry building, under the Sheriff Court House Act, is a castellated structure with a tower in the centre; the old tower now stands in rear of the new building. On the ground floor are the offices of the procurator fiscal, the county clerk's office, and police office; the second storey contains the court room, seated for 150 persons, sheriff clerk's, sheriff substitute's and Justice of Peace clerk's chambers, faculty, library &c. From the old tower an extensive view is obtained of the beautiful environs of the town, including the ruins of the castle of Kirkcudbright, built about 1584 by Sir Robert Maclellan K.T. 1st Baron Kirkcudbright, a title which became dormant or extinct on the death of the 9th baron, 19 April, 1832. The former gaol and court house is an ancient and curious building, supposed to date from about the middle of the 16th century, and has a market cross on the outside stair leading to the tower. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. The Royal, Commercial and the Selkirk Arms are the principal hotels. The Established church, erected in 1838, is a building of stone, consisting of nave, transepts and a tower with spire, standing in the centre of a plantation, through which are public walks, and will seat 1,500 persons. A portion of the former church, erected in 1730, still remains, but is now used as a school. It contains a monument with recumbent effigy in fine preservation, to one of the Barons Kirkcudbright. The Church Hall was erected in 1891 at a cost of over £2,000. The Episcopal church of Grey Friars is a building of iron, erected in 1880 at a cost of £200, and containing nave, chancel, porch and vestry, and will seat 100 persons. St. Mary's United Free church, erected in 1872-3 on the former site, at a cost of over £5,000, is a building of whinstone, with red sandstone facings, in the Gothic style, with good traceried windows, and has a square tower, with spire reaching a height of 122 feet; there are sittings for 712 persons; attached to the church are a number of halls and various offices, the total cost of the whole being £7,000. The United Free church, in St. Cuthbert street, opened in 1880, at a cost of £3,300, will seat 400 persons. The Roman Catholic church of St. Cuthbert is in High street, behind the County buildings. The Johnston Free school is a building of stone, consisting of a central block, with wings and a tower. The Town Hall, erected in 1879, at a cost of £5,300, is a building of freestone in the Classic style, and contains a library, reading room and lecture hall. The Academy, re-organised in 1893, is now carried on as a higher class school, and recognised as the junior student centre for the stewartry; the building was remodelled in 1901 at a cost of £2,000 for the purpose of giving instruction in applied science. William Bruce M.A. rector. The Museum was erected in 1892, at a cost of £1,550. The market day is Friday. St. Mary's Isle, a beautiful spot, a mile from the town, and formerly the seat of the late Earl of Selkirk, is now the residence of Major Sir Charles Dunbar Hope-Dunbar bart. D.L., J.P. Balmae is now (1921) unoccupied. Major Sir Charles Dunbar Hope-Dunbar bart. D.L., J.P. and the town council of the burgh are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 12,280 acres; rateable value, landward, £12,612; burghal, £9,339; population in 1911, parish 3,116, burgh 2,205.

KIRKPATRICK-DURHAM

KIRKPATRICK-DURHAM is a parish and small village in the small debt court district of Kirkcudbright, 5 miles north from Castle Douglas station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire Joint railway, 85 south-south-west from Edinburgh, 14 south-east from New Galloway, 13 west-south-west from Dumfries and 7 east from Parton. The parish, which is skirted by the Urr water on its western side, on the north by Dumfriesshire, and on the south-east by Urr parish, derives its name from the old church, dedicated to St. Patrick, and from the Durham family, the ancient lords of the manor. The parish church, erected in the year 1848 on the site of the old church, is a building in the Gothic style, and has a tower. Auchenreoch Loch, a sheet of water about a mile in length, is partly in this parish. Mrs. Murray Dunlop, Robert K. Findlay esq. John M. Playfair esq. Mrs. John Adamson, George L. Fraser esq. R. M. Luke esq. James M'Queen esq. J.P. and James Bone esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. The parish, which is between 9 and 10 miles in length and about 4 in breadth, comprises an area of 18,249 acres, partly pastoral and partly arable, the former character prevailing in the north, the latter in the south of the district; rateable value, £10,090. The population in 1911 was 914 in the civil parish and 820 in the ecclesiastical parish.

OLD BRIDGE-OF-URR is a small village in the parish, 2 miles from the village of Kirkpatrick-Durham, on the banks of the Urr water.

KIRKPATRICK-IRONGRAY is a parish bounded on the north by the river Cairn or Clouden, which separates it from the parish of Holywood, in Dumfriesshire, on the east by Terregles, on the west by Kirkpatrick-Durham and Urr, and on the south by Lochrutton, and in the small debt court district of Kirkcudbright, occasional courts being held at Maxwelltown. Here are Established and United Free churches. In the churchyard is a monumental sarcophagus of Craigleith sandstone, erected by Sir Walter Scott bart. to Helen Walker, the prototype of Jeanie Deans, the heroine of the "Heart of Midlothian," who was a native of this parish, and whose remains are interred here; there is also a tombstone near the church to two martyrs, who were hanged for their religion, and on Skeoch hill is a granite monument, erected to commemorate the celebration of the communion by 3,000 Presbyterians, who objected to Episcopacy. A war memorial in the form of a runic cross has been erected in the churchyard to the memory of 16 men of the parish who fell in the Great War. The parish contains the village of Shawhead, which is about 7 miles west from Dumfries. Major Julian Oswald J.P. Maxwell Hyslop Maxwell esq. J.P., V.D. Major H. Keswick and J. C. M. George esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is a light loam; subsoil, gravel. Chief crops are oats, roots and turnips. The area is 13,655 acres; rateable value, £9,242; in 1911 the population was 594.

Post, Telegraph & Telephone Call Office, Shawhead; Miss Jane Kerr, sub-postmistress. Letters received from Dumfries. Crocketford is the nearest money order office, 4 miles distant LAURIESTON, see BALMAGHIE.

LOCHFOOT, see LOCHRUTTON.

LOCHRUTTON is a parish at the north eastern extremity of the stewartry, 5 miles south-west from Dumfries, its greatest length being 5½ miles and breadth 4½ miles; it is bounded on the north by the parishes of Kirkpatrick, Irongray and Terregles, east by Troqueer, south by Kirkgunzeon and west by Urr, and in the small debt court district of Kirkcudbright, occasional courts being held at Maxwelltown. At the base of a range of hills in this parish lies the village of Lochfoot, which is 2 miles north-west from Lochanhead station on the Castle Douglas and Dumfries section of the Glasgow and South Western railway, and has an Established church; the Lochrutton lake is a fine sheet of water, 1 mile long by half a mile broad, and provides the inhabitants of Dumfries and neighbourhood with an unfailing supply of water. On one of the hills here are the remains of a Druidical circle. Lady Ardwall is the principal landowner. The soil is of a light loam; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are oats, roots and potatoes. The area comprises 7,739 acres; rateable value, £8,210; the population in 1911 was 484.

MAXWELLTOWN is a burgh of barony and town in the parish of Troqueer, in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, and is divided from Dumfries town by the river Nith, over which are three bridges, one of which is an ancient structure coeval with the Franciscan Monastery, to which its bridge tolls once belonged. The observatory and the gaol are both in this suburb. Full particulars and lists of residents are given with Dumfries, Dumfriesshire.

MINNIGAFF is a large parish, in the western part of the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, 17 miles in length by 11 in breadth; it is bounded on the north by the county of Ayr and the parish of Carsphairn, on the north-east by Kells, south-east by Girthon and Kirkmabreck, and on the west by the river Cree, over which there is a bridge uniting it to the parish of Penninghame and the town of Newton Stewart. The parish is in the small debt court district of Castle Douglas, and has a station at Palnure, 3 miles south-east from Cree Bridge, on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire joint railway. There are Established and United Free churches. In the lower parts the land has been a good deal improved, especially towards the margin of the Cree, which is navigable for several miles and produces excellent fish of various kinds, including an abundance of salmon. The major portion of the parish is devoted to pasturage, and sustains large flocks of sheep and numerous herds of black cattle. The parish includes part of the town of Newton Stewart, Wigtownshire. Kirroughtree, the seat of Arthur C. Armitage esq. D.L., J.P. within a mile of Newton Stewart, but in the parish of Minnigaff, is beautifully situated on the side of a hill, surrounded by fine woods, and intersected by pleasant winding paths. Cumloden, the seat of the Earl of Galloway, is situated in a valley surrounded by well-wooded hills; it is noted for its beautiful display of rhododendrons in early summer, and contains a stream which furnishes excellent trout fishing. Palnure is a village with a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire Joint railway, and a small quay, near the confluence of the Palnure burn with the river Cree, 3 miles south-east from Newton Stewart and 4 north-west from Creetown. The area comprises 87,922 acres; the population in 1911 was 1,202.

Letters for Minnigaff are received through Newton Stewart

PARTON is a parish and village, in Kirkcudbright poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Kirkcudbright, and is bounded on the west by the Dee, the river Urr forming its eastern boundary; the parish extends from 6 to 7 miles in length, its breadth varying from 4 to 6. A large portion is hilly, especially in the northern quarter, but towards the Dee the land is flat and arable, and under cultivation: the village, which contains only a few houses, was practically rebuilt in 1901, by the late Mr. B. Rigby Murray. A drinking fountain has been erected to his memory, with a suitably inscribed tablet. There is a station here on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire Joint railway. The church was erected in 1834, and with the manse belonging to it is about 3 miles from Crossmichael. An obelisk of Dalbeattie granite was erected in 1921 outside the gateway to the church, as a memorial to the men of the parish who fell in the Great War. George Rigby Murray esq. J.P. and Mrs. R. A. Yerburgh are the principal landowners. The area comprises 15,813 acres; rateable value, £7,860; the population in 1911 was 593 in the civil parish, and 359 in the ecclesiastical parish.

RERRICK is a parish on the Solway Firth, in Kirkcudbright poor combination and is 6 miles south-east from Kirkcudbright (the nearest) station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The abbey church, many of the piers and arches of which are still standing, was a cruciform building with a central tower and spire rising to a height of 200 feet. The nave and choir were 120 feet in length, and on the south side of the church were the cloisters, enclosing a garth. The abbey afforded a temporary shelter to Mary Stuart during the last hours she spent in Scotland, after the defeat at Langside, 13 May, 1568, and previous to her embarkation for England. She arrived here in the evening, and spent her last night within the walls of the monastery. The spot where she took boat next morning for the English side of the Solway is at Burnfoot, the nearest point to the coast, situated in a little creek and surrounded by vast and precipitous rocks. Dundrennan is a small village in this parish, 6 miles south-west from Kirkcudbright station. The ruined Abbey of Dundrennan, the remains of which stand about a mile and a half from the sea, was founded by Fergus, Lord of Galloway, in the year 1142. John M'Dowall esq. J.P. and William Brown esq. are the principal landowners. The area is 20,005 acres; rateable value, £15,588; population, 1911, 1,293.

TERREGLES is a parish near the confluence of the rivers Nith and Cluden and 2½ miles west of Dumfries, in the small debt court of Kirkcudbright, occasional courts being held at Maxwelltown. The Maxwell Memorial Hall here, the gift of Mrs. Lloyd as a memorial to her late husband, was erected in 1906.

The abbey of Lincluden, the ruins of which occupy an elevated and sequestered site about a mile from Dumfries, was founded about the middle of the 12th century by Uchtred, eldest son of Fergus, Earl and Lord of Galloway, for nuns of the Benedictine order, and is assumed to have been colonised from the monasteries of Clugny or Marmoutier in France. The spot was anciently known as "Tir-eglwys" (Terra Ecclesia) now corrupted into "Terregles," but the name "Lincluden" signifies the "linn" or "pot" of the Cluden, a tributary of the Nith. In the autumn of 1174, Uchtred, the founder, was surprised in his castle at Loch Fergus by his brother Gilbert, and after being inhumanly tortured was put to death, but his mutilated remains, according to tradition, were interred within the abbey. In 1296, Alianore, prioress of Lincluden, did homage at Berwick-on-Tweed to Edward I. but in the 14th century, Galloway became the possession of Archibald, 3rd Earl of Douglas, and the abbey was shortly thereupon suppressed, the sisterhood expelled, and its endowments appropriated by this powerful chieftain, and the last prioress, Bianche, is believed to have died in 1440 at Dundrennan Abbey, where her tomb still remains. The Earl subsequently refounded the institution as a college for 12 canons and a provost, and erected new buildings, including a fine church, and he appears also to have liberally endowed his foundation, afterwards enlarged so as to consist of 8 prebendaries, 24 bedesmen and a chaplain; he died at Thrieve Castle, 3 Feb. 1400-1. Archibald, his son, 2nd Earl of Douglas and Duke of Touraine, married the Princess Margaret, daughter of King Robert III.: she died in 1440 and was buried with great pomp in the collegiate church, where her splendid tomb, though much mutilated, still remains. The college was eventually dissolved about 1565, Robert Douglas, the last provost, being pensioned, and the secularization of the college property was completed by the Annexation Act of 1587. The estates were subsequently granted to the Murrays of Lochmaben and to the Maxwells of Carlaverock Earls of Nithsdale, now represented by the Duchess of Norfolk. Of the original abbey, scarcely more than traces of its foundations now remain, but of the collegiate buildings, considerable portions are still standing, and include the choir of the church with the sacristy and provost's lodging on the north which formed part of the east side of a quadrangle adjoining the church on the north; there also remains the south aisle of the nave, with a transeptal chapel. The vaulting of the choir, entire in 1775, fell in at the beginning of the present century, and in 1851, a heptagonal tower, which stood south-west of the church, also fell, and the buildings were left to decay until, in 1882, Capt. Alfred Constable-Maxwell, the late owner of the Terregles estate, repaired the fabric generally at very considerable expense, and erected a cottage for the residence of a caretaker. During the process of clearing and excavating the site, various relics of much interest were recovered, including a portion of the panelled rood screen, with figures, the coffin slab of Alexander de Carnys, provost, c. 1410-13, and others. The splendid tomb of the Princess Margaret, highly enriched with carved shields of arms and ornamental work, remains on the north side of the choir, and during the work of renovation the recumbent effigy which once lay within it was recovered, though in a much mutilated condition; on the south side of the choir are sedilia and a piscina, and the interior of the church generally is much ornamented with heraldic shields and carved foliage. In later days, Lincluden was a favourite resort of the poet Burns, and beside its ruined walls he composed several of his pieces, including the "Vision of Liberty." Terregles House is the property of the Board of Agriculture for Scotland. The soil is a light loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are oats, roots and potatoes. The area is 3,828 acres; rateable value: landward, £5,314; burghal (Maxwelltown), £171; population in 1911, 439.

URR is a parish, a little to the north-east of Castle Douglas, in the Kirkcudbright poor combination, and is bounded on the north-east by the parish of Lochrutton, north by Kirkpatrick-Irongray and north-west by Kirkpatrick-Durham, and contains the town of Dalbeattie (which see).

HAUGH-OF-URR is a picturesque village on the east bank of the Water of Urr, and about 3½ miles north-east from Dalbeattie station on the Kirkcudbright branch of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. In the neighbourhood is a waterfall called Spottes Lynn, a ferruginous well, and a romantic glen, interesting both to the botanist and geologist. On the bank of the river, about a mile south-east of the village, is the Moat of Urr, an artificial mound, surrounded by elevated circles and supposed to have been used in primitive times as a place for public meetings. The Established church is a building of red freestone, erected on the site of an earlier church dating from 1815. In the village is a parish hall, which consists of a large hall and an ante-room which is used as a reading room.

CROCKETFORD (or Nine Mile Bar), a small village about 3 miles north-east of Kirkpatrick-Durham, on the Dumfries-Castle Douglas road, was begun towards the close of the 18th century by a sect known as the Buchanites, so called from their foundress and leader, Mrs. Elspeth Buchan, who established the sect about 1779, but died in May, 1791, when her followers were dispersed.

HARDGATE is a small village, half a mile from Haugh-of-Urr; it has a United Free church and public school.

SPRINGHOLM is a small village one mile east from Kirkpatrick-Durham, on the Dumfries-Castle Douglas road. In the neighbourhood is a woollen manufactory.

James Laurie M'Kie Hutchison esq. Lt.-Col. Charles Ffolliot Birney and William Jardine Herries Maxwell esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners.

The area comprises 15,429 acres; rateable value, landward, £13,229; burgh, £10,554; the population in 1911 was 4,536, with 3,357 in Dalbeattie burgh.

LANARKSHIRE

A POPULOUS county situated south of a line drawn from the Firth of Clyde to the Firth of Forth, and containing in its northern, or Lower ward, the City of Glasgow. At an early period this extensive district was, for convenience, divided into two wards, called the Over Ward and Nether Ward, Lanark being the chief town and seat of justice of the former, and Rutherglen of the latter; this arrangement was altered during the last century, when the county was divided into three wards, namely, the Upper, the Nether or Lower, and the Middle Wards, the chief towns being Glasgow, Lanark and Hamilton. The central part of the county throughout is termed Clydesdale, or the Vale of Clyde, from being the basin of that beautiful river. In the reign of James I. a portion of the county was made into the county of Renfrew. The three wards roughly correspond to the differences in the conformation of the country, as commencing from the south of the county the hilly portion may be said to correspond with the Upper Ward; the plain country with the Middle; the Lower or Northern Ward being the smallest, though having the largest population, as it includes the City of Glasgow. The county is bounded south by Dumfriesshire, west by Ayr and Renfrew, north by Stirling, east by Linlithgow, Edinburghshire and Peebles. Its extreme length (from south-south-east to north-north-west) is somewhat more than 50 miles, and its greatest breadth in the middle (from east to west) is about 34 miles; it includes within its area 8,794 square miles, 562,821 acres of land (of which 12,666 acres are in Glasgow City) and 4,170 of water. In 1891 the population of the county was 1,105,899. By Boundary Orders Nos. 137 and 140, under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict.), that portion of the burgh of Glasgow which up to 1891 was included in the county of Renfrew was transferred to Lanarkshire; the population in 1901 was 1,339,327. The population in 1911 was 1,444,034, including 784,496 in Glasgow City; males, 721,369, of which 381,304 were in Glasgow City, and females, 725,369, including 403,182 in Glasgow City. The inhabited houses in 1901 were 266,671; uninhabited, 11,862; building, 3,414. In 1911 the inhabited houses were 293,371, of which 163,057 were in Glasgow; uninhabited, 30,056, 20,903 in Glasgow, and building, 1,163, 487 being in Glasgow. In size Lanark is the tenth of the Scottish counties, and in population the first. Population in 1911, 1,447,113.

Early History.—Held by the Strathclyde Britons, it was in 79 overrun by the Romans, who built their wall between the Clyde and Forth just north of this county; in 410 the Britons resumed possession, but were ousted by the Irish Scots, who in their turn gave way to the Northumbrians. Throughout the arduous struggle for Scottish independence, Lanarkshire was the theatre of many military excesses. At a subsequent date the turbulence of the Douglases, with the intrigues of the first Lord Hamilton, involved Lanarkshire in the various calamities consequent upon intestine warfare; it subsequently became subject to a thirty years' civil commotion, stimulated by the prosecution of the more zealous Presbyterians of this district by Charles I.

Soil, Produce, Manufactures, Climate &c.—The upper division of the county is very mountainous; from Tinto, looking northwards, the face of the country shows only gentle elevations. The Upper Ward, which may be deemed three-fifths of the county, is mostly hilly and moorish; the Middle Ward, though esteemed a good agricultural district, is nearly one-third moss land. The Lower Ward is of very limited extent. The commencement of improvement in soil and cultivation in this part of Scotland was not apparent until about the middle or nearer the end of the 18th century; from this period draining, planting and inclosing took place.

The chief crops, as shown by the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1920," are:—Oats, 46,098 acres; wheat, 2,696; rye, 23; beans (to be harvested as corn), 117; total of corn crops, 49,316 acres; turnips and swedes, 9,810 acres; potatoes, 7,135; cabbage, 396; mangolds, 15; rape, 1,390; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. (for fodder), 675; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover 34,499 acres; pasture (not for hay), 34,395 acres; strawberries, 1,179 acres; raspberries, 33 acres; currants and gooseberries, 470 acres; others, including mixed areas, 171 acres; apples, 85 acres; plums, 71 acres; others, including mixed areas, 349 acres; bare fallow, 291 acres. The total area of land is 564,567 acres, of which 223,251 acres was mountain and heath land (used for grazing); permanent grass, 108,619 acres; 140,215 acres arable land.

The live stock in 1920 comprised:—Horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 6,256; stallions, 60; unbroken horses, one year and above, 1,544; under one year, 593; other horses, 1,291; cows in milk, 27,845; cows in calf, but not in milk, 5,116; heifers in calf, 4,396; bulls, 1,566; other cattle, two years and above, 11,345; one year and under two, 10,921; under one year, 9,495; ewes kept for breeding, 93,940; rams, 2,652; other sheep, one year and above, 33,363; under one year, 90,605; sows kept for breeding, 890; other pigs, 6,446.

Some flax is grown, which is spun by females, who dispose of the yarn in the markets of Lanark, Biggar, Carnwath and other places. In the neighbourhood of Carluke strawberries are also grown in abundance. The inhabitants of the inland and upland districts rear great numbers of black cattle and sheep, and the Clydesdale breed of horses is of a useful character. The climate, although varying considerably in different situations in the low-lying districts, in the vicinity of the Clyde is mild and temperate; but in the uplands in the south-south-west, and south-east the weather is more severe. In mineral productions Lanarkshire is, perhaps, the richest in Scotland. Gold, to an important amount, was, at an early period found in this county, and in later days, on the sides of a rivulet called the Wenlock, small pieces of that precious metal, in a pure state, have been picked up from among the sand and soil brought down by the torrents from the precipices and slopes of the mountains; particles of gold have also been found in Crawford Muir, with some large pieces of lapis lazuli. At present supplies of lead may be had in the parish of Crawford; and coal, ironstone, limestone, freestone, sandstone, whinstone, fire-clay and a variety of other metallic, mineral and fossil substances are to be obtained abundantly in different districts of the county. The lead mines belonging to the Earl of Hopetoun, at Leadhills, afford employment to a large number of workmen. Owing to the discovery of large quantities of bituminous shale, the manufacture of paraffin oil has been extending very rapidly in the neighbourhood of Airdrie, Lanark and other places.

In 1919, 12,893,210 tons of coal, valued at £15,807,739, was raised in Lanarkshire and 277,078 tons of clay. In 1919, 344,722 tons of coke was made at gas works and 184,941 tons at coke ovens, in the manufacture of which 1,170,318 tons of coal was used; lead ore, 1,896 tons, which gave 1,468 tons of lead and 5,688 ounces of silver.

The total number employed in 1919 in all mines and quarries was: underground, 48,420; above ground, 12,582; total, 61,002.

There are 10 iron works in the county, containing 67 blast furnaces, of which 41½ were in blast in 1919, producing (with the four furnaces of the Carron Co. at Carron, Stirlingshire) 598,822 tons of pig iron. The total iron ore used in the manufacture was 1,212,151 tons, and coal (including coal converted into coke), 1,125,705 tons.

There is also a large production of oil shale, the quantity raised in 1919 being 2,182,355 tons (including Linlithgowshire). The quantity of stone raised in the same time was 13,063 tons of limestone and 24,162 tons of sandstone; gravel and sand was raised to the extent of 202,254 tons; igneous rocks, 141,199 tons.

The fishing industry is small, the number of boats registered on Dec. 31st, 1918, at Greenock being 117, of 327 tons, and Glasgow 21, of 1,387 tons; of other vessels the number registered was, at Glasgow, 1,210, with an aggregate tonnage of 1,393,236, and Greenock, 164, of 195,263 tons.

The number of vessels built at Glasgow in 1918 was 40, net tonnage 112,393, and at Greenock, 10, 32,899 net tonnage.

The cotton goods, for which Glasgow is the market, are to a very considerable extent woven in different villages and parishes in the county, and this branch of manufacture supports a large proportion of the dense population; and there are extensive works in several places in the shire for the manufacture of pig and malleable iron and steel tubes and boilers, besides which there are large engineering, brick, tile and terra cotta, paper, and many and various other kinds of works.

Rivers, Mountains and Railways.—The principal river is the Clyde, which rises on the north of the watershed which separates Lanarkshire from the counties of Peebles and Dumfries. The chief tributaries are the Powtrail water, the Grook burn, and the Even and Elvan waters, Glengonar water and the Duneaton water. The Clyde flows in a longitudinal direction, in a winding course of more than 60 miles, dividing the county into two nearly equal parts, and ultimately falls into the Firth of Clyde opposite the Isle of Bute. It ranks amongst the largest rivers of Scotland, and is navigable for vessels of 1,000 tons as far as the City of Glasgow. The most prominent of the secondary rivers within the shire are the Douglas water, the Mouse, the Nethan, the Avon, the Calder, the North Calder and the Kelvin. There are other streams of less magnitude, as the Elwin, the Little Clyde, the Cotten and the Logan. The greatest elevations of this county, with their altitude above the level of the sea, are:—The Lowther Hills, 2,403 feet; Tinto, 2,335; Culter Fell, 2,454; Wintercleugh Fell, 1,804; Goodbush, 1,556; Dungavel, 1,502; Hagshaw, 1,540, and Hawkswood, 1,251. The railways consist of the main line of the Caledonian line which enters the county in the south-east and passing by Symington, where a branch goes off east to Biggar and Carstairs Junction, proceeds to Glasgow through Motherwell; at Carstairs Junction one branch goes north-east to Edinburgh, with a short branch from Auchengray to Wilsonstown, and another to Dolphinstone; a third proceeding south-west to Muirkirk, on the way to which it connects at Douglas with a line running through Lesmahagow and Ayr road—whence a branch goes to Stonehouse—to Hamilton, which is the centre for lines to Strathavon, East Kilbride and Pollokshaws on the west and Uddingston to the north; this latter line being continued through Shettleston to Glasgow; from the Muirkirk section is a short line to Lanark; from Motherwell, on the main line, a branch runs through Coatbridge and Gartsherrie to the north of Glasgow, and another from Law Junction to Airdrie. The Caledonian Company have also a line through Coatbridge to Stirling and the north. The North British enters the county a little west of Slamannan, and proceeds through Coatbridge and Airdrie (North) to Glasgow; also from Bathgate, through Caldercruix and Airdrie (South), to Coatbridge and Glasgow, and the same railway comes in at Lenzie Junction, and it works the Glasgow City and District railway to and from Maryhill, and has a line from Glasgow to Uddingston and thence to Hamilton. The Forth and Clyde Navigation canal and the Glasgow Union canal both pass through the northern divisions of the county.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Lanarkshire comprises (including the city parishes of Glasgow) 41 civil parishes and 86 entire and parts of 11 ecclesiastical parishes in the county and 69 entire and 13 parts of ecclesiastical parishes in Glasgow city, which are included in the Presbyteries of Hamilton, Lanark and Glasgow, in the Synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The county contains three royal burghs, Glasgow, Lanark and Rutherglen; four municipal burghs, Airdrie, Coatbridge (with the privilege of a royal burgh), Hamilton and Rutherglen, and five police burghs, Biggar, Govan, Motherwell, Partick and Wishaw. Previous to the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885," the county returned two representatives to the Imperial Parliament, but on the passing of that measure was apportioned into six divisions, and was given four additional members. Later, under the "Representation of the People Act, 1918," Lanark was again divided into seven divisions, each returning one member. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1919 was:—Bothwell division, 31,695; Coatbridge division, 31,593; Hamilton division, 28,682; Lanark division, 29,596; Motherwell division, 31,303; Northern division, 31,195; Rutherglen division, 33,478. Glasgow, which up to 1885 had sent but two members, was also separated into seven divisions, with the privilege of electing one representative for each, but under the latter Act, Glasgow was divided into fifteen divisions, each returning one member.

AIRDRIE is a market and post town and a burgh of barony, in the Middle ward, and a quoad sacra parish formed from the parish of New Monkland and including the villages of Clarkston, Rawyards and Drumgeloch. The town has stations on the Caledonian and North British railways, and is 18 miles north-north-east from Lanark, 32 west from Edinburgh and 11 east from Glasgow. The Monkland canal runs within a mile and a half from the town, which is regularly built and consists of several principal streets with smaller streets diverging from them; it is lighted with gas and electricity, and well supplied with good water by a public trust. The burgh is governed by a council consisting of a provost, four bailies, and ten councillors, with a treasurer and town clerk. The Municipal building has a tower and contains a clock. The County buildings are used for the sheriff court, held on Tuesday and Friday, and for the justice of the peace court, held on Monday and Thursday. The offices of the sheriff clerk, the clerk of the peace, the procurator fiscal and the superintendent of the county police are also in the building. The New Monkland parish council chambers, in North Bridge street, were erected at a cost of about £2,000. There are Established, United Free, Reformed Presbyterian, Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches. The Free Public Library, in Anderson street, erected at a cost of over £3,000, from the designs of the late G. Arthur, architect, of Airdrie, is an edifice in the Classic style, with Roman Doric pilasters, and contains general and ladies' reading rooms, library, lecture room and museum. The Sir John Wilson Town Hall, erected in 1912, at a cost of £14,000, was presented to the town by Sir John Wilson bart. D.L., J.P. The Public Park was the gift of the successive proprietors of Airdrie estate: the land required for the original formation was the gift of Alexander John Alexander esq. the owner of Airdrie estate. The original Airdrie Academy, situate on the south side of the town, is now utilised as an elementary public school, and has been re-named the Alexandra Public School. The old school was erected in 1848, at the sole expense of the then proprietor of Airdrie estate, Mr. A. J. Alexander, at a cost of upwards of £2,500. It was acquired by the School Board after the passing of the 1872 Education Act, and was enlarged in 1887. It was soon found, however, to be inadequate for the needs of the district, and accordingly the Board erected, at a cost of £8,000, a new school at Mavisbank, which was used for some years as a secondary school. This building in time proved insufficient for the growing needs of higher education, and in 1908 the School Board opened a new higher grade school, at a cost of over £13,000. The old building is now used for supplementary classes. Amongst the chief industries may be mentioned the extensive boiler and engineering works of Messrs. G. Inglis and Co. Limited, and the sanitary engineering works and brass foundry of John Spence and Sons; there are also other firms engaged in various branches of engineering and iron and brass founding, besides an extensive cotton mill, railway waggon works, and several coal pits. Hand-loom weaving, which at one time occupied a large number of hands, is now almost extinguished owing to the introduction of steam power. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the British Linen Bank, as well as a savings bank. The "Royal," formerly the principal commercial hotel here, is now used as municipal offices, and has been re-named Royal buildings. Fairs are held on the last Tuesday in May and the third Tuesday in November. The local newspapers are the "Airdrie and Coatbridge Advertiser" and the "Coatbridge Express," printed and published here weekly by Messrs. Baird and Hamilton Limited. Cairnhill is the residence of Mrs. A. K. McCosh. The area of the municipal burgh is 1,049 acres; rateable value, £121,903; population in 1901, 20,288 and in 1911, 24,388. The population of the wards in 1911 was:—First,

5,467; Second, 4,799; Third, 5,527; Fourth, 4,831; Fifth, 3,796. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was:—Airdrie, 13,190; Clarkston, 5,031; Flowerhill, 5,411. The population of the parliamentary burgh in 1911 was 17,288.

AUCHENGRAY, see CARNWATH.

AUCHENHEATH, s e LESMAHAGOW.

AVONDALE is a parish and village in the Middle ward and in Hamilton small debt court district, and contains the town of Strathaven: it is bounded on the east by the Kype water, on the south by Ayrshire, on the south-west by the Avon water, which flows through the centre of the parish, and on the north-west by East Kilbride. The battlefield of Drumclog (1 June, 1679) is in this parish. The reservoirs for the supply of the Middle ward of the county with water, begun in 1896, were completed at a cost of more than £250,000: the water is of excellent quality. The district, the air of which is pure and salubrious, is recommended by many medical men as a summer resort. The Duke of Hamilton is the principal landowner. The area is 37,570 acres; rateable value, £58,920; population in 1911, 5,033, including 3,494 in Strathaven Town.

BENHAR, see SHOTTS.

BIGGAR is a small town and burgh of barony and parish, in the small debt court district of Lanark; the town, situated on the road between Peebles and Lanark, has a station on the Symington and Peebles branch of the Caledonian railway, opened in 1858-9, and is 23 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 32 south-east from Glasgow, 16 west from Peebles, and 12½ south-east from Lanark. It consists principally of one spacious main street and was created a baronial burgh by charter of James II. to Sir Robert Fleming, of Biggar, created Lord Fleming, c. 1445; it is governed by a town council, and is lighted with gas by a company formed in 1839, and well supplied with pure water, conveyed from a source five miles distant. The parish is bounded on the east by Peeblesshire, west by the parish of Libberton, and north by Walston. The parish church is an ancient cruciform structure, in the Gothic style, enlarged and endowed in 1545, by one of the Flemings, lords of Biggar and Cumbernauld, as a collegiate church for a provost, eight prebends, four singing boys and six poor men, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary: the nave was probably built in the 12th or 13th century. There are also two United Free churches. The weekly market is held on Monday, and fairs in February and November, also on the eleventh day from the last Thursday in October (old style) and one on the last Thursday in July. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. In this parish there are some remains of Boghall Castle, once the feudal stronghold of the Fleming family, and the principal residence of the successive lords, until early in the 17th century, when John, 6th Lord Fleming, was advanced, 19 March, 1605-6, to the revived dignity of Earl of Wigtoun, a title which ceased on the death of Charles 7th Earl, but is perhaps only dormant. Its next possessors were the Elphinstones, through whose neglect it fell into decay. At a comparatively recent date its walls were pulled down, and the materials carried off to form drains and dykes in the neighbourhood. Tradition reports that an engagement took place near this town between the Scots, under Wallace, and the English army, when the Scottish leader drove the invaders into a morass, where most of them perished. The trustees of the late James Dennistoun Mitchell esq. D.L., J.P. the trustees of the late William Allan-Woddrop esq. D.L., J.P. and James Joseph Stenton Maclaren esq. are the principal landowners. The parish is 6 miles in length by 3½ in breadth, embracing 7,282 statute acres; rateable value, £8,908; population in 1911, 1,931, of whom 1,326 are in the burgh.

BISHOPBRIGGS, a large village and suburb of Glasgow, is in the parish of Cadder.

For further particulars and names see Glasgow section.

BLACKWOOD, see LESMAHAGOW.

BLANTYRE is a parish, in the north-western part of the county and Middle ward, about 6 miles in length, with a coast line to the Clyde of about 2 miles and a half; it is bounded on the east by the parish of Hamilton, south by Glassford and west by East Kilbride and Cambuslang, and is in Hamilton poor combination and small debts court district. The parish has two stations, Blantyre and High Blantyre, on different sections of the Caledonian railway, and contains three villages, High Blantyre, Low Blantyre and Stonefield, all situated in a rich and fertile district. High Blantyre, the first of these, is 8 miles south-by-east from Glasgow, and between 2 and 3 west-by-north from Hamilton, on the road between the last-named town and East Kilbride. Low Blantyre, rather more than a mile distant in a north-easterly direction, was originally built and owned by Messrs. Henry Monteith & Co. dyers, but that firm is now extinct and the village gradually falling into decay. David Livingstone, the distinguished African explorer and missionary, was born in a small house in this village, March 19, 1813, his father having kept a small shop at Hamilton, while he himself was employed in the mills; he was admitted a Licentiate in Medicine and Surgery in 1838, and his African labours and travels, in connection with Dr. Moffat, and his meeting at a later period with Sir H. M. Stanley G.C.B. extended from 1840 to 1872, after which Livingstone continued his explorations alone, but died at Illala, 4th May, 1873; his remains, carried to Zanzibar by his native servants, were transferred to England and interred in Westminster Abbey, 18th April, 1874. Stonefield, formerly a separate village, but now included in Blantyre, is entirely the creation of the coal trade, and is principally inhabited by the miners employed in the numerous pits in the neighbourhood, belonging to Messrs. Merry and Cuninghame Limited and Messrs. Dixon Limited; it was in one of the pits belonging to Messrs. Dixon, at High Blantyre, that the great explosion of 22nd October, 1877, took place, causing the death of over 200 men and boys. This place, from 1606, afforded the title of Baron to a branch of the Stewart family, but on the death (17 Dec. 1900) of Charles, 12th Baron Blantyre, the title became extinct. At Blantyre are Established and two United Free churches, a Parish hall and a Mission hall, and at Stonefield, Established and United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church, Congregational and Methodist chapels, a Gospel Hall and Salvation Army barracks. The Cottage Hospital was erected in 1910, at a cost of £3,000. Branches of the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited are established here. The ruins of Blantyre priory, founded early in the 13th century, stand on a rocky eminence on the south bank of the Clyde. At the Reformation, the priory was demolished, and its revenues, with the patronage of the parish church, given by James VI. to Walter Stewart, afterwards lord treasurer of Scotland, who was created, 10th July, 1606, Lord of Blantyre. South of High Blantyre, near the farm of Park, and in a very picturesque locality, is a spring strongly impregnated with sulphur; the water is of similar quality to that of St. Bernard's well, near Edinburgh; it was formerly much resorted to, and is still efficacious in the cure of scrofulous and scorbutic cases. William A. Baird esq. A. Millar Bannatyne, the trustees of the late John Craig esq. John Jackson esq. and the trustees of the late Col. J. Clark-Forrest are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,956 acres; rateable value, £80,928. The population in 1901 was 14,145, and in 1911, 16,821 in the civil parish and 9,056 in the ecclesiastical parish.

STONEFIELD is a quoad sacra parish. Population in 1911, 7,755.

BOTHWELL is a parish and ancient village in the Middle ward, and Motherwell poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Hamilton, about 9 miles south-east from Glasgow and 2 miles north-west from Hamilton, with stations on the Caledonian and North British railways. The parish is about 8 miles and a half long by 4 broad; the great roads from Edinburgh to Glasgow, and from Glasgow to Carlisle, passing through it; and besides the river Clyde, it is intersected by the two Calder streams, which are beautifully wooded. Bothwell bridge, which spans the Clyde, is famous in Scottish history as the scene of an encounter between the royalist forces under the Duke of Monmouth K.G. and a formidable army of Covenanters, on the 22nd of June, 1679, in which the latter were totally defeated. The barony of Bothwell was conferred, in 1482, on Sir John Ramsay; the subsequent Earldom was held from 1488 to 1569 by the Hepburns, and from 1581 to 1592 by Francis Stewart, who forfeited it by treason. The ancient church of Bothwell was founded by Archibald "The Grim," Earl of Douglas, in 1398, as a collegiate church, with an endowment for a provost and eight prebendaries. The present parish church, erected by the heritors of the parish, is a conspicuous edifice in the Gothic style. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. The "Clyde" is the chief hotel. The Kirkland Joint Mental Hospital, formerly conducted as a private asylum under Dr. Dean Fairless, was bought by the Glasgow District Board of Lunacy in 1878, and opened in 1881 as a district asylum for pauper patients, and contains over 200 beds. The James Donald Institute, opened in 1910, was a gift to the village by the late James Donald, of Bothwell. Bothwell Castle, the seat of the Earl of Home T.D., D.L., J.P. is a modern mansion standing in the midst of shrubberies and plantations, and near it, on an eminence, is the magnificent ruin of old Bothwell Castle, once an important Scottish fortress. Alexander Whitelaw esq. T.D., D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 13,595 acres; rateable value £306,016; the population in 1901 was 45,504, and in 1911, 54,891, of which 680 were in Motherwell burgh, and including 36 officials and 217 inmates of Kirkland Mental Hospital; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 17,021.

CARNBROE is a small village in the parish of Bothwell, a mile and a half from Coatbridge. The works in the neighbourhood afford employment to a large number of the inhabitants. The nearest railway station is at Whifflett, about a mile distant, on the Glasgow and Airdrie section of the Caledonian railway.

FALLSIDE is a hamlet in the parish of Bothwell, about 1 mile north-east from Bothwell village, with a station on the Carstairs Junction and Glasgow section of the Caledonian railway.

The parish also contains the townships of Holytown, Newarthill, Carfin, Mossend, Bellshill, Uddingston, Tannochside, Thornwood and Nackerty.

BUSBY, see EAST KILBRIDE.

CADDER is a parish, in the Lower ward, small debts court district of Glasgow, extending along the northern boundary of Lanarkshire, with Kirkintilloch and New Monkland on the east, New Kilpatrick on the west, Campsie on the north, and the parish of Glasgow on the south, and has stations at Garicosh, Garnkirk, Steps Road and Robroyston on the Caledonian railway, and at Bishopbriggs on the North British railway, and is about 5 miles north from Glasgow. The great canal between the Forth and the Clyde passes through the parish for 5 miles and the river Kelvin washes its northern boundary to the extent of 6 miles. There is an Established church at Cadder and Established and United Free churches at STEPPS. Coal has been found on the estate of Cadder, and coal and very valuable fire clay on that of Garnkirk. Cawder House is the property and residence of Brig.-General Archibald Stirling D.S.O., D.L.

CHRYSTON is a quoad sacra parish and a compact little village pleasantly situated on a considerable elevation about 6½ miles from Coatbridge, and has Established and United Free churches. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in mining and agricultural pursuits. The nearest railway station is at Garnkirk, over a mile distant. Population in 1901, 4,456, and in 1911, 6,851.

MOODIESBURN and AUCHINLOCH are also small villages in this parish.

GARTCOSH is a somewhat scattered village in this parish, about 4½ miles from Coatbridge, with a station on the Glasgow and Coatbridge section of the Caledonian railway. Here is the Episcopal Mission church of St. Andrew, attached to Baillieston. The population of the parish ward in 1911 was 2,080.

BISHOPBRIGGS is another village in the parish, 3½ miles north-east from Glasgow, with a station on the Glasgow and Edinburgh section of the North British railway. The population of the parish in 1911 was 3,071. For further particulars and names see Glasgow.

GARNKIRK is a village in the parish of Cadder, about 6 miles east-north-east from Glasgow and 3½ north-west from Coatbridge, with a station on the Glasgow and Coatbridge section of the Caledonian railway. The Heathfield and Cardowan Fire Clay Works Limited here form one of the largest manufactories of fire clay in Great Britain. The quality of the fire clay on this property is quite equal to that of Stourbridge in Worcestershire, and bricks, furnace blocks, retorts and crucibles are exported in large quantities to nearly all parts of the world. The manufacture of glazed pipes for water and sanitary purposes and of ornamental articles, such as chimney cans, vases &c. is also extensively carried on at this establishment.

MUIRHEAD is a small village about 6 miles from Coatbridge, lying between Garnkirk, which is the nearest railway station, and Chryston. The population is included with Chryston.

STEPPS is a quoad sacra parish formed 13th July, 1906, from Chryston and Hogganfield quoad sacra parishes. Population in 1911, 2,008.

Brig.-General Archibald Stirling D.S.O., D.L. Col. Sir Alexander Sprot bart. C.M.G., M.P., J.P., W. C. B. Christie esq. and the Corporation of Glasgow are the principal landowners.

The area of the entire parish comprises 13,963 acres; rateable value, £130,339; population of the civil parish in 1901, 10,474, and in 1911, 14,433, including 98 officials and 687 inmates of the Glasgow District Mental Hospital and in the ecclesiastical parish, 4,710.

CALDERCRUIX, see NEWMONKLAND.

CALTON, see GLASGOW.

CAMBUSLANG is a town and parish in the Middle ward, and small debts court district and poor combination of Hamilton; the parish contains the large mining villages of Hallside and Newton (which see), Flemington, Spittal Colliery, Newton Colliery, Westburn and Halfway, and is bounded on the east by the North Calder water, north by the Clyde, west by Carmunnock parish and south by East Kilbride parish; the town stands on the road from Glasgow to Hamilton, on the banks of the Clyde, and includes the suburbs of Kirkhill Coats, Silverbanks and Wellshott Hill; it has a station on the Glasgow and Lanark section of the Caledonian railway, and a station also at Kirkhill, and is 4 miles south-east from Glasgow; in 1872 it was supplied with water by gravitation. The "Auld Kirk," as it is termed, prior to the Reformation belonged to a prebend of Glasgow Cathedral; there was also at that time a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary; in 1565, the chaplain, Sir John Millar, made grants of certain property for its endowment, and these lands are still called "chapel lands." There is another Established church at West Cambuslang, besides United Free and Roman Catholic churches; the Episcopal church of St. Cuthbert is in Brownside road; the Rev. John Wattie has been in charge since 1919. There are also Baptist and Congregational chapels and a Plymouth Brethren Mission hall. There is a Cemetery at Westburn in this parish. The Cambuslang Institute and Library, started in 1885 under the name of the "Social Union," erected in 1891 at a cost of £3,000, has a library of upwards of 6,000 volumes. The inhabitants are for the most part engaged in the collieries and large iron and steel works of the neighbourhood. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Mercantile Bank of Scotland Limited. A penny newspaper is published here weekly. In the south-east portion of the parish lies the famous "Dechmont Hill," referred to by Sir Walter Scott in the lines:—"Wight Wallace stood on Dechmont Hill, and blew his bugle round, till the wild bull in Cadzow wood had started at the sound." The Duke of Hamilton, Allan Barns-Graham and J. B. H. Montgomery esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,146 acres; rateable value, £198,626; the population in 1901 was 20,211, and in 1911, 24,864.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was:—Parish church, 15,688, and West Church (formed from Cambuslang and Rutherglen), 5,619.

HALFWAY is a mining village.

FLEMINGTON, another mining village, lies close to Cambuslang town.

NEWTON COLLIERY, Spittal Colliery Rows, and Westburn are all hamlets in this parish.

CAMBUSNETHAN is a parish and village in the Middle ward, and in Cambusnethan poor combination; the village is about a mile east from Wishaw, with which burgh it is now incorporated. The parish is bounded on the east by Linlithgowshire and Edinburghshire, north by the Calder water, and south by Cambusnethan parish. The ancient parish church, now an ivy-grown ruin, has long been disused, but interments still take place in the graveyard, which has been greatly extended, and is tastefully kept. The present church is situate on Kirk Brae, in the burgh of Wishaw, and is a modern edifice with square tower. Here also is a United Free church. The staple trade of the district is coal, and upwards of one million tons are sent from Wishaw annually. Cambusnethan House is the seat of Alexander Campbell esq. C.B.E., J.P. and the property of Sir Robert Duncan Sinclair-Lockhart bart. The area of the parish is 16,556 acres; rateable value, landward, £111,111 (1920); burghal (Wishaw) (1920), £94,612; the population in 1901 was 25,871 and in 1911, 33,912, which includes 6,127 in Newmains and 19,336 in Wishaw. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 6,783.

BONKLE is a village in Cambusnethan parish, 3 miles east from Wishaw and has a United Free church. The nearest railway station is at Newmains, on the Holytown and Morningside section of the Caledonian railway, one mile distant. Population returned with the parish.

CARLUKE (formerly a burgh of barony) is now a small town, and is a parish in the Upper ward, small debt court district of Lanark, with a station on the Caledonian railway, 32 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 20 south-east from Glasgow, 10 south-east from Hamilton, and 5 north-west from Lanark. The parish is bounded on the east by Carstairs parish, south by Lanark parish, west by the river Clyde, and north by the parish of Cambusnethan. The town contains several regular streets, Kirkton street, High street and Hamilton street, each having a number of fine stone buildings, and the shops are lighted with gas. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches, an Original Secession church, Congregational and Baptist chapels and two Mission halls. The Rankin Memorial hall, in High street, is a modern building erected on a site given by James Brownlie esq. Glasgow, who also contributed £1,000 towards the erection. The district is rich in coal, ironstone and limestone, all being of the best quality. The trade of the town and neighbourhood is chiefly confined to mining and agriculture. The banks of the Clyde have long been famous for the culture of fruit trees. Apples, pears, strawberries and gooseberries are produced in great abundance, and in higher perfection in this district than in any other in Scotland. The growing of strawberries and tomatoes now form prominent features in the industry of the district. A large portion of the produce is usually purchased by preserved fruit manufacturers, and great quantities are also forwarded to Glasgow. There are branches here of the British Linen Bank and the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and there is also a Savings Bank. There are also two steam corn mills, two steam saw mills, several brick works, a preserve factory, two engineering works, an iron foundry, two timber merchants, cabinet makers' works and a newspaper. The drill hall and armoury in Market road was erected for the Volunteers in 1895. There is a tuberculosis hospital at Roadmeetings, under the control of the County Council of the Upper Ward of Lanarkshire. Major-Gen. William Roy, an eminent mathematician, employed on the ordnance survey of Scotland and Great Britain, was born in this parish, 4th May, 1726, and died 1st June, 1790. Major Weir (the Wizard) was born, 1599, at Kirkton. A cattle show is held here yearly in June. Mauldslie Castle is the seat of Lord Newlands, and Milton Lockhart, of Mrs. Lockhart. The principal landowners are Lord Newlands, Lord Lamington G.C.M.G., G.C.I.E. Mrs. Lockhart, Major James Stevenson-Hamilton D.L., J.P. the Earl of Home T.D., D.L., J.P. and the trustees of Sir Windham Frederick Carmichael Anstruther bart. who is a minor. The parish has an area of 15,313 acres; rateable value in 1920 was £69,437; population in 1901, 8,966, and in 1911, 9,619 in the civil parish and 7,751 in the ecclesiastical parish.

BRAIDWOOD is a small village in the parish of Carluke, 2 miles south-east from the town, and about half a mile to the right of the road to Lanark. Here is a steam saw mill and brick and tile works. Braidwood House, the property of Col. James Stevenson, is a handsome mansion of stone, and about half a mile nearer to the Clyde are the remains of a fortified structure, apparently of the eleventh and twelfth centuries, known as "Hall Bar," and consisting of a tower and keep in good preservation; it was thoroughly repaired some time since. Besides Braidwood there is a hamlet of Kilncadzow, at which place there is a public school. Population in 1911, 986.

CARMYLE, see OLD MONKLAND.

CARNBROE, see BOTHWELL.

CARNWATH is a parish, small town and burgh of barony, on the main road between Lanark and Edinburgh, with a station on the Edinburgh and Carstairs section of the Caledonian railway, and is in the Upper ward, and the small debts court district of Lanark, 25 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 30 south-east from Glasgow, 7 north-west from Biggar, and the same distance east from Lanark. It consists of one street, nearly three-quarters of a mile in length, in the middle of which stand the tolbooth, a plain old building, and in front of it an obelisk, on which the distances from Edinburgh to various places in Clydesdale and Ayrshire are indicated. This place, since 1628, has given the title of Earl to the Dalzell family; the peerage was forfeited by the 6th Earl, in 1715, but was restored in 1826 to Robert Alexander Dalzell, who then became 7th Earl of Carnwath. Carnwath estate is held of the Crown, on payment of a pair of red hose, which are run for annually on the day succeeding the August fair, and followed by athletic games, to the successful competitors for superiority in which are awarded medals and prizes in money. The remains of the ancient church stand at the west end of the town, and a portion of the building is used as a sepulchre for the Lockhart family: it contains the remains of the Somervilles, former lords of the manor, and includes a tomb of the 15th century, with the effigy of one of these in complete armour, and another of his wife in the costume of the period. Close to Carnwath House and adjoining the Gallows' Hill is an old sepulchral mound. The present church, erected in 1866, on the site of the former one, erected about 1798, is a building of freestone, in the Gothic style, and will seat 1,000 persons. There are also United Free churches. About a mile to the north-west of Carnwath are the scattered ruins of Cowthally Castle, in former ages the seat of the Somervilles. Carnwath House is the seat of Lady Macdonald Lockhart. In one of the rooms here Prince Charles Edward remained for two entire days on his retreat from Derby to Culloden in 1746. Kersewell is the residence of Frank Warrack esq. J.P. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late Col. Sir S. M. Lockhart bart. William Bertram esq. Lieut.-Col. Robert J Logan J.P. James Hamilton esq. and John Purdie-Somerville esq. J.P. The parish is bounded on the east by Dunsyre parish, north by Edinburghshire, west by the Mouse river, and south by the river Medwin. The area is 30,468 acres; rateable value, £50,308; population in 1911, 6,446 in the civil parish and 3,741 in the ecclesiastical parish.

AUCHENGRAY, 6 miles north-east of Carnwath, is a village with a station on the Caledonian railway. BRAEHEAD is a village 3 miles north.

CARSTAIRS is a parish and small village, in the Upper ward, small debts court district of Lanark, on the road from Edinburgh to Lanark, about a mile east from Carstairs Junction on the Caledonian railway, 4 north-east from Lanark and 3 west of Carnwath. The Mouse water flows through the centre of the parish, which is bounded on the east by Carnwath parish, south by the river Clyde, west by Lanark and Carluke parishes. The three fairs formerly held here, having gradually declined, are now altogether discontinued. From the number and magnitude of the architectural and other Roman remains which have been discovered here, it is assumed that the place must have been one of importance during the Roman period. There is an Established church. Carstairs House is the seat of Sir John Westall King bart. J.P. The principal landowners are Sir John Westall King bart. Mrs. M. C. Eliott-Lockhart, Lady Lockhart, Major Basil Monteith, tutors of Miss Elspeth Henderson-Hamilton and Miss Henderson-Hamilton. Acreage, 9,818; rateable value, £16,900; population of the parish in 1911, 1,678.

CARSTAIRS JUNCTION is a village in the civil parish of Carstairs.

COATBRIDGE is a populous town and municipal burgh in the parish of Old Monkland, as altered by order of the Secretary of Scotland, and in the Middle ward and small debt court district of Airdrie, on the Glasgow and Edinburgh road, with stations on the Caledonian and North British railways, 8 miles east from Glasgow and 2 west from Airdrie. The burgh includes the quoad sacra parishes of Coatdyke, Coats, Dundyvan, Garturk and Gartsherrie, in Old Monkland parish, and is divided into five wards. The Monkland canal passes through. There are four Established and seven United Free churches, three Roman Catholic churches, and an Evangelical Union church. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, built in 1843, will seat 368 persons; the rectory, net value £250, has been held since 1919 by the Rev. John Arnold Towers B.A., B.Sc of Durham University; there are also Baptist, Congregational and Wesleyan chapels, two Mission halls, and Salvation Army barracks. The Municipal Buildings, at the top of Dunbeth road, form a fine stone structure, elaborately fitted and furnished and including a Town Hall. The Technical School was erected by the Monkland School Board, at a cost of about £7,000, and opened in 1891. The Theatre Royal, a substantial building of stone, is open from August to May and will hold 2,000 persons. The Institute at Gartsherrie, erected at a cost of £5,000, was the gift of William Weir esq. of Kildonan, and is a building of stone, containing spacious reading and billiard rooms, swimming and private baths. The Alexander Hospital, at Blairhill station, erected by the late John Alexander esq. first provost of Coatbridge, at a cost of £9,000, and opened in March, 1899, is intended for the reception of accidents of all kinds; it contains male, female and private wards, and is fitted with all the latest improvements needed for such an institution. The building was designed and carried out under the supervision of Mr. Alex. McG. Mitchell, architect, of Coatbridge. The Carnegie Free Public Library, in Academy street, is a substantial building with reading rooms and a reference library and an office now (1921) used by the War Pensions Committee. The Stewart Institute, situate in the main street, was erected by the Stewart family, and handed over to the Town Council; it comprises billiard, reading and recreation rooms. At Gartsherrie, Calder, Carnbroe, Langloan and Summerlee are iron works on an extensive scale, affording employment to large numbers of the inhabitants. Coatbridge is an important centre for the manufacture of iron tubes, malleable iron and steel, and there are several large engineering and iron founding establishments. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Coatbridge branch of the Airdrie Savings Bank. Drumpellier House is the residence of Lieut.-Col. Arthur Louis Hamilton Buchanan M.P.; Douglas Support (Rosehall), the seat of the Hon. Barrington S. Douglas-Campbell-Douglas is a mansion of stone in the Scottish baronial style, in an estate of about 1,600 acres, and is beautifully situated on the banks of the North Calder. The house is surrounded with undulating and well laid out pleasure grounds of about 100 acres, richly timbered and containing some very fine beech trees, and a "Weeping Hornbeam," believed to be the only specimen of its kind known. The residence can be traced back to the early 17th century, when it originally formed part of the estate of Dalziel, and was purchased by Margaret, Duchess of Douglas, who, by her testament, left the estate to Archibald Douglas, of Mains, Dumbartonshire, from whom the present holder is directly descended. Coal is the chief mineral worked. The area of the burgh is 1,845 acres; rateable value, burghal, £273,384; landward, £134,328. The population in 1901 was 36,991, and in 1911, 43,286, including 262 inmates (of whom 50 were in the mental wards) and 23 officials in Old Monkland Poorhouse.

The population of the wards in 1911 was:—First, 6,592; Second, 8,242; Third, 7,472; Fourth, 9,473; Fifth, 11,507.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was:—Coatdyke, 6,177; Coats, 5,478; Dundyvan, 9,195; Gartsherrie, 16,223; Garturk, 6,234.

COULTER (or Culter) is a parish and village, in the Upper ward and small debt court district of Lanark, 3 miles south from Biggar and 11 south-east from Lanark, with a station, called "Coulter," on the Symington and Peebles branch of the Caledonian railway. The parish is traversed by the Culter water, and bounded on the extreme north-west by the river Clyde and on the east by Peeblesshire. There are Established and Free churches, and in the village is a reading room with a library of 1,800 volumes, erected by the late Alexander Kay esq. of Cornhill, on a site given by the late R. G. Baillie esq. of Culter Allers. Agriculture and sheep farming appear to be carried on extensively. The trustees of the late Robert G. Baillie esq. and Mrs. Jane A. White are the principal landowners. The parish of Culter, which contains an area of 10,187 acres, is now wholly situated in Lanarkshire; rateable value, £13,081; population in 1911, 372.

DOUGLAS is a parish and village, in the Upper ward and small debts court district of Lanark, on the south side of the Douglas water, and on the road from Edinburgh to Ayr, with two stations, viz., Douglas, 4 miles north, and Douglas West, 1¼ miles north-west, both on the Lanark and Muirkirk section of the Caledonian railway, 41 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 31 south-south-east from Glasgow and 12 south from Lanark. The parish, which extends on the west to Ayrshire, is well watered, for besides the Douglas water there are three minor streams which fall into it, previous to its junction with the Clyde about 7 miles below the village which consists of several narrow irregular streets, and is well lighted with gas. Near the centre, and within a burial ground, stand the remains of the ancient parish church of St. Bride, which contains monuments of some of the great chiefs of the house of Douglas. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch here. The parish abounds in limestone, freestone and coal. Near the village, on the bank of the river, stands Douglas Castle, the residence of the Earl of Home T.D. The old castle was burned down in 1760, and the present edifice was begun in 1761, from designs by Robert Adam, the distinguished architect. The Earl of Home T.D. and John Paterson are the principal landowners. The parish has an area of 34,165 acres; rateable value, £32,484; population, 1911, 2,509.

RIGSIDE is a small village in the parish of Douglas, and 4 miles north-east from Douglas village, on the road from Edinburgh to Ayr. The old village has been practically cleared away, and most of the houses pulled down. A new village of one hundred and fifty-eight houses has been erected near Ponfeigh station by the Coltness Iron Co. Limited, for their workmen in their extensive collieries, and it also abounds with rich and productive beds of ironstone, limestone and fireclay. The United Free church, with manse attached, was built in 1885, at a total cost of about £1,300, and is an edifice in the Gothic style, seating about 200.

GLESPIN is a village in this parish, with a station at Inches on the Lanark and Muirkirk section of the Caledonian railway.

GLENBOIG (or GARNQUEEN) is a village, in the parishes of Cadder, New Monkland and Old Monkland, and in the Lower ward and small debt court district of Airdrie, about 3 miles north from Coatbridge, with a station on the Caledonian railway. Here are Established Mission and United Free churches and a Roman Catholic chapel. Here are the extensive works of the Glenboig Union Fire Clay Co. Limited. Glass sand is manufactured at GARTVERRIE, half a mile distant, and coal is plentiful. At Robroyston, in 1305, Sir William Wallace was betrayed to Edward I. by Sir John Monteith, who, according to tradition, was bribed by the English court. David William Ramsay Carrick-Buchanan esq. is the principal landowner.

HAMILTON

HAMILTON is an ancient town and parish, the head of a poor law combination and small debt court district, and the chief town in the Middle Ward of the county, with stations on the Caledonian and North British railways, 37 miles west-by-south from Edinburgh, 10½ south-south-east from Glasgow, 15 north-west from Lanark, 8 south from Airdrie and 7 north from Strathaven. The town lies along the base of a rising ground, extending nearly a mile in length, and consists of several streets of substantial, well-built houses, including a new thoroughfare forming a continuation of the London road, and crossing the ravine, dividing the old and new towns, which are connected by Cadzow bridge, widened and improved in 1903; the town is lighted with gas and electricity and supplied with water from works belonging to the Town Council. It was erected into a burgh of barony in the 15th century by one of the Hamiltons, lords of Cadzow; Queen Mary created it a royal burgh in 1548, but the rights and privileges thus acquired were afterwards resigned into the hands of Anne, Duchess of Hamilton who, in 1670, restored to the community its former franchises, and erected it into a burgh of regality dependent on herself and her successors. It was a Parliamentary burgh, and in connection with Lanark, Airdrie, Falkirk and Linlithgow, it formed the Falkirk Parliamentary district, constituted by the "Reform Act of 1832," and returning one member. It is now, under the "Representation of the People Act, 1918," included in the Hamilton division, returning one member to Parliament. Under the "Municipal Corporations (Scotland) Acts" (3 and 4 William IV. c.c. 76 and 77) the government of the burgh is vested in a provost, four bailies and ten councillors. The magistrates and justices of peace hold regular courts for the trial of minor offences.

The parish church was made collegiate in 1451, by Sir James Hamilton, for a provost and prebendary. There are also three other Established churches, seven United Free churches, two Roman Catholic churches, Baptist, Congregational and Primitive Methodist chapels, and several Mission halls. The Episcopal church of St. Mary the Virgin, built in 1849, will seat 396 persons; the Rev. Edward Archibald Forbes M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, has been rector since 1910.

The Old Grammar School of Hamilton was founded by the ducal family of Hamilton early in the 16th century. It stood near the old churchyard, adjoining the present palace, and was endowed by Lord John Hamilton in 1588 with £20 Scots. In 1714 Anne, Duchess of Hamilton, built a school (now called the Old Grammar School), endowing it with an annual sum of £11 2s. 4d the Town Council being the sole managers. The present school, erected in 1848 by the Town Council, the heritors of the parish of Hamilton, and subscribers was then called the "Hamilton Academy." In 1866 the subscribers handed over their interest in it, on certain conditions, to the Town Council, who, with the heritors, continued to be the governing body till 1872, when, by the Education (Scotland) Act of that year, it was transferred to the burgh school board, who, in 1876, erected it into a higher-class school; in 1890 various alterations and extensions were made to the buildings, but in 1898 these were unfortunately wrecked. A new school was built in 1913 at a cost of £53,000.

The Municipal Buildings, completed in 1915, are in Cadzow street, and were erected from designs prepared by Messrs. Cullen, Lochhead and Brown, local architects; the buildings accommodate all the officials of the burgh. The Council chamber and committee rooms for the Council are also provided and are beautifully fitted and finished. The cost of the buildings was £12,000, and these were opened by His Majesty the King on 9th July, 1914. The Public Library buildings adjoin the Municipal buildings.

The Town Hall is a building in the Classic style and is situated at the New Cross. It was built in 1861, and was enlarged in 1888.

The Post Office is in Brandon street. The district offices, in Beckford street, adjoin the County Buildings, and were erected for the district of the Middle Ward, and contain offices for the district clerk and treasurer, district engineer, sanitary inspector, water engineer, buildings inspector, medical officer of health, housing and road surveyor and town planning engineer.

The Victoria Hall, in Quarry street, erected in 1887, at a cost of £4,000, is an edifice of red freestone, and the main hall will hold 1,500 persons.

There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Mercantile Bank of Scotland Limited and North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited.

The weekly market for Hamilton is held on Friday. The hiring and cattle markets are held on the third Friday in April and the third Friday in October; and the annual cattle show in the month of June.

There is a hospital, in Muir street, for four old people, endowed by the late Mr. Aikman, of Ross. To the west of the town, on the road to Bothwell, are barracks.

At the junction of Muir street and Cadzow street stands a fountain which has been presented to the town by Sir John Watson bart. of Earnock; it is of Aberdeen and Peterhead granite, from designs by Mr. Gavin Paterson, of Hamilton, and consists of an octagonal base, from which rise eight columns of polished Peterhead granite, carrying a circular ogee-shaped dome. There are four recessed drinking basins, and the remaining sides are filled in with bronze panels, two ornamented with heraldic devices and one containing a medallion portrait of the donor. In the centre of the base, under the dome, is a bronze figure representing Industry. The total height is 22 feet.

In August, 1895, a public park of 23 acres was presented to the burgh by the late Duke of Hamilton K.T. (d. 1895), and in 1907 it was enlarged by 9 acres, the gift of James Dixon esq. of Bothwell.

The Liberal Club, in Brandon street, built in 1892, contains reading and billiard rooms, and an assembly room for meetings, dances &c.

The Public Library, erected in 1907, at a cost of £15,000, and gifted to the burgh by the late Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle, contains lending and reference libraries, reading and recreation rooms, a lecture hall and ladies' reading room; there are over 16,000 volumes. Public Baths and Washhouses were erected by the Corporation in 1909 at a cost of £11,000. Electric tramways now run through the town and connect it with Motherwell, Wishaw and Newmains, Bothwell and Uddingston and Larkhall, and to Blantyre and Cambuslang, in connection with Glasgow.

Hamilton Palace, belonging to the Duke of Hamilton, with its surrounding park and pleasure grounds, magnificently wooded, covers an area of about 1,400 acres; the palace is a stately mansion in the Renaissance style. The furniture and interior fittings have been removed and disposed of; only the structure now (1921) remains. The mausoleum in the palace grounds, in which lie the remains of various members of the Hamilton family, is a magnificent structure, erected at a cost of £160,000, and has bronze doors, richly ornamented. At the entrance to the vaults above the doorway are two colossal lions, each sculptured from a single block of stone, and the keystones of the arches are carved with symbolic figures of Time, Death and Immortality. In the middle of the great park, one mile from the town, on a rock overhanging the Avon, stand the ruins of Cadzow Castle, the ancient manor house.

Cadzow wood, or forest, in this parish, is the home of a famous breed of wild, white cattle, and it is said to be a condition appendant to the title of Duke of Hamilton that the breed should be maintained in this forest.

In the vicinity of the town is Barncluith, the seat of William C. Bishop; Earnock House, the seat of Lady Watson; Neisland, that of T. W. Watson esq. the Ross estate, owned by Col. Thomas S. G. H. Robertson Aikman D.L., J.P. and Udston estate, owned by the Corporation, and now used for hospital purposes.

The Duke of Hamilton, the Town Council and Lady Watson are the principal landowners, the former being the lord of the manor. The parish of Hamilton embraces an area of 13,129 acres; rateable value, landward £128,826, burghal £195,981; the population in 1901 was 40,372 and in 1911, 46,419. The area of the burgh is 1,332 acres; population in 1901, 32,775 and in 1911, 38,644, and of the Wards:—First, 8,145; Second, 7,224; Third, 7,788; Fourth, 5,685; Fifth, 9,802.

Included in the total population was 365 military and 169 other occupants in the barracks and 215 inmates and 19 officials in the Poorhouse.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was, parish church, 16,577 and Quarter, 2,070.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1920-21 was 16,377 in the burgh and 27,239 in the division. The number of municipal electors in 1920-21 was 13,559.

EAST KILBRIDE is a burgh of barony, village and parish, in the Middle Ward, Hamilton poor combination and small debt court district; the village, on the road from Glasgow to Muirkirk, is 8 miles south by road from Glasgow and 10¾ by rail, between 6 & 7 west from Hamilton and 45 west-by-south from Edinburgh, and has a station on the Glasgow and East Kilbride branch of the Caledonian railway; there are also three other stations in the parish, viz.: Busby, 4 miles north-west; Thornton Hall, 3, and Hairmyres 1¾ west from the village. The parish, which comprehends the abrogated parish of Torrance, contains some extensive lime works, and coal also lies beneath the surface. Under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," boundary orders 75 and 137, a part of the parish of Cathcart has been transferred to East Kilbride. There is an Established church and two United Free churches. Kilbride has produced several eminent men, among whom are Dr. William Hunter M.D., F.R.S. born 23 May, 1718, died 30 March, 1783, and his brother, John Hunter F.R.S. the celebrated anatomist and physiologist, born 14 July, 1728; he was at first a student at Chelsea Hospital and subsequently for some time a member of St. Mary Hall, Oxford, and his portrait hangs in the old dining hall there, now, with the other buildings of the Hall, forming a part of Oriel College, Oxford; he died 16 Oct. 1793, and an oration in his honour is annually delivered at the Royal College of Surgeons, in London. The cattle show, which is held on the first Friday after the 10th of June, for Clydesdale horses and Ayrshire cattle, is the only fair that takes place in East Kilbride. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. Busby is a village and railway station at the north-western extremity of the parish, partly in this county, but chiefly in Renfrewshire. The principal landowners are the Scottish Wholesale Co-operative Society Limited, Lady Sophia C. Allenby Montgomerie and William C. Stirling-Stuart esq. The area comprises 23,677 acres; rateable value, £55,344; population in 1911, 3,977 in the civil parish and 3,241 in the ecclesiastical parish.

LANARK

LANARK (W. llannerch, a clearing in a forest) is a royal burgh, market town, the seat of a presbytery, and the chief town in the Upper ward, the head of a poor-house combination, and a parish on the main road leading from Stirling to Carlisle, one mile above the left bank of the river Clyde, with a station on a branch of the Caledonian railway connecting the burgh with the main line at Carstairs, and affording easy communication with Edinburgh and Glasgow, and also by a direct route with Ayr on the west; it is 32 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 25 south-east from Glasgow, 15 south-east from Hamilton, 35 from Stirling, 47 from Ayr, and 12 north-west from Biggar, and may be considered as the centre of the Lowlands. The parish is bounded on the east and south by the river Clyde, and on the north and west by the parishes of Carstairs and Carluke. An old arched bridge, of unknown origin, spans the Mouse or Moss water near its junction with the Clyde, a short distance north-west of the town, and from this point a fine view is obtained of Cartland bridge (erected in 1822, from designs by Thomas Telford F.R.S. the celebrated engineer) and Cartland Crags. The town occupies an elevated site about half a mile north-east of the Clyde; all the older streets, viz. High street, Wellgate, Castlegate, Broomgate, Bloomgate, Wyde close, radiate from a central space called the "Cross." The High street, a wide thoroughfare, extends eastward to the "Port," and is continued by St. Leonard street, which leads to Carstairs, and by Bannatyne street, conducting to the railway station. Hope street branches off from Bloomgate and leads to Cleghorn. Westport is a continuation of Bloomgate and conducts to the Old and New Carluke roads. The burgh is encircled by a series of narrow lanes, called the North Vennel, the South Vennel, The Delves, Friars' or Arnold lane, Greystonebalks and others. The road from Stirling to Carlisle traverses the parish from west to east, and the Mouse water, which rises in the moorlands, 8 miles distant, flows through the parish and falls into the Clyde, about a mile west of the borough; on the banks of this stream are the deep and finely wooded ravines of Cleghorn and the famous Cartland Crags. The town is lighted with gas, and an abundant supply of excellent water is obtained from the Tinto range of hills, 7 miles distant. The original charter of the burgh seems to have been granted by Alexander I. (1107-24); and in the reign of Malcolm (1153-65) the town appears to have been regarded as a royal burgh, many of the ancient kings of Scotland having made Lanark their place of residence. The charter was finally confirmed by Charles I. in 1632, and the town is now governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and 15 councillors. A sheriff court is held in the County Buildings every Tuesday and Friday during the session, and small debt and debts recovery court on Tuesdays. Here are also held the meetings of the County Council for the Upper ward, Lanark, together with Falkirk, Hamilton, Linlithgow and Airdrie, formed until 1918 the Falkirk parliamentary district, constituted under the Reform Act of 1832, and returning one member. Under the "Representation of the People Act, 1918," it is now included in the Lanark division of the county, which returns one member. The old parish church, now in ruins, stands within its burying ground, on the south-east border of the town. Tradition asserts that in this church Sir William Wallace first saw Marion Braidfoot, who subsequently became his wife. In the cemetery which surrounds the ruins of the church was interred William Lithgow, a celebrated and eccentric traveller of the reigns of Queen Elizabeth, James VI. and Charles I., born at Lanark about 1582. After traversing a great portion of Europe and Asia he was tortured and committed to prison by order of the Spanish Inquisition, but eventually returned, though in a crippled condition, and settled in his native parish till his death, about 1645. The modern parish church, which stands in the centre of the main street, is a plain rectangular structure of two storeys with a square projecting turret at the east end, the lower stage of which forms a porch; in the belfry are 2 bells: in a niche over the entrance is a statue of Wallace, executed by Forrest, a self-taught genius and a native of the district, and presented by him to the town. There is a Mission Church at New Lanark, erected in 1899. On Sat. 13 April, 1907, the beautiful church of St. Mary was almost entirely destroyed by fire. The Episcopal church of Christchurch is in Hope street. The Rev. Kenneth William Mackenzie M.B., Ch.B. of Edinburgh University, has been priest in charge since 1920. There are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches and an Evangelical Union chapel. The fountain, in the Horse market, was erected by public subscription in commemoration of the Jubilee in 1887 of Her Majesty Queen Victoria. The County Buildings, in Hope street, erected in 1836 at a cost of £5,000, are of freestone, in the Classic style, and contain court rooms and a series of offices. The premises of the Young Men's Christian Association were erected at a cost of £2,000. In the town is a live stock auction mart belonging to Messrs. Lawrie and Symington Limited, at which important sales of Ayrshire dairy cattle and fat stock are held weekly on Monday, and large sales of store sheep, cattle and Clydesdale horses during the season. This is the recognised centre for the sale of black-faced sheep and lambs, the largest sales in the country being held here during the season. The fairs, still observed, are as follows:—First Tuesday and Wednesday of June, rough sheep; (Glasgow Fair) Saturday, Cattle Show; second Tuesday in August, lambs; 17th and 18th August, black-faced lambs; 31st August and 1st September, lambs; first and second weeks in October, annual sales of Clydesdale horses. Horse races are held in September on an extensive and excellent course, about a mile and a half east of the town. Lady Hozier's Convalescent Home was opened July 10th, 1893, by the late Baron Newlands (d. 1906), who presented a donation of £10,000 towards the endowment of the institution as a memorial to Frances, his wife, who died in 1891; the home is available for 42 inmates, and is connected with the Western Infirmary, Glasgow. Bellefield Sanatorium was founded in 1904 by the Glasgow and District branch of the National Association for the Prevention of Consumption, at a cost of over £20,000, and transferred to the Glasgow Corporation in November, 1914; there are 52 beds, and upwards of 150 patients are treated annually. The Lindsay Institute, in Hope street, opened in 1914, was erected and endowed by the late Charles Lindsay at a cost of about £7,000; it contains reading, reference and lending rooms, also a billiards room; there are about 6,000 volumes. There was anciently a castle here, which stood on an apparently artificial mound at the foot of the Castlegate, but the site is now converted into a public bowling green. In the vicinity is Lanark Loch, a fine expanse of water, some 24 acres in extent, the shores of which have been embanked and planted, a pavilion built and a delightful promenade laid out, which is much frequented by the inhabitants. Numerous boats and steam launches ply on the loch for the pleasure of visitors. Adjoining the loch is Lanark Moor; on the upper moor races are held; the lower moor is used as a golfing green, and also affords ample space for cricket and football. The neighbourhood presents much fine scenery, including the romantic grounds of Bonnington, Cartland Crags and the Falls of Clyde; these last are three in number, viz.: Bonnington Falls, divided into two by a rocky islet; Corra Linn, where the water takes three distinct leaps, making a descent altogether of 84 feet, and Stonebyres Falls, three miles further down stream. In the parish are traces of ancient Roman camps and of a Roman road, the famous Watling Street, and indications of lake dwellings were met with in 1898 on Hyndford farm. The Lee is the seat of Lady Macdonald Lockhart; the mansion is in the Scottish castellated style, with a round tower at each angle: in the grounds are some very fine oak and larch trees: one of the latter planted in 1739 is now 100 feet high and 18 feet in girth; here is preserved a curious stone, traditionally taken from the Saracens in 1329, and called the "Lee Penny;" it is reputed to possess healing virtues, and is said to have suggested to Sir Walter Scott the idea of his celebrated novel, "The Talisman." Behind the Clydesdale Hotel are the Assembly Rooms, erected in 1827 on the site of a Franciscan monastery. Handloom weaving, formerly the general occupation, has almost entirely ceased, but there are several hosiery factories and a tannery. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the British Linen Bank. The principal hotel is the "Clydesdale."

Cleghorn House is the residence of Mrs. Eliott-Lockhart; Stanmore, of David W. T. Cargill esq.; Jerviswood is the property of the Earl of Haddington. The Earl of Haddington, Sir Charles Henry A. F. Ross bart. Mrs. Eliott-Lockhart, Lady Macdonald Lockhart, J. Noble Graham esq. D.L., J.P., C. J. Edmondstoune Cranstoun esq. D.L., J.P. and Mrs. Farie are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 10,390 acres; rateable value, burgh, £38,486; landward, £23,534; total, £62,020; the population of the civil parish in 1901, 8,103; ecclesiastical parish, 4,564; royal burgh, 6,440, and in 1911 was: civil, 8,978, and ecclesiastical, 4,977. The area of the burgh is 506 acres; rateable value, £ ; population in 1901, 6,440 and in 1911, 5,900. Included in the total civil population were 63 inmates and 3 officials in the Poor Law Institution, 71 patients and 17 officials in St. Mary's Hospital and 64 in Smyllum Orphanage for the Deaf and Dumb.

The population of St. Leonard's ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 4,001.

The population of the parliamentary borough in 1911 was 5,559.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1920 was 2,980.

NEW LANARK is a village, 1 mile south from Lanark, and on the same side of the Clyde, and in the parish, Upper ward and small debts court district of Lanark. It originated in 1783-4, when Richard Arkwright and Mr. David Dale built cotton mills here, and constructed a subterranean aqueduct, about 100 yards in length, through the solid rock, by which means the waters of the Clyde were conducted to the sloping plain on which the mills and the village now stand. Robert Owen, chiefly known as a social reformer, was in his earlier years a partner in the cotton mills in this village. Acreage, population and rateable value included with Lanark.

LEADHILLS is a village and a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parishes of Crawford and Crawfordjohn, in the Upper ward, and is on the road from Glasgow to Dumfries, with a station on the Elvanfoot and Wanlockhead section of the Caledonian railway, 46 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 44 south from Glasgow and 15 south from Douglas, and has Established and United Free churches. There is a branch here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, a Masonic Hall and a Miners' Library. The place derives its name from the lead mines hereabouts, which have produced in some years 18,000 bars, of nine stone (avoirdupois) the bar; in the year 1913, according to the "Mineral Statistics," 1,331 tons of lead ore were raised, from which 1,049 tons of lead was obtained on smelting, and 4,658 ounces of silver. Gold was found in the mountain sands in an early period, and in 1881 the miners of Leadhills, during their spare hours, collected a quantity weighing 1,000 grains, and presented it to the Earl of Hopetoun, afterwards 1st Marquess of Linlithgow, on the attainment of his majority. Allan Ramsay, the poet, was born here 13 October, 1685, and subsequently became a bookseller in Edinburgh; he died 7 Jan. 1758. A monument was erected here to Symington, a native of Leadhills, who first applied steam to navigation. Fairs used to be held on the second Friday of June and the last Friday of October, and both days are still observed as general holidays. The Marquess of Linlithgow O.B.E. is lord of the manor. The population in 1911 of the ecclesiastical parish was 849.

LENZIE is partly in the parish of Cadder, in the county of Lanark, and partly in the parish of Kirkintilloch, in Dumbartonshire, and will be found in the latter county.

LESMAHAGOW is a parish and village in the Upper ward of the county and in Lanark small debts court district, with a station on a branch of the Caledonian railway from Glasgow and Hamilton, the village, also called Abbey Green, is on the river Nethan, a tributary of the Clyde, and is 38 miles west from Edinburgh, 23 south-east from Glasgow and 6 south-west from Lanark; the parish is 12 miles square, and bounded on the north-east by the river Clyde, south-east by the Douglas and Poniel waters, and north-west by the Kype water; it abounds in coal, ironstone and limestone, in the working of which a considerable number of the inhabitants find employment; a line of railway, for this traffic only, passes through or near most of the mines, and joins the Caledonian main line at Motherwell. A line of the Caledonian railway was constructed in 1903 between Lesmahagow and Darvell and passing through Strathaven. The parish church, erected by the heritors of the parish in 1808, stands on part of the site of the priory, and in 1899 was internally restored, at a cost of about £3,500. The British Linen Bank and the Royal Bank of Scotland have branches here. Two hiring fairs and two others for general business are held during the year. A market, known as Big Wednesday, is held in the month of December. Here was anciently a priory, founded by David I. in 1140, and dedicated to St. Machutus. The noble ruins of Craignethan, or Draphane Castle, the property of the Earl of Home, are immortalised by Sir Walter Scott in "Old Mortality," under the name of "Tillietudlem Castle," and a room in the castle is still shown as that in which the unfortunate Queen Mary took refuge after her escape from Lochleven Castle, in 1567. The Duke of Hamilton, the Earl of Home T.D. and J. C. Hope-Vere esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The area is 41,311 acres; assessable value, £88,959; population in 1901, 10,954 and in 1911, 11,990 in the civil parish, and 10,489 in the ecclesiastical parish.

COALBURN is a mining village, about 4 miles south of Lesmahagow station, with a station on the Lesmahagow branch of the Caledonian railway, and has a United Free church.

CROSSFORD is a village in a beautiful valley on the left bank of the river Clyde, and near its confluence with the Nethan; it is about 5 miles north-by-east from Lesmahagow station and 4½ north-west from Lanark, and has a United Free church and a Baptist chapel.

KIRKMUIRHILL and BLACKWOOD are villages adjacent to each other, about 3 miles north-west from Lesmahagow station, on the Glasgow road, and at Blackwood is a station on the Caledonian railway. At Kirkmuirhill is a United Free church, and at Blackwood a Roman Catholic church. BOGHEAD is a village, about 1½ miles distant from Kirkmuirhill; the inhabitants of which are principally employed in Dunduff Stone Quarry. AUCHENHEATH, a mining village, is about 3 miles north from Lesmahagow station, and has a station on the Caledonian railway.

OLD MONKLAND is a parish in the Middle ward and the small debts court district of Airdrie, and extends from the right bank of the Clyde to the border of New Monkland, a distance of between 7 and 8 miles, by a breadth near the Clyde of little more than 1, but afterwards expanding to nearly 4 miles. It is bounded on the north by Cadder and the barony parish of Glasgow, and on the south by Bothwell, and is rich in minerals. The village of Old Monkland and the parish church are now locally part of Coatbridge. D. W. R. Carrick-Buchanan esq. D.L., J.P. of Corsewall, Stranraer, and Ronald S. H. S. R. Colt esq. J.P. of Gartsherrie, are the principal landowners. The area of Old Monkland parish is 11,007 acres; valuation, landward, £134,328; burghal (Coatbridge), £273,384; the population in 1901 was 53,248, and in 1911, 61,026, of which 43,286 was in Coatbridge burgh. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 6,060. Included in the total civil population was 312 inmates (of which 50 were in mental wards) and 23 officials in the Poorhouse.

BROOMHOUSE, in the parish of Old Monkland, is a small village, 2 miles from Baillieston and 6 from Glasgow, with a station on the Glasgow and Hamilton section of the North British railway. There are several collieries in this neighbourhood.

KENMUIR is a quoad sacra parish, erected in 1897, from the parish of Old Monkland; it forms the south-western portion of the civil parish and is 3 miles long and 1 mile broad, the Clyde forming the southern boundary; it includes the villages of Mount Vernon, Carmyle, Clyde Iron Works, Fullarton and Broomhouse. The population in 1911 was 4,910.

CARMYLE is a hamlet in the parish of Old Monkland, on the banks of the Clyde, and about 4 miles from Glasgow, with a station on the Caledonian railway and has a United Free church.

CUILHILL, a hamlet in the parish of Old Monkland, is about a mile from Baillieston and has a station on the Glasgow and Coatbridge section of the North British railway. Bargeddie, almost adjoining it, is the nearest post office.

FULLARTON is a hamlet adjoining Tollcross, about 3 miles from Glasgow, and has a Roman Catholic church; here also are the large iron furnaces and coalpits of James Dunlop and Co. Limited.

MOUNT VERNON is a hamlet in the parish of Old Monkland, about 4 miles from Glasgow, and has an Established church, a school, and stations on the Caledonian and North British railways.

SWINTON and Easterhouse are both small villages in Old Monkland parish, adjoining one another, and about a mile from Baillieston. At Swinton is a United Free church. West Maryston is a little village adjacent. At Easterhouse is a station on the Glasgow and Coatbridge section of the North British railway.

MOTHERWELL is a town and police burgh in the parishes of Dalziel and Bothwell, Middle ward of Lanarkshire, and in the sheriff court of Hamilton, and has a station on the Caledonian railway, 2 miles north-east from Hamilton and 11 miles south-east from Glasgow. The burgh is now amalgamated with that of Wishaw, and the united burgh of Motherwell and Wishaw is governed by a provost, 8 magistrates and 18 councillors. Motherwell is supplied with water from Coldstream Netherton, near Carluke, and Cutler, near Biggar, and the streets are lighted with electricity from works belonging to the Corporation. There are four Established churches, four United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and various chapels and halls. The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity, built in 1882, will seat 250 persons. The Town Hall, Motherwell, was opened in November, 1887, at a cost of about £8,000. The extensive works of Messrs. David Colville and Sons Limited employ over 10,500 hands; other important firms are the Lanarkshire Steel Co. Limited, the Motherwell and the Brandon Bridge Building Companies and the Parkneuk Bridge works. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Royal Bank of Scotland. The Public Library, presented by the late A. Carnegie esq. at a cost of £12,000, was opened in April, 1906; the lending library contains 17,000 volumes. The area of the burgh of Motherwell and Wishaw is 2,578 acres; rateable value, £402,411. The population of Motherwell in 1901 was 30,418, and in 1911, 40,380.

The population of St. Andrew's ecclesiastical parish (which was formed Dec. 3, 1909, from Dalziel) in 1911 was 5,664.

SHOTTS is a large parish at the north-eastern extremity of the county, extending from north to south about 8 miles and from east to west about 11 miles: it is bounded on the north-west by the parish of New Monkland, on the west by Bothwell and Dalziel, on the south by Cambusnethan, and on the east and north by the county of Linlithgow; and is in the Middle ward, Cambusnethan poor combination and small debts court district of Airdrie and Wishaw, and has a station on the Glasgow and Edinburgh section of the Caledonian railway. The kirktown of Shotts is 3½ miles north-west of the station, 7 south-east from Airdrie and 6½ north-east from Wishaw, and has an Established church and a Mission chapel. Fairs are held here annually, on the third Tuesday in June and the last Tuesday in November. The parish also includes the villages of Harthill, Benhar, Salsburgh, Dykehead, and part of the village of Shotts Ironworks. The coal and iron works in the parish furnish employment for the inhabitants, and include the collieries of the Coltness Iron Company. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch at Shotts, and close to the station is a good hotel. Murdostoun Castle is the seat of Col. Sir Robert King Stewart K.B.E., J.P. (Lord Lieut.). The Duke of Hamilton, Col. Sir Robert King Stewart K.B.E., J.P. and the trustees of John Croil Meek esq. and D. W. Carrick-Buchanan esq. are the principal landowners.

HARTHILL and BENHAR have been erected into a quoad sacra parish, which has Established and United Free churches. Population in 1911, 3,624.

GREENHILL is a small village about 4 miles east from Holytown, and 1 from Omoa station on the Holytown Junction and Edinburgh section of the Caledonian railway. There is a Board school in the village, and extensive collieries in the neighbourhood.

SALSBURGH, "Sallysburgh," or "Salzburgh," is a village in the parish of Shotts, 5 miles east from Holytown and has an Original Secession church in the district.

DYKEHEAD is a village near the Shotts Iron Works and half a mile from Shotts station on the Cleland and Mid-Calder branch of the Caledonian railway and has a Mission chapel and a United Free church. Population of Dykehead Ward in 1911, 5,680.

CLELAND, a large village and quoad sacra parish in this civil parish, will be found under a separate heading.

The area of the entire parish comprises 25,336 acres; rateable value, £135,484; population in 1901, 15,562, and in 1911, 18,433, including 138 officials and 944 inmates of Lanark District Mental Hospital and 198 inmates and 20 officials and their families in Omoa Combination Poorhouse. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 3,341.

STRATHAVEN is a market town and burgh of barony, on the river Avon, in the parish of Avondale and in the Middle ward and small debts court district of Hamilton, with a station on a branch from Blantyre station on the Caledonian railway, 44 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 15 south-by-east from Glasgow, 28 north-east from Ayr, 21 east-by-north from Kilmarnock, 14 west from Lanark and 7½ south from Hamilton. The town was erected into a burgh of barony in the year 1450, by William, Earl of Douglas. There is an Established church, three United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and Mission halls. The local trade is chiefly in cheese and grain, and the silk, cotton and hosiery goods manufactured here. The Public Park was the gift of the late Rev. James Allan, and Allison Green was presented by the late James Allison esq. of Oakey, Australia. Here are the ruins of Strathaven Castle, formerly a place of great strength and occupied by the Douglas and Hamilton families. A new branch of the Caledonian railway was opened in 1905 from Lesmahagow, via Stonehouse, to Darrell, and passing through Strathaven. The auction mart, which is held on Tuesday, is well attended. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. On the south side of the river Avon remains of a Roman road can be distinctly traced for several miles. Population in 1911, 3,494.

UDDINGSTON is a town and quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parish of Bothwell, and in the Middle ward; the village is 4 miles north-west from Hamilton on the road from Glasgow to Carlisle, with stations on the Glasgow and Motherwell section of the Caledonian railway and the Glasgow and Hamilton section of the North British railway. The place is lighted with gas, and supplied with water from the Bothwell water works. There are Established and United Free churches and a Baptist chapel; there is also an Episcopal church, of which the Rev. David Campbell Sinton L.Th.Durham has been rector since 1904. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland and the British Linen Bank, also iron foundries and establishments for the manufacture of agricultural implements and coal machinery. Here also is the chocolate factory of Messrs. Halton Limited. The population in 1901 was 7,463 in the town and 8,124 in the ecclesiastical parish, and in 1911, town, 8,214 and ecclesiastical parish, 8,874.

Post, M. O., T. & T. E. D. Office; D. MacColl, postmaster. Letters should have Lanarkshire added

WANDELL and LAMINGTON form a united parish, bounded on the west by the river Clyde, on the south by Crawford parish and east by Culter parish, in the Upper ward and in the small debts court district of Lanark. The village of Lamington, 6 miles south-west from Biggar, has a station on the Glasgow and Carlisle section of the Caledonian railway. The district is hilly, but fertile, and chiefly agricultural. Here is an Established church. The private Episcopal chapel of the Holy Trinity here was built in 1857 by Alexander, 1st Lord Lamington. Lamington House is the property of Lord Lamington G.C.M.G., G.C.I.E., D.L., J.P., who is the principal landowner; the estate affords about 8,000 acres for shooting, and there is excellent trout fishing on the Clyde. The mountain of Tinto, 2,335 feet, and Coulter Fell, 2,459 feet above sea level, are the loftiest eminences in this romantic neighbourhood. There is a reservoir for Airdrie and Coatbridge at Cowgill. Acreage, 12,830; rateable value, £11,106; population in 1911, 271.

WISHAW

WISHAW is a quoad sacra parish, town and police burgh, in the Middle ward of Lanarkshire and civil parish of Cambusnethan and Dalziel, and is 15 miles south-east from Glasgow and 32 west from Edinburgh, with stations on the Caledonian railway. The burgh is now amalgamated with that of Motherwell and the united burgh of Motherwell and Wishaw is governed by a provost, eight magistrates and 18 councillors. The boundaries having been extended, Wishaw now includes the villages of Cambusnetham, Shieldmuir and Craigneuk. The town, pleasantly situated on the face of a hill, comprises several spacious streets. The parish church of Cambusnethan, on Kirk Brae, is a modern building with a square tower. Wishaw church (quoad sacra), in Main street, is a large edifice and has a tower with a spire and a clock, and there are United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Andrew, built in 1892, will seat 170 persons. The Rev. George Frederick Ayers has been priest in charge since 1918. There are also Baptist, Congregational and Primitive Methodist chapels, a Gospel Hall, several mission chapels and Salvation Army Barracks. A police court is held at the County buildings as occasion requires. There are branches of the British Linen Bank, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, Mercantile Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland and the Royal Bank of Scotland. The Wishaw Iron and Steel Works, two iron foundries, the malleable iron works of Messrs. John Williams and Co. (Wishaw) Limited, the Stenton Iron and Steel works, the Pather Iron and Steel Co. Limited, the railway carriage and wagon and axle works of Messrs. R. Y. Pickering and Co. Limited, afford employment to a large number of workpeople. Large cattle sales are held every Tuesday and Thursday by Messrs. J. and J. Marshall, auctioneers, Carluke. Two newspapers, the "Wishaw Press," published every Friday forenoon, and the "Wishaw Herald," published every Thursday.

About 2 miles south-west from Wishaw, and near to the Clyde, is an ancient graveyard, the burial place of the Hamiltons, lords of Belhaven and Stenton, a title first conferred, 15th December, 1647, on Sir John Hamilton kt. of Broomhill, and re-granted to him 10 February, 1675; it is also said that the original parish church stood upon this site, but no trace of it whatever now remains. In the graveyard stands the tomb of Robert Montgomery, 8th Lord Belhaven and Stenton K.T. and Baron Hamilton, of Wishaw, in the peerage of the United Kingdom, who died 22nd December, 1868. It was erected by his widow, and is a handsome structure of freestone, 28 feet in height, with granite tablets on three sides, one of which bears an inscription; the graveyard also contains many memorials, rudely but curiously carved, and of considerable antiquity: one of these, erected in 1773, commemorates Arthur Inglis, shot at Stockelton Dyke, in Nethertoun, by John Graham of Claverhouse, Viscount Dundee, July, 1679, and several bear lengthwise the simple device of a sword. There are also memorials to Sir James Stewart Denham bart. and his wife, erected by their son, the late General Sir James Stewart bart. G.C.H. Wishaw House is the seat of Lord Belhaven and Stenton D.L., J.P. who is lord of the manor, and Coltness House that of Mrs. Houldsworth.

The area of the burghs of Motherwell and Wishaw is 2,578 acres; rateable value, £402,411; population of Wishaw in 1901, 20,869, and in 1911, 25,263, and in the ecclesiastical parish, 18,234.

CRAIGNEUK is a small village in Dalziel parish, now incorporated in the burgh of Wishaw, and has a United Free church. Here are the works of the Etna Iron and Steel Co.

WISTON and ROBERTON form a united parish, bounded by the river Clyde, in the Upper ward and small debts court district of Lanark. Wiston is on the Garf water, a tributary of the Clyde, 1½ miles north-west from Lamington station on the Glasgow and Carlisle section of the Caledonian railway, and 7 miles south-west from Biggar, which is the nearest market town. There are Established churches at Wiston and Roberton, and at the latter is also a United Free church. There is a public library in Roberton, formed in 1801. Wiston Lodge is the property and residence of R. D. MacGregor esq. and Hardington House, the property of Mrs. Wilson-McQueen, is occupied by Capt. R. C. Wilson-MacQueen. The Earl of Home T.D. Lord Lamington G.C.M.G., G.C.I.E., D.L., J.P., R. D. MacGregor esq. Lieut.-Col. Grierson, Mrs. Wilson-McQueen and Alexander Forsyth esq. are the principal landowners. Acreage, 13,153; rateable value, £8,651; population in 1911, 400.

ROBERTON is on the Roberton burn, another tributary of the Clyde, 2½ miles south-west from Lamington railway station; it is a favourite summer resort, and has a good golf course.

LINLITHGOWSHIRE

THE ancient division of West Lothian, is a small county of a pentagonal shape, lying south of the inner portion of the Firth of Forth, and bounded on the west by Stirling, south-west by Lanark, and south-east and east by Edinburghshire; its extent along the Firth coast is 16 miles, and from north to south about 15. Its area comprises 120.1 square miles, or 76,861 acres of land and 449 of water. The population in 1901 was 65,708 and in 1911, 80,155, viz.:—males, 42,727; females, 37,428. In 1901 the inhabited houses were 12,359 and in 1911, inhabited, 15,370; uninhabited, 591; building, 124. It ranks in point of size as the thirty-second and in population as the fifteenth of Scotch counties.

Early History.—The Gadeni are the first who are mentioned as holding this district, and they were subdued by the Romans, whose great bulwark, "Grimms Dyke," ended at Carriden, in this county, and several forts can still be traced in other parts of the county; it suffered in common with other parts of Lothian from invasions by Norwegians, and by the successes of the Northumbrian Earls, passing at length in 1018 under the Scottish rules. This county was probably separated into the sheriffdom in the reign of David I. It was placed by Robert, however, under the administration of a constable, and so it continued until the time of James IV. (1488-1513). No other district appears to have been so divided into petty baronies, bailieries, regalities and other independent jurisdictions, nor so domineered over by a number of peers inimical to peace and regardless of justice. The oldest family in the shire is that of Dundas, who can trace an unbroken line of descent and residence on the same spot up to the reign of William the Lion (1165).

Soil, Surface, &c.—This county has an irregular surface, but the hills are only of moderate elevation; the highest being found about the middle of the county. Many places present volcanic appearances, particularly at Dundas Hill, in the parish of Dalmeny, where there is a bold front of basaltic rocks, exhibiting in some instances columns of that character. The hills are generally well clothed with wood; about one-third of the county is either old pasture or laid down with artificial grasses; and there are more than four-fifths of the shire inclosed. Until the year 1723, there was little improvement in the agriculture of the district. Soon after this period, John, Earl of Stair, in conjunction with Charles, first Earl of Hopetoun, introduced new modes of husbandry, and commenced the cultivation of the cabbage, turnip, and carrot by the plough. The highest elevations are Cairnaple, 1,000 feet above sea level; Riccarton, 800; Caithlaw, 940; and Drumbowie, 705.

Produce, Manufactures, Minerals &c.—The chief crops, as shown by the "Agricultural Statistics of Scotland, 1920," are: oats, 12,114 acres; barley, including bere, 3,001; wheat, 2,219; beans (to be harvested as corn), 50; total corn crops, 17,482 acres; turnips and swedes, 3,264 acres; potatoes, 2,811; cabbage, 57; rape, 436; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. 154; rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover (for hay), 7,613 acres; pasture (not for hay), 4,479 acres. Total area of land, 76,861 acres, of which 4,227 is mountain and heath land (used for grazing), 20,962 permanent grass and 36,540 arable land, and 5,629 woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1920 comprised: horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 1,545; unbroken horses, 535; other horses, 326; cows in milk, 3,853; in calf, but not in milk, 615; heifers in calf, 695; other cattle, two years and above, 2,430; one year and under two, 1,935; under one year, 1,502; ewes kept for breeding, 3,445; other sheep, one year and above, 4,365; under one year, 4,204; sows kept for breeding, 181; other pigs, 1,262.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 44; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 78; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 47; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 27; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 42; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 40; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 104; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 110; above 300 acres, 28; total, 570.

Linlithgowshire contains a considerable quantity of minerals. Coal abounds throughout, limestone is prevalent, in some parts ironstone is also found, and the whole surface rests on a bed of sandstone of the finest quality, and there is fire clay and brick clay. This is the richest district in Scotland for the production of shale, from which paraffin oil is extracted, and for the manufacture of which very extensive works are in operation in the neighbourhood of Bathgate, Linlithgow, Uphall and Whitburn. Besides this branch of trade, there are also large iron and steel foundries, paper mills, distilleries, chemical works, and brick, tile and earthenware manufactories.

The production of coal in 1919 was 1,488,965 tons, valued at £1,929,568; clay, 96,448 tons; iron ore, 45,209 tons; oil shale, 2,182,355 tons (the largest production in Great Britain); sandstone, 3,315 tons; gravel and sand, 7,775 tons; igneous rocks, 43,745 tons.

Rivers and Railways.—The only river of consequence is the Almond, or Amond, but there are a number of considerable rivulets and burns. The Almond rises in the high grounds of Lanarkshire, and, pursuing a north-easterly course, falls into the sea at Cramond; at its mouth it assumes the appearance of a small loch or arm of the sea, running up the bottom of a woody ravine; but it is only navigable for a very short distance, and then only for boats and very small sloops. Linlithgow Loch, north of the town, is the only considerable sheet of water in the county. The Union canal runs across the northern portion of the county. The railways belong to the North British Co. and their lines are one coming from Falkirk, entering the county about 2 miles west of Linlithgow town, and leaving it again near Hough; another branch from Ratho enters the county a little south of Hough, runs to Uphall, whence a line goes to Mid Calder; the main branch proceeds to Bathgate, from which three lines diverge, one south to West Foulshiels, where it again divides, going east to West Calder and west to Crofthead &c.; the second line from Bathgate runs west to Armadale and the third north-west to Blackston Junction, where it joins the line from Bo'ness to Slamannan. Besides these railways there is the line to Queensferry for the Forth Bridge, which crosses the north-east angle of the county.

Divisions, Representations, &c.—This county comprises 10 entire civil parishes and part of one other (Kirkliston), and 16 entire ecclesiastical parishes with parts of two others, all of which are included in the Presbytery of Linlithgow; it contains two royal burghs, namely, Linlithgow and Queensferry, and four police burghs, Armadale, Bathgate, Borrowstounness and Whitburn. Its seaport is Bo'ness, and there are a number of thriving villages. Linlithgow, inclusive of all burghs situated therein, sends one representative to Parliament. The parliamentary constituency in 1919 was 36,260.

ABERCORN is a parish, in the northern part of the county, on the south bank of the river Forth, at the point where the Haugh brook flows into that river, and in the poor combination and small debt court district of Linlithgow, and contains the villages of Newton and Philpstoun. There is an Established church at Abercorn, and a United Free church at Woodend. This place has afforded the title of baron (1603), earl (1606), marquess (1790) and duke (1868), to the Hamilton family. Hopetoun House is the seat of the Marquess of Linlithgow O.B.E., D.L. The area of the parish is 4,508 acres; rateable value, £48,211; population in 1911, 933.

NEWTON is a village on the east side of the parish, about 2½ miles from Queensferry.

PHILPSTOUN is a village in Linlithgow civil parish, on the west of the Abercorn parish, with a station, about 1 mile south, on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway, 4 miles east from Linlithgow. In the village is a large shale mine for the extraction of oil and other products, which gives employment to most of the inhabitants. The United Presbyterian church at Wester Pardovan, close to the village, is locally in the parish of Linlithgow. A club for the use of the workmen employed in the oil works of James Ross and Co. was opened in 1908. The nearest school for this village is at Bridgend, 1 mile distant.

ARMADALE is a town and police burgh, entirely within the civil parish of Bathgate, and quoad sacra parish, formed from Bathgate and Torphichen parishes, 2 miles west from Bathgate, 20 miles west from Edinburgh, with a station, a mile from the town, on Bathgate and Glasgow section of the North British railway, 22 miles east from Glasgow, and 7½ south from Linlithgow. It was constituted a police burgh under the provisions of the "Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," and is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors, and is lighted with gas by a limited company. There is an Established church, a United Free church and a Wesleyan chapel. The Episcopal church of St. Paul, built in 1858, will seat 120 persons: the rectory, net value £150, has been held since 1915 by the Rev. E. S. Tarrant L.Th. The Burgh hall, a plain building of stone, was erected in 1904. In the vicinity are extensive coalfields and ironstone quarries; several brick and tile and fire-brick manufactories, shale works for the extraction of mineral oil and other products and large steel works. In the town are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited. Sir William Honyman bart. one of the lords of the Court of Session, in 1797, and Lord Justice Clerk in 1788-99, took the title of Lord Armadale from this place. Alexander W. Robertson Durham esq.; the trustees of the late Sir Gwaine Baillie bart. and Capt. Thomas Hope are the principal landowners. Bathville is a thriving suburb of the burgh. The soil is of strong clay, and its products principally oats and grass for grazing purposes; the surface is flat and waving. The area of the burgh is 252 acres; rateable value, £15,987; population of the burgh in 1901 was 3,921, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 6,445, and in 1911, burgh, 4,739; ecclesiastical parish, 8,305, which includes 2,458 in Torphichen civil parish.

BATHGATE is a market town, police burgh and parish, on the middle road betwixt Edinburgh and Glasgow, with stations on the Bathgate branch of the Edinburgh and Glasgow and Monklands sections of the North British railway, in Linlithgow poor combination, 18 miles west from Edinburgh, 24 east from Glasgow, 14 east from Airdrie and 7 south from Linlithgow. The Bathgate water, a tributary of the river Forth, flows through the centre of the parish, which is bounded on the west by the Barbauchlaw Burn. The town occupies a pleasant site near the southern base of a ridge of hills extending across the county, and sheltering the town on the north and east, and at the same time it has a fine southern aspect, and possesses several good streets. It is lighted with gas from works the property of a local company, and abundantly supplied with water of excellent quality from works erected at a cost of £6,000, and in 1903 an additional supply was obtained at a further cost of £13,600, and again in 1914 at a cost of £10,000. Bathgate was made a burgh of barony by Charles II. in 1661, and created a free and independent burgh of barony by Act of Parliament in 1824; subsequently the burgh adopted Provost Lindsay's Police Act of 1862, and is now governed by a provost, two magistrates and nine councillors. The old parish church, erected about 1737, was taken down in 1882. The present church, erected on the same site at a cost of upwards of £8,000, and opened in 1884, is a handsome edifice of stone, chiefly in the Gothic style, with a square tower at the south-west angle, rising to a height of 108 feet and ornamented with crocketed pinnacles. The tower contains a bell and an illuminated clock, presented by the late John Waddell esq. of Inch, at a cost of over £250; a gallery is carried round three sides of the church, and the east gable is relieved by a semi-circular apse with five memorial windows. The church affords about 1,100 sittings, and adjoining are vestries and a hall. The Episcopal church of St. Columba was built in 1916 at a cost of £1,287: there are 150 sittings. The Evangelical Union church, in Marjoribanks street, rebuilt on the old site in 1895 at a cost of upwards of £2,200, is an edifice in the Early English style from designs by Mr. J. Graham Fairley, architect, of Edinburgh. St. John's United Free church, erected in 1894-5, and opened in October, 1895, at an estimated cost of £3,700, is an edifice in a plain Gothic style, and has a tower of three stages with octagonal broach spire, and containing one bell, weighing nearly a ton; various gifts have been made to the church, including a communion service and font basin of solid silver. St. David's United Free church, erected in 1907, is a lofty building of stone in the Early Gothic style; it contains a stone pulpit and massive font, and will seat 600 persons. There is also a Catholic church. The Bathgate Academy, which stands on a commanding and healthy site in the immediate vicinity of the town, was endowed by a bequest of the late John Newland, of Kingston, Jamaica, a native of this town, with a sum of between £16,000 and £17,000; the building is elegant and extensive, and contains classrooms, a library and trustees' room. It is now under Government inspection, and is managed by a body of trustees, one of whom represents the lord of the manor and another is appointed by the Town Council. The neighbouring hills abound with old limestone quarries yielding fine specimens of fossil remains. Paraffin oil is manufactured in the locality. At Westfield, about 2½ miles distant, is an extensive mill of the Westfield Paper Co. Limited. In the town there are three iron foundries, spade and shovel and steel rolling works, and in the district are many large collieries, and coal and ironstone &c. are much worked in the immediate neighbourhood. On the north border of the parish are ancient silver mines worked in the early part of the 17th century, and a few years ago reopened. The market day is Tuesday. A cattle auction is held at the mart in Whitburn road on market day. The authorities of the burgh are entitled by Act of Parliament to hold seven annual fairs—namely, on the third Wednesdays in April, July and August, on the first Wednesdays after Whit-Sunday and Martinmas (o. s.), and the fourth Wednesdays in June and October; the principal fairs are those held at Whitsuntide and Martinmas, which are well attended by cattle dealers. There are branches here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. The "West Lothian Courier" is published here every Friday. The following eminent men were born in the parish—Dr. John Fleming, professor of natural science, Aberdeen; Dr. John Reid, professor of anatomy, St. Andrews, and Sir James Young Simpson bart. M.D. the discoverer, in 1847, of the anæsthetical properties of chloroform: he was born here 7th June, 1811, and died at Edinburgh 6th May, 1870. Boghead is at present (1921) unoccupied. The principal landowners are the Marquess of Linlithgow O.B.E. the Governors of Daniel Stewart's Hospital, Edinburgh; Alexander W. R. Durham esq.; the trustees of the late Sir William Baillie bart. (d. 1890); Col. James Henry Cowan; the Bathgate Town Council and Mrs. Nelson McQueen. The land is fairly productive, while the surface is largely undulating. The parish of Bathgate has an area of 10,875 acres, of the burgh 401 acres; the rateable value of the parish is £102,000; £40,600 represents the annual rateable value of the burgh of Bathgate, and £16,000 that of the burgh of Armadale. The population in 1901 was 14,004, and in 1911, 17,659, viz.:—Police burgh, 8,226; Armadale burgh, 4,739; landward, 4,694; ecclesiastical parish, 11,812.

At TIPPETHILL, near Armadale, in this parish is the Southern District Combination Hospital, erected in 1901 at a cost of £7,900.

BRIDGEND adjoins the burgh of Bathgate. The population in 1911 was 2,600.

WOODEND, a small colliery village, 3½ miles distant, in Torphichen civil parish.

DURHAMTOWN is also a mining village in this parish.

BLACKBURN is a village, on the river Almond and the road from Bathgate to West Calder, in the parishes of Livingstone and Whitburn, and is 1½ miles east from East Whitburn station on the Morningside section of the North British system, and 3 south from Bathgate. Adjacent to the village are leck stone quarries, the stone from which is specially used in the construction of ovens, being capable of bearing any amount of heat, but it is unsuitable for building purposes. There are an Established chapel of ease, United Free church, erected in 1907 and a Baillie Institute gifted by the late Lady Baillie, of Polkemmet. Population in 1911, 2,500.

SEAFIELD is a small mining village in the parish on the Edinburgh, Shotts and Glasgow road, and is distant from Blackburn 1 mile and from Bathgate 4 miles. The nearest railway station is Livingstone (N. B. Railway), 2½ miles distant. Population, 1911, 900.

BLACKNESS is a small village on the coast, in the ecclesiastical parish of Carriden and civil parish of Borrowstounness and Carraden, and on the Firth of Forth, 3½ miles east-south-east of Borrowstounness, 4 north-east of Linlithgow, 5½ west-north-west of South Queensferry, and 4 from Linlithgow station on the North British and Caledonian railways. There is a pier here for landing goods from small vessels. St. Ninian's Mission church was erected in 1914 at a cost of £800. Robert Braes esq. is the principal landowner here. Blackness Castle, situated on the banks of the Forth, close to the village, was during the reign of James VI. the principal state prison in Scotland, and as such received within its gloomy walls many distinguished persons; one of the most remarkable of its prisoners was James (Stewart), 4th Lord Ochiltree, who for accusing the Marquis of Hamilton of aspiring to the Scottish crown, was here confined from 1631 for upwards of twenty years, during nearly the whole reign of Charles I.

BO'NESS AND CARRIDEN

BORROWSTOUNNESS (or, as it is now generally pronounced, Bo'ness) is a parish, seaport town and police burgh, in the poor combination and small debt court district of Linlithgow. It was erected into a Burgh of Regality by a charter of Charles II. dated 8th January, 1668, and remained such until the passing of the Heritable Jurisdictions Act, 1747. By a Local Government Board Order, dated 8th February, 1895, under section 54 of the Local Government (Scotland) Acts of 1889 and 1894, and which came into operation 15th May, 1895, the parish is now, for civil purposes, united to the parish of Carriden, and also includes the villages of Borrowstoun and Newtown. The burgh has also been extended from the same date and now includes on the east side the suburban villages of Grangepans, Cowdenhill and Bridgeness, and on the west side the mining village of Kinneil. The town is built on low ground on the south shore of the Firth of Forth and is 18 miles west from Edinburgh, 9 west from South Queensferry, 3½ north from Linlithgow and 8 east-by-north from Falkirk, and has a terminal station on the Monkland section of the North British railway. A tract of flat but rich alluvial land called the "Carse of Kinneil" lies to the north-west, and the beach from thence eastward is low ground lying between a high bank landward, and a great expanse of muddy silt extending at ebb tide to the sea: all the rest of the parish declines gradually from Erngath Hill to the west and north. The soil is deep loam and is well cultivated. The town consists principally of two streets, running eastward and terminating in one of nearly the same length, and the greater portion of the houses appear to be of ancient date. In 1907 a large area was cleared in the centre of the town and two new streets laid out, at a cost of £6,000. The town is lighted with gas and by electricity, and governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. Between 1750 and 1780 Bo'ness was one of the most thriving towns on the east coast, and ranked as the third port in Scotland; but on the construction of the Forth and Clyde canal, Grangemouth, at the east end of the canal, became the chief seat of commerce, and in 1810 was erected into a separate port, with a custom house. In 1876, under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, the Harbour Commissioners here began the construction of a new pier, and wet docks, 7½ acres in extent, finished towards the end of 1881, at a cost of £200,000. The quays have also been rebuilt and the area extended from 2½ to 5½ acres, and the depth of water largely increased. The extent of the quayage in the dock is 2,400 feet, and in the harbour 1,900 feet. The harbour has a depth of water on the sill of 22 feet at spring tides and 18 feet at neaps, from which 2 feet has to be deducted for silt in the channel. The dock and attached works are af the most substantial character, and have been furnished throughout with hydraulic machinery of the latest description, and the lines of railways on the quays are in direct communication with the North British Railway Company's system, thus affording access to and from all parts of the United Kingdom. The hydraulic appliances consist of three coal-shipping hoists, each capable of shipping 2,000 tons of coal per day of 24 hours, or 6,000 tons by all the hoists, twelve portable cranes, each capable of lifting two tons, three of which can at one time be applied to the discharge of the same vessel, capstans for hauling ships into and out of the dock, and waggon capstans for working the movable traffic on the quays of the dock &c. Large sheds, in which are fitted hydraulic cranes for lifting goods, are also provided for the storage of cargoes. The trade of the town and port consists chiefly in the importation of timber, pitwood for mining purposes, esparto grass, grain, iron ore, phosphate &c., and the exporting of coal, iron and general goods. Steamers run direct twice a week between Bo'ness and London, and ample standage for coal wagons, worked by self-acting gradients, has been provided to facilitate in every possible way the quick shipment of cargo and bunker coal at the hoists. The total value of the imports in 1919 was £56,230, the principal article being sawn timber, £53,869; the total value of the exports was £8,095, all of which were coal and coke. The amount of customs revenue received in 1919 was £12. Amongst the chief industrial works of the burgh and district are three large collieries, freestone and whinstone quarries, an extensive distillery, earthenware manufactories, chemical manure works, ship breaking works and several iron foundries. The Established church, a good building with a tower and spire, was erected in 1895 at a cost of upwards of £10,000. St. Andrew's Free church, erected in 1906 at a cost of £6,000, is a building of stone with tower, and will seat 600 persons; there is also a United Free church at Craigmailen, a Catholic church in Stewart avenue, and a Scottish Coast Mission building in the Market square; the Episcopal Mission church of St. Catherine will seat 250 persons; the incumbency, net value £204, has been held since 1920 by the Rev. Samuel Edward Easter L.Th. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Bank of Scotland. A Public Library was opened in 1905 at the Town hall. The Bo'ness Academy, opened in 1905, is a good building of stone, and is available for over 250 pupils. The "Bo'ness Journal" is published here every Friday, price 2d. Kinneil House, the property of the Duke of Hamilton, who is superior of the burgh and parish, is now (1921) unoccupied. Here the celebrated James Watt realised some of his earliest improvements in the steam engine. The Roman wall of Antoninus, commonly called "Graham's, or Grim's Dyke," but chiefly constructed by the Pro-praetor Lollius Urbicus, A.D. 139-40, passes through the parish, and within a short distance of the town, on the south-east, the traces of a Roman camp are still visible. The soil is light and produces plentiful crops; the surface of the land is very unequal, rising rapidly from the shore and declining again to the south; it comprises part of the Erngath or Glower-owerem hills, and has there an extreme altitude of 519 feet above the sea level; the land is entirely arable and enclosed. The Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., P.C. the Marquess of Linlithgow O.B.E. Henry M. Cadell esq. D.L., J.P. the Duke of Hamilton and the Bridgeness Company Limited are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish of Borrowstounness and Carriden is 5,939 acres; area of burgh, 600 acres; rateable value, burgh, £53,131; the total for the parishes of Bo'ness and Carriden is £73,026; the population in 1901 was 11,473, and in 1911, 14,034, police burgh, 10,862; landward, 3,172. The population in Borrowstounness ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 9,260.

CARRIDEN, now a joint parish with Borrowstounness for civil purposes, adjoins it on the east, and is 7 miles west from South Queensferry and 4 north from Linlithgow, on the south bank of the Firth of Forth. The nearest railway station is at Borrowstounness. Here is an Established church. Population in 1911, 4,774.

BORROWSTOUN is a small hamlet half a mile from the burgh.

BRIDGENESS is a suburb of the burgh, in the ecclesiastical parish of Carriden, and has a small harbour used by vessels employed in the coal trade &c. connected with the colliery of the Bridgeness Company Limited.

COWDENHILL is a suburb of the burgh.

GRANGEPANS is a suburb of the burgh, in the ecclesiastical parish of Carriden, and has a Mission church in connection with the Established church at Carriden, a public school and a cookery school.

KINNEIL is a mining village and a suburb of the burgh. The barony of Kinneil is one of the most ancient possessions of the house of Douglas-Hamilton, Dukes of Hamilton and Brandon.

MUIRHOUSES is a small hamlet in the ecclesiastical parish of Carriden.

NEWTOWN is a mining village adjacent to the burgh, and has a Free Church Mission hall.

BRIDGEND, see BATHGATE.

BRIDGENESS, see BORROWSTOUNNESS.

BROXBURN is a small town in the parish of Uphall, and in the small debts court district of Linlithgow; the town stands on the Brox brook, a tributary of the Almond, and the road from Bathgate to Edinburgh, and is 1 mile north from Drumshoreland station on the Edinburgh and Bathgate section of the North British railway, 11 west from Edinburgh, 7 east from Bathgate and 7 south-east from Linlithgow. The town consists principally of one long street running east and west, and its western extremity is crossed by the Edinburgh and Glasgow Union canal. There is a Church of Scotland, two United Free churches and a Catholic church. The Public Hall was erected, together with billiard and reading rooms, in 1873, at a cost of £1,300, and will seat 500 persons. There is a branch here of the British Linen Bank. In the neighbourhood are the works of the Scottish Oils Limited, which afford employment to the greater part of the inhabitants. The population in 1911 of Broxburn Ward of Uphall civil parish was 4,890; rateable value, £66,337.

CRAMOND (NOW IN DALMENY PARISH); see EDINBURGHSHIRE.

CROFTHEAD, see WHITBURN.

DALMENY is a parish and small village: the parish consists of a landward portion and a burghal portion, the latter embracing the burgh of Queensferry, which see. Its length from east to west is about 6½ miles, and its breadth 3½ miles, and is on the shore of the Firth of Forth. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary orders 9 and 122, that part of Cramond in this county has been added to Dalmeny. By the same Act part of Dalmeny was annexed to Ecclesmachan and part transferred to Kirkliston parish. The village has a station on the Edinburgh and Dunfermline section of the North British railway, and is about a mile from Queensferry and about 9 west from Linlithgow. This place gives the title of baron to the Primrose family, Earls of Rosebery. The parish church is an ancient structure, built probably about 1154, in the late Norman style: before the Reformation the patronage belonged to the Abbot and Convent of Jedburgh, but from 1545 it was attached to the barony of Barnbougle, and since 1712 the right has been exercised by the Earls of Rosebery. A cemetery was provided by the parish council in 1898 for this place and South Queensferry, at a cost of £2,000. Nearly the whole of the parish is well cultivated and enclosed, and contains several mansions, amongst which are Dalmeny House, the seat of the Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., P.C., F.R.S., F.B.A., F.S.A. lord lieut. of the county; it is surrounded by an extensive and beautiful park. The Earl of Rosebery, J. C. Hope-Vere esq. Sir John Stewart-Clark bart. D.L., J.P. and the Marquess of Linlithgow O.B.E. are the principal landowners. It has an area of 5,864 acres, as altered under the Secretary of Scotland's Order; the population in 1911 was 5,139, of which 3,510 were in Queensferry; 1,510 being on ships of the Royal Navy; rateable value, excluding Queensferry, £53,657. The population of Dalmeny parish in 1911 was 1,629. The small hamlet of Craigie is in this parish.

DURHAMTOWN, see BATHGATE.

ECCLESMACHAN is a village, about 1½ miles north from Uphill station on the Edinburgh and Bathgate section of the North British railway, and 5 miles south-east from Linlithgow. The parish, which is in the small debts court district of Linlithgow, is 4 miles in length and 1 in breadth, and is watered by the Brox and Bueux brooks, tributaries of the Almond. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary orders 108 and 122, portions of Dalmeny and Linlithgow parishes have been added to Ecclesmachan. There is an Established church, and at Bangour is a mental hospital, built in 1903, for patients from Edinburgh. Robert Liston F.R.S. the eminent surgeon, was born here 28 Oct. 1794, his father then being parish minister; he died 7 Dec. 1847. Near the church is a weak sulphureous spring, called the "Bunion Well." The Marquess of Linlithgow O.B.E. the trustees of the late Peter Thomson esq. the trustees of the late William Thomson and the Edinburgh Parish Council are the principal landowners. The surface of the soil is flat and sandy. The land is under tillage, with a fair sprinkling of wood. Freestone and sandstone are plentiful in the parish. The area of the parish is 4,066 acres; rateable value, £20,056; population in 1911, 1,449 civil and 1,265 ecclesiastical.

There is no post office in the village, but a post messenger calls at 8 a.m. & clears letter box at 6 p.m. Letters should be addressed Uphall, Linlithgowshire

KINGSCAVIL is a small village, in the parish of Linlithgow, on the road from that place to Edinburgh, and in the small debt court district of Linlithgow, 15 miles west from Edinburgh, 10 east from Falkirk, and about 1½ miles east from Linlithgow station on the North British railway. The district is celebrated for the shale, from which oil and other products are extracted, and there are mineral oil works, which give employment to many of the inhabitants. The Established Mission church of St. Michael, erected in 1903, is a small edifice of stone, and will seat about 180 persons. Rateable value, £451.

KIRKLISTON is a parish and comprises the villages of Kirkliston, Newbridge, Newhouses and Westerton, Niddry and Winchburgh, partly in Edinburghshire, but chiefly in Linlithgowshire, and in Linlithgow poor combination and small debt court district of Linlithgow; the village of Kirkliston, anciently called Temple-Liston, from the fact that the Knights-Templars formerly had an establishment here, is situated on the left bank of the Almond, on the road from Edinburgh to Falkirk, and has a station on the Edinburgh, Ratho and Dalmeny branch of the North British railway, 8 miles west from Edinburgh. The Niddry burn, in the northern part, and Brox brook in the southern part of the parish, both tributaries of the Almond, join that river in this parish. The village is well built, the principal industry being shale mining, but there is also a large distillery. The land is generally rich, well cultivated, and produces excellent crops. Here a former Lord Stair first introduced the culture of cabbage in the open fields. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary orders 83 and 122, a part of Dalmeny parish was added to Kirkliston. The parish church is an ancient structure, originally erected in the Norman period, and retains a fine doorway in that style; within the church is the mortuary vault of the noble family of Dalrymple, Viscounts and Earls of Stair, and here was buried Elizabeth (Dundas), wife of John, 1st Earl of Stair, and the "Lady Ashton" of Sir Walter Scott's "Bride of Lammermoor." The church affords 700 sittings; there is also a United Free church. The "Catstane," a remarkable monument of antiquity, within a field which stands on Westbriggs farm, on the east bank of the river Almond, rises 4½ feet above the ground, and is about 11½ feet in circumference; it bears a much worn inscription as yet undeciphered. Newliston, now the seat of Capt. J. R. H. Hutchison, was once the property and favourite residence of the distinguished soldier, Field-Marshal John, 2nd Earl of Stair K.T. who fought at Oudenarde and Dettingen, but the estate was sold by John, the 6th Earl, who died in 1789; the mansion was built in 1794 from the designs of William Adam, and the plantations in its grounds are said to have been arranged so as to represent the disposition of the British army on the eve of the Battle of Dettingen, fought 16 June, 1743. Carlowrie is the residence of Mrs. Hutchison. The Marquess of Linlithgow O.B.E. Mrs. Steel-Maitland and Sir John Stewart-Clark bart. are the principal landowners. Area of the parish, 8,010 acres; rateable value, whole parish, £56,729; population, 1911, 5,298 whole civil parish, of which 831 were in Edinburghshire, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 2,771, of which 834 were in Edinburghshire.

NIDDRY is a hamlet in this parish, half a mile from Winchburgh, on the road to Kirkliston. Letters received through Winchburgh. This place, since 1814, has given the title of baron to the Hope family, Earls of Hopetoun.

LINLITHGOW (popularly called Lithgow) is a county town, a parish, royal burgh and the head of a poor combination, small debts court district and presbytery, on the northern border of the county. The parish is bounded on the west by the river Avon, which separates it from Stirlingshire, and falls into the Firth of Forth near Borrowstounness. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary order 108, a portion of Linlithgow parish has been annexed to that of Ecclesmachan. The town, situated on the banks of a fine pool, or "linn," from which in part it derives its name, consists chiefly of a single street which runs east and west along the south edge of the loch, and is nearly a mile in length. It has a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway, and is 16 miles west from Edinburgh, 31 east-by-north from Glasgow, 8 east from Falkirk and 3½ south from Borrowstounness. The burgh is governed by a council consisting of a provost, three magistrates, or bailies, and nine councillors. Together with Lanark, Hamilton, Airdrie and Falkirk, Linlithgow formed the Falkirk parliamentary district, constituted under the Reform Act of 1832, and returned one member, but now under the "Representation of the People Act, 1918," it forms part of the County of Linlithgow for parliamentary purposes. This town has, since 1902, afforded the title of Marquess to the Hope family, Earls of Hopetoun. The Union (Edinburgh and Glasgow) canal, which terminates at Falkirk, where it is joined by the Forth and Clyde Navigation, completed in 1790, passes through the town and parish, and is carried across the Avon on a fine aqueduct of twelve arches. The local industries comprise paper and glue making, tanning, currying and boot making. Messrs. T. Nimmo and Co. are glue and grease manufacturers. There is also close to the town a distillery and paper mills, belonging to Messrs. J. Lovell and Son Limited. In the vicinity are several stone quarries, and within 3 miles there are large shale mines, and works for the extraction of mineral oil and other products. The Town House, an elegant structure, erected in 1688, was partially destroyed by fire in 1847, but immediately repaired; it contains a council chamber and burgh court room, and a large hall, which is used for public meetings. To the north of this stands the County Hall, a handsome and convenient building, in which hang full-length portraits of General Sir John Hope K.C.B. 1st Baron Niddry, and subsequently 4th Earl of Hopetoun (d. 27th August, 1823), of his brother General Sir Alexander Hope G.C.B., M.P. (d. 19th May, 1837), of John Alexander, late Earl of Rosebery (d. 2nd April, 1873), and of John Adrian Louis, 1st Marquess of Linlithgow K.T., P.C., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O. The Court House, on the south side of the street, contains offices for the sheriff, sheriff's clerk, procurator fiscal and chief constable, besides a spacious court room, small court room, witness and jury rooms, and a hall for the procurators of the court. A court is held every Tuesday for criminal cases, and on Friday for civil and small debts cases. The Victoria Hall, in High street, the foundation stone of which was laid, with masonic honours, December 31st, 1887, is a building in the Scottish baronial style, and was erected at a total cost of about £4,000, and comprises a hall seating about 800 persons and various rooms. The Masonic Temple, erected in 1907, at the cost of about £1,000, is of red brick and stone, and will seat 200 persons. The Post office, in High street, is a building of stone. The Combination Poor House at St. Magdalene's, standing on rising ground, about a quarter of a mile from the town, was erected in 1854, at a cost of £9,000. The Cross Well, immediately opposite to the Town House, is a fountain, completed 4th June, 1807, in imitation of the ancient Cross Well. It is hexagonal in form, on a graduated base, the water descending from the top, which is surmounted by a unicorn holding a shield. The stream falls into a basin, from whence it is spouted into a larger one through the mouths of six grotesque figures, whence it again issues through the jaws of other heads into the lower basin, which is surrounded by statues. The work is said to have been entirely executed by Robert Grey, the one-handed stonemason, and there is an inscription on one side. In the town are several other fountains of similar design.

The church of St. Michael standing close to the south front of the palace, and occupying part of its outer courtyard, is an edifice in the Gothic style, consisting of apsidal choir, nave, transepts, continuous aisles, vestries and a massive square western tower, which till the beginning of the present century was surmounted by a crown, something in the style of St. Giles's, Edinburgh; it has now a heavy parapet and pinnacles, and contains a fine peal of bells, one of which, re-cast in 1468, is named "Meg Duncan." In 1812 the interior was divided by a partition reaching across the nave at its junction with the transept, and had galleries in the chancel; the whole has now been removed, and a vestry built on the north side of the chancel, at a cost of from £4,000 to £5,000, towards which the Baird Trust made a grant of £1,000, and the late Capt. Urquhart, of Vellore, Linlithgow, bequeathed a legacy of £500. The central window of the apse is filled with stained glass as a memorial to the late Sir Charles Wyville Thomson kt. LL.D., F.R.S. director in 1872-6 of the Challenger Deep Sea Dredging Expedition, who died at Bonsyde, 10th March, 1882: there is another memorial window to the late Mr. Robert R. Glen, formerly town clerk, and to his sister, and others have also been added to Adam Dawson esq. Mr. J. Miller Richard, of Clarendon, Mr. John Ferguson, and Esther Ferguson, daughter of a former minister. The font, presented in 1896 by the late Mr. William Gilkison, banker, of Linlithgow, and designed by Mr. John Honeyman, architect, of Glasgow, is of stone and consists of an octagonal panelled basin, ornamented with quatrefoils on a pedestal relieved with niches and crocketed pinnacles, the whole standing on a wide octagonal base of one step. The south end of the transept (called St. Catherine's aisle) is the spot where the Scotch nobles are said to have attempted, by means of a spectral apparition, to terrify James IV. from persisting in his invasion of England in 1513, an expedition which ended in his defeat and death at Flodden Field, September 9th in that year. In the vestry some interesting relics of the church are still preserved. There are two United Free Churches, named respectively the High Church and Craigmailen Church. The High Church was enlarged and beautified in 1900, and an oak pulpit, with specially designed panels illustrating scenes from the Old and New Testaments added: there are two stained glass windows: the font is of Sienna marble, and is the gift of the family of the late Mr. and Mrs. Turner, of The Mains. There are also a Congregational chapel, a Catholic church, and several Mission halls. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the British Linen Bank. The weekly market for grain on Friday has been practically extinguished since the establishment of a weekly auction mart on Mondays. Fairs are held on the Friday after the second Tuesday in January, February 25th, the third Friday in April, the second Tuesday in June, Aug. 2nd, and the first Friday in Nov.

The Royal palace of Linlithgow, now only a majestic ruin, stands, together with the church of St. Michael, on a terraced promontory jutting out into the linn, and occupies the site of an earlier structure, demolished by order of Robert the Bruce, but rebuilt by Edward I. and in the new fortress, Robert II. was elected King of Scotland in 1371; of this building three round towers on the east side still exist, and have been used as abutments for supporting the massive east wall of the palace. In 1410 the palace and castle were seriously damaged by fire, but were again rebuilt or repaired, and here, 10th April, 1512, James V. is said to have been born; his daughter Mary, afterwards Queen of Scots, was also born in the palace, 8th December, 1542, in a room on the west side. The palace, as now standing, is a quadrangular building, enclosing a spacious open courtyard, about 90 feet square, with a turret staircase at each angle; the latest portion is the north side, erected by James VI. (James I. of England) about 1618, after his visit in the previous year; the original entrance was on the east side, but the palace is now approached through a turreted gatehouse adjoining the western tower of St. Michael's church, and opening to the spacious outer courtyard on the south side of the palace, which is entered by a porch and includes a hall, chapel and ante-rooms; the great hall, on the east side, is about 100 feet long and 25 feet wide; on the west side is Queen Mary's room, and another apartment at the north-west angle is called by the name of James III. who is said to have taken refuge here during the civil disturbances of his reign. The final ruin of the palace was accomplished by the dragoons of General Henry Hawley, who were quartered here during the rebellion of 1745; in spite of the remonstrances of the custodians of the palace, the soldiery persisted in maintaining enormous fires, and on the night of 31st January, 1746, a conflagration broke out which destroyed everything save the walls. In the centre of the palace quadrangle are the shattered remains of a beautiful fountain, exquisitely and elaborately carved by Italian artists, brought over by one of the Stuarts. A restored facsimile of this fountain made under the direction of the late Mr. Matheson, now adorns the west front of Holyrood House. The fountain was supplied with water from the estate of Preston, about a mile distant, and the pipes leading to it have been discovered on the Carmelite Friars' lands on the south side of the town. Sir Walter Scott, in "Marmion," has vividly depicted the bustle and gaiety of the court when at Linlithgow. A miniature jewelled spinning wheel, formerly belonging to Mary of Lorraine, Queen of James V. and brought with other articles from the palace, is now the property of W. Murray Threipland esq. Her Majesty Queen Victoria paid a visit to the palace in 1842, and in July, 1914, their Majesties King George and Queen Mary, with Princess Mary, came to the town. Among the ancient dwellings in the town a particular house used to be pointed out to strangers as the place from whence James Hamilton, of Bothwellhaugh, shot the Regent Murray (23rd January, 1570). A bronze tablet, with the effigy of the regent, has been inserted in the wall of the county-court room to denote the spot where the house stood. The St. Andrew badge of the Order of the Thistle, wrought in gold and enamel, and worn by the regent at the time of his assassination, now belongs to the Earl of Galloway. On the north side of the railway, a little to the west of the station, there stood an old house which formed part of a preceptory of the Knight Templars of Torphichen, and was used in the reign of James VI. as the Scottish mint, but was pulled down in 1886. The Grange is the seat of H. M. Cadell esq. J.P., V.D. and Preston House of Seton Thomson esq. Champfleurie is now occupied by James Adam esq. C.B.E., K.C. The Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., P.C., LL.D. the Marquess of Linlithgow O.B.E. the Duke of Hamilton, the trustees of the late Patrick Baron Seton esq. Col. Sir Charles Chalmers D.L., J.P. and H. M. Cadell esq. J.P., V.D. are the principal landowners. The soil in the south and south-east is a pretty strong clay, stiff and upon a retentive subsoil more suited to pasturage than to the plough, and in all other parts is generally light and free, easily cultivated and rich in its returns. The area of the parish is 10,264 acres; burgh, 286 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £21,462, and landward £29,674; the population of the whole of the civil parish in 1911 was 7,567, of which the royal and parliamentary burgh contained 4,002. Included in the total population are 10 officials and 205 inmates of the Combination Poor Law Institution. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 7,709, which includes 142 in Ecclesmachan civil parish.

LOCH MILL is a siding and goods station of the railway about one half-mile distant from Linlithgow.

BRIDGEND, a small village on the Edinburgh road, 3 miles east from Linlithgow, consists mainly of the cottages of the working miners at the shale works adjacent.

LINLITHGOW-BRIDGE is a small village, partly in the parish of Muiravonside, Stirlingshire, but chiefly in the parish of Linlithgow, and in the small debt court district of Linlithgow; it stands at both ends of the bridge over the river Avon, on the road from Linlithgow to Falkirk, about 1½ miles west from Linlithgow station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway, 7 east from Falkirk and 18 west from Edinburgh. The general appearance of the country around is undulating, diversified by small summits of hill and woods. The stone bridge over the river Avon was built about 1650, by George (Livingston), 9th Lord Livingston and 3rd Earl of Linlithgow (d. 1 Feb. 1690). A little above it is the viaduct of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway over the Avon, with 20 arches of beautiful masonry, some of them upwards of 90 feet high. The nearest place of worship is at Linlithgow. The rateable value is £1,438.

LIVINGSTONE is a parish and small village; the parish, which extends for about 4 miles on the north side of the Breich water, is in the small debt court district of Bathgate. The village is 4 miles south-east from Bathgate, about 6 south from Linlithgow, on the road from Glasgow to Edinburgh, and 1½ miles from Livingstone Station. The parish church was rebuilt in 1732, and repaired in 1837. Here is also a United Free church. The soil varies from strong clay and loam to poor moor land. The shale oil works of the Pumpherston Oil Co. Limited are in this parish; and there are likewise the ruins of an old Peel tower and a royal hunting lodge. Dechmont House, the residence of A. J. Meldrum esq. adjoins the hamlet of Dechmont, 5 miles south of Linlithgow, on the Edinburgh road. The Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., P.C. representatives of the late Capt. Robert Steuart D.L., J.P. and the trustees of the late Sir James Pender bart. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,368 acres; rateable value, £31,790; population in 1901, 2,764 and in 1911, 3,714 in the civil parish and 1,412 in the parish ward.

LIVINGSTONE STATION is a large mining village with a population of 1,500, about 4 miles distant by road from Bathgate and 3¼ from Uphall. There is a station on the Edinburgh and Bathgate section of the North British Railway.

DECHMONT is a small village on the Edinburgh & Glasgow main road 4¾ miles from Bathgate and 1¾ from Uphall. The North British Railway has a station here, a single line railway connecting with Edinburgh and Bathgate main line from Uphall. Bangour Village Asylum, belonging to the Edinburgh District Board of Control, is in the immediate vicinity and there is a railway station within the grounds. The population of Dechmont village exclusive of asylum is about 500

QUEENSFERRY, or South Queensferry, is a seaport town on the Firth of Forth, wholly in the parish of Dalmeny, under Secretary of Scotland's Order, small debt court district of Linlithgow and poor combination of the same, and is 8 miles west from Edinburgh and 8 east from Bo'ness; it is sometimes styled South Queensferry, to distinguish it from the town of same name on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, and took its name from the use made of the ferry by Margaret, the queen of Malcolm Canmore, in her journeys to and from Dunfermline. Queensferry ecclesiastical parish, which is very small, faces the Forth, and is bounded on three sides by that of Dalmeny. As a royal burgh, Queensferry is governed by a provost, two bailies, and a town council. This burgh, together with Stirling, Culross, Inverkeithing and Dunfermline, formed the Stirling parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member, but under the "Representation of the People Act, 1918," it was merged in the county of Linlithgow for parliamentary purposes. The water supply is now obtained from Mid-Calder. There is a good harbour accessible at any time, and about half a mile distant is Dalmeny station, on the Edinburgh and Dunfermline section of the North British railway. At Newhalls (a little to the eastward of the town) is a ferry across the Forth, and a pier. A short distance westward is another pier for the convenience of boats when they cannot make the former point. At this place the Firth is contracted to a gut of one mile in width. On a height above the town stands Dundas Castle, with a modern house adjoining and bearing the same name, the seat of Sir John Stewart-Clark bart. The Established church was consecrated in 1633: there are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches. At the west end of the town are the ruins of the Carmelite priory of St. Mary, dating from 1330; the tower and part of the choir have been restored by the Dundas family, and are used by the Episcopal church; the Rev. Arthur Twidle L.Th. has been priest in charge since 1919. The cemetery is in Dalmeny parish. About half a mile to the westward is Port Edgar, so named from Prince Edgar having landed there. From this place George IV. when on a visit to Scotland, embarked on his return to England. The old Town house has a good steeple, in which a clock was erected, by public subscription, at a cost of over £200, in commemoration of Queen Victoria's Jubilee of 1887. The Countess of Rosebery Memorial Hall, erected in 1893, by the Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T. at a cost of over £3,000, contains a library and reading room, billiard and games rooms, and also a grand hall for concerts and public meetings. About half of the town of Queensferry is in the ecclesiastical parish of Dalmeny.

The Forth Bridge.—The channel of the Forth here is contracted by the promontory of North Queensferry to a width of a little over a mile. Including the north and south approaches, the structure is rather over 1½ miles in length and runs nearly north and south from the west end of Dalmeny Park to Carlin Knowes, Fifeshire. The spans are 26 in number, of which two are of 1,710 feet, two of 680 feet, 15 of 168 feet, four of 57 feet and three of 25 feet. The south approach, 1,994 feet in length, consists of four stone arches, 57 feet span, 10 spans of 168 feet each, carrying an iron lattice girder bridge, succeeded by a half span (cantilever) of 680 feet, two cantilever spans of 1,710 feet each, then a half span and five lattice girder spans, succeeded by three arches of granite, each 25 feet span; these last eight spans form the north approach, 980 feet in length; the portion crossing the deep water channel is 5,322 feet in length and is formed by three double cantilevers, each resting on four masonry piers, 60 feet in diameter, rising 18 feet above high water, the centre of each cantilever being 381 feet above high water. There is a double set of steel rails laid in steel troughs; the total weight of steel used was 54,076 tons. The engineers were the late Sir John Fowler bart. (d. 1898) and the late Sir Benjamin Baker, and the resident engineer, Mr. F. E. Cooper, the contractors being Messrs. Tancred Arrol and Co.

Public Baths (fresh and salt water) were erected by the Burgh of Queensferry in 1898, at a cost of £3,500. A fair is held on the second Friday in August. The area of the royal burgh is 88 acres; rateable value, £14,932; the population in 1901 was 1,850 and in 1911, 3,510 in the royal and parliamentary borough, including 1,510 men in the Royal Navy. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 2,372.

SEAFIELD, see LIVINGSTONE.

TORPHICHEN is a parish and village; the former being in the small debt court district of Linlithgow, and bounded north and east by the parish of Linlithgow, south-east by Bathgate, and west and south by the county of Stirling: the village lies 2 miles west from Westfield station on the Blackstone and Bathgate branch of the North British railway and on the road to Linlithgow, from which town it is 4½ miles distant. Adjacent to the village, on the north-east, are some remains of the hospital or preceptory of Torphichen, the principal house in Scotland appertaining to the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem. This place gives the title of baron to the Sandilands family; Sir James Sandilands, the first peer (1564) was prior or preceptor here of the Knights of St. John. The parish church occupies the site of the nave of the preceptory church, and the ruins of the transept and a portion of the choir remain. There is also a United Free Church. The Memorial Hall, erected in 1897 by Mrs. Fitzgerald in memory of her husband, Capt. Gerald Fitzgerald, at a cost of about £1,400, contains reading and billiard rooms. The parish, although in some parts moorland, is generally fertile; coal and ironstone are found within it, and there is a paper mill. The Coltness Iron Co. James Young esq. and James Wood esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 9,956 acres; rateable value, £23,976; population in 1901, 3,225, and in 1911, 4,048 in the civil and 1,590 in the ecclesiastical parish.

BLACKRIDGE is a village in this parish, and an agricultural district on the Edinburgh and Glasgow road, three quarters of a mile north-west from Westcraigs station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway and 5½ west from Bathgate. Here is a United Free church. Several coalfields in the vicinity afford employment to the inhabitants.

WESTCRAIGS is a mining village in this parish, on the road from Bathgate to Airdrie, with a station (locally in Lanarkshire) on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway.

WESTFIELD, now a hamlet in this parish, is about 2 miles from Torphichen.

UPHALL is a parish and village; the former, in the small debt court district of Linlithgow, is bounded by Kirkliston on the north-east and east, by Mid-Calder on the south, Livingstone on the west, and Linlithgow and Ecclesmachan on the north. It is intersected from west to east by the road from Glasgow to Edinburgh, and is watered by a rivulet called Broxburn; its extent from north to south is 4 miles, with a breadth of 3 miles. Besides the village of Uphall, it contains the small town of Broxburn. Uphall is 1 mile north of the station of that name on the main line of the North British railway, and 1 mile south of Broxburn is Drumshoreland station, on the same line; the village is distant 11 miles west from Edinburgh and 5½ north-east from Bathgate. In the Buchan vault of the parish church are buried the Hon. Henry Erskine, 2nd son of the 10th Earl of Buchan, lord advocate of Scotland, who died 8 Oct. 1817, and his brother Thomas, 3rd son of the 10th Earl, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, created Baron Erskine, 1806, and died in 1823. There is also a United Free church and a Public hall. Shale, which is now so largely used in the manufacture of paraffin oil, of which there are three extensive works in the locality, is found in abundance in the neighbourhood, and is said to be of a very rich quality; owing to this important industry, there has been a great increase in the population within the past few years; bone manures are also manufactured in the parish. The district abounds in coal, sandstone, limestone and ironstone. In this parish is Almondell House, the seat of the Earl of Buchan D.L., J.P. Middleton Hall and estate have been bought by the Broxburn Oil Co. Limited. The Earl of Buchan, the trustees of the late Robert Bell esq. the trustees of the late J. C. Shairp esq. J.P. and the Broxburn Oil Co. Limited are the principal landowners. The area comprises 4,529 acres; rateable value, £98,363; population in 1901 was 10,536, and in 1911, 12,766 in the civil and 4,956 in the ecclesiastical parish.

WHITBURN (or Whiteburn) is a police burgh and parish in the Linlithgow poor combination and small debt court district, bounded on the south-east by the Breich water, which separates it from Edinburghshire, and on the north by the river Almond. The Cultrig and Bickerton brooks, tributaries of the Almond, both rise in the south-west portion of the parish. The village is on the road from Edinburgh to Glasgow, 1 mile west from East Whitburn station on the Bathgate and Morningside branch of the North British railway, 4 south-west from Bathgate and 10 south from Linlithgow. Bents station, also on the Bathgate and Morningside branch, is in this parish, 5 miles south from Bathgate. The village is well built and regular. The inhabitants are supported by the coal and iron mines with which the parish abounds. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The Baillie Institute, opened in 1881, was the gift of Lady Baillie, of Polkemmet. The schools were built by the trustees of the late Mr. Wilson, under a bequest made by him for the purpose. These schools were purchased by the school board and are now under the County Education Authority, and the trustees devote the endowments for the purpose of encouraging higher education, by means of scholarships and bursaries. Professor John Brown D.D. the well-known biblical expositor, was born here 12 July, 1784. Sir Adrian William M. Baillie bart. of Polkemmet, the trustees of the late John Storry and Mrs. Jane Dalziel are the principal landowners. The soil varies considerably. In the upper portion of the parish there is much moss and pasture land; in the lower, the surface is arable.

FAULDHOUSE, formerly called Crofthead, is a large mining village in the parish of Whitburn, with stations on the Caledonian railway main line between Edinburgh and Glasgow and on the Morningside section of the North British line, and about 6 miles south from Bathgate. Fauldhouse is a quoad sacra parish. Population in 1911, 3,923.

LONGRIDGE is a small village in the parish of Whitburn, 1½ miles north from Breich station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the Caledonian railway, and about 6 south from Bathgate. Here is a United Free church.

EAST WHITBURN is a colliery village with an estimated population of 500.

EAST BENHAR is a colliery village in Whitburn parish, with an estimated population of 600.

STONEYBURY COLLIERY is also a village in the parish. Population, 2,000.

The area of the parish comprises 9,782 acres and the burgh, 454 acres; rateable value, burgh, £5,489; landward, £60,361; population in 1901, 6,835 and in 1911, 8,379, viz.: police burgh, 1,876; Fauldhouse (including Crofthead), 3,923; landward, 2,580. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 4,456.

THE LOTHIANS

LOTHIAN was in ancient times a district of the kingdom of Northumbria, and is now represented by the counties of Linlithgow (West Lothian), Edinburghshire (Mid-Lothian) and Haddingtonshire (East Lothian). Mid-Lothian is popularly used for Parliamentary purposes as a synonym for Edinburghshire.

MORAYSHIRE

(Or ELGINSHIRE)

So designated from being the central division of the "Province of Moray," is one of the northern counties of Scotland; bounded on the north-east by the North Sea, and on the north-west by the Moray Firth, on the east and south-east by Banffshire, on the south and south-west by Inverness-shire, and on the west by the county of Nairn. It has about 30 miles of coast line indented by several small harbours. The figure of Morayshire is very irregular, being intersected in several places by districts of the counties which form its boundaries; with Nairn it is so intimately connected that, in speaking of its shape, that small county is not unfrequently included in the description. Thus conjoined, the district is somewhat of a triangular figure—with the apex pointed inland—and in this quarter partaking of the wild, rocky and mountainous character of the Highlands. The county comprises 304,931 acres of land and 3,381 of water, and extends from north to south 30 miles, and from east to west 25 miles. In point of size Morayshire ranks as the eighteenth and in population as the eighteenth amongst Scottish counties, having a population in 1901 of 44,800 and in 1911, 43,427, viz.: males 20,493 and females 22,934. In 1911 the number of houses was: inhabited, 9,793; uninhabited, 737, and building, 39.

History.—In ancient times the limits of the county were much more extensive than at present, comprehending all that tract of country which lies between the river Spey on the east, the Beauly on the north-west, and in the northern confines of Argyllshire on the south-west. The remains of antiquity are numerous, of which the cathedral of Elgin, the Bishop's palace at Spynie, the priory of Pluscardine, the estates of Lochindorb and Dunphail, and the "dun" of Relugas, are the chief. Of the struggles of the natives with the Danes, who infested the district in former ages, there are various testimonials, such as "cairns," monumental pillars &c. &c. The "Province of Moray," anciently so important and extensive, in the present day is without any political distinction, and is divided into three several shires of Banff, Moray (or Elgin) and Nairn. On the east it is separated from Aberdeenshire by the Deveron; on the west it is bounded by Inverness-shire, and on the north it has the large arm of the sea, designated from it the Moray Firth. So late as the time of Charles I. the Highlanders considered Moray as a sort of neutral land, where every man was at liberty to take his prey. The province of Moray suffered more, perhaps, than any other district in Scotland by the civil wars. The people were then generally attached to the covenant, and, as Montrose made it one of his principal scenes of action, it is easy to conceive that its peaceable farmers were not permitted to have both their opinions and their goods undisturbed. Montrose, in his descent upon Moray, in 1645, after his victory of Innerlochy, destroyed all the houses of such as did not join his standard, and gave up the towns of Banff, Cullen and Elgin to indiscriminate pillage.

Soil, Surface, Climate, Produce &c.—The soil of this county, though less uniform than that of Banffshire, is for the most part a sandy loam—in some places a sandy gravel; considerable tracts are of very fertile clay, and of the most genial mould. The low country may be pictured as a large plain, extending from the Spey westward, between the shore and a range of mountains, for the whole length of the district, nearly 40 miles, but of unequal breadth, from about 5 to 12 miles or more, measured in a straight line from the hills to the shore; this plain, however, is diversified over its whole extent by ridges of lower hills in generally nearly parallel to the shore; beyond this are valleys of great fertility and beauty, near the sources of the rivers Spey, Lossie and Findhorn, with the lesser vales along the banks of the tributary streams which pervade the intervening hills. Within the range of the mountain district the county may be described as chiefly pastoral; the arable land, in most instances, hanging upon the acclivities of the valleys, or stretching out in narrow plains upon the banks of the waters which wind among the hills—the wideness of the valley bearing a relative proportion to the size of the river. The upper part of the county is popularly termed "the Brae of Moray," and is mountainous and woody, and abounds in beautiful lakes. Agriculture is pursued in a spirited manner, and the land in general yields a higher rent than that of the neighbouring shires; and the greater portion of the waste land is now either brought into cultivation or planted with forest trees. In the lower part of the county the Duke of Fife and other proprietors formed plantations to so great an extent that almost every part of the land inaccessible to the plough has been covered with different species of forest trees. The south of this county produces principally oats, but the north is unsurpassed for the quantity and quality of the crops of turnips, potatoes, barley and wheat. The chief crops, as shown by the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1920," were: Oats, 24,629 acres; barley, including bere, 10,784; wheat, 580; rye, 387; total of corn crops, 36,463; turnips and swedes, 14,120 acres; potatoes, 1,855; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. 231: hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 5,628 acres; pasture (not for hay), 33,116 acres. The total area of the land (excluding water) is 304,931 acres, of which 92,915 acres was mountain and heath land used for pasture; permanent grass, 7,018 acres; arable land, 91,587 acres.

To the breeding and rearing of cattle much attention is devoted, the polled Aberdeenshire and the pure short-horned being the breeds most highly prized. The live stock in 1920 comprised 3,433 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 1,023; cows in milk, 5,450; cows in calf, but not in milk, 386; heifers in calf, 337; other cattle, two years and above, 3,736; one year and under two, 6,929; under one year, 4,835; ewes kept for breeding, 17,533; other sheep, one year and above, 6,681; under one year, 15,482; sows kept for breeding, 195; other pigs, 1,350.

Little can be said respecting manufactures; woollen stuffs are made to a small extent, which, together with grain, cattle, salmon, hewn freestone, wood and whisky, comprehend the principal exports; the chief imports being coal, iron, timber and manures. There are also ship and boat building yards, breweries, tanneries &c. The minerals raised in 1919 were brick clay, 5,020 tons; gravel and sand, 1,109 tons; igneous rock, 570 tons and sandstone, 7,399 tons. Herring fishing is prosecuted at several villages on the coast, and fine salmon fishing at the mouths of the Spey and Findhorn, and all along the sea coasts. The coast of this district, although within the fifty-eighth degree of north latitude, has ever been distinguished for the mildness of its climate; the hardier kinds of fruit, all the varieties of the apple, and almost all of the pear and of the plum, by a little attention may be abundantly produced on every farm; whilst flowers and fruit of the more rare species are brought to perfection in the gardens and orchards of this county. With respect to the winds, the most prevalent gales are from the north-west. This part of the county presents no object so elevated as to attract the clouds or impede their course; and from this cause, it is concluded, falls of snow are comparatively unfrequent and of small depth, as they are drifted over the subjacent levels insomuch that the operations of husbandry are but little interrupted by the inclemency of the weather. It is asserted that in the lower parts of Moray the climate is as warm, and the atmosphere at least as dry, as in any district in Scotland; in the higher quarter the weather is more mild than in the adjoining county of Banff, at the same distance from the sea coast—a natural consequence of its local position, the progress of cultivation and the inherent warmth of the soil.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The principal rivers are the Spey, the Findhorn and the Lossie, all flowing in a northerly direction and each teeming with the finest salmon; the Spey and Findhorn rise in Inverness-shire, and reach the sea at Garmouth, the end of an estuary on the east of the county and Findhorn bay on the west near Forres, and the Lossie, which is smaller than the former rivers, rises in the hills near Dallas and Strathspey and debouches at Lossiemouth. There are many delightful lakes, of which Loch Spynie is most deserving of notice; it is 3 miles in length and 1 in breadth, and appears to have been formerly a firth of the sea, though it is now shut up at the east and west by a long extent of valuable ground. In accordance with this apparency, the land between the lake and the sea still retains the appellation of Ross Isle; and a corroborative proof of the accuracy of the popular designation is exhibited by the sea shells (particularly those of the oyster) that are found on the margin of the lake, several feet below the surface of the earth. Loch Spynie produces several kinds of fish, but none in such abundance as the perch and the pike. The railways in this county are the Great North of Scotland and the Highland lines, the former entering at the north of Tillynaught Junction (Banffshire), from which place is a branch to Banff; the line running westward by the coast branch, via Cullen, Buckie &c. runs to Elgin, where it is joined by a branch from Keith, via Craigellachie Junction, and Rothes, the branch from Craigellachie to Boat of Gartan running through the south-east of the county from Elgin; there is also a branch to Lossiemouth. The Highland railway enters the county from Keith, via Mulben and Orbliston, from which place there is a branch to Fochabers, runs to Elgin, thence to Alves, with a branch to Burghead and Hopeman on the north coast, and turning west proceeds to Forres, and north-east to Nairn, and south to Grantown and Kingussie, Perthshire.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Morayshire comprises 19 civil parishes and 21 complete and parts of three ecclesiastical parishes; it contains two royal burghs, Elgin and Forres, and four police burghs, Burghead, Grantown-on-Spey, Lossiemouth and Rothes. The county, in conjunction with Nairnshire, returns one member. The parliamentary constituency for 1919 was 23,976.

BURGHEAD,

DUFFUS PARISH, HOPEMAN, CUMMINGSTOWN, NEW DUFFUS AND ROSEISLE.

BURGHEAD is a police burgh, situated on a bold headland jutting out into the Moray Firth, in the parish of Duffus, 9 miles west from Elgin and about 10 north-east from Forres, in the Morayshire poor combination and Elgin small debt court district, and has a station on the Alves and Hopeman branch of the Highland railway. It was constituted a burgh in 1895 under the Burgh Police of Scotland Acts, 1892-93. It possesses a pier and harbour. Here are Established and United Free churches. Burghead was anciently a Roman as well as a Danish station; the remains of a fort are still visible, and there is a well dug out of the solid rock, known by the name of "The Roman Well." The inhabitants are chiefly employed in fishing. There is a coasting trade for the supply of the neighbourhood. Area of burgh, 197 acres; rateable value, £3,936. In 1911 the population was 1,595, and the inhabited houses numbered 377. Population of Burghead ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 2,056.

Duffus parish extends along the shore of the Moray Firth to the north of Elgin, from which the church is about 5 miles distant. Hopeman railway station is 2 miles from the burgh. The parish is about 9½ miles in length, by about 4 in breadth, and includes beside Burghead, the villages of Cummingstown, Hopeman, New Duffus and Roseisle. In the parish is an Established church, and also a mission hall. It is a flat district, chiefly agricultural. Duffus House is the seat of Lady Dunbar, and Gordonstown House the seat of Sir William G. Gordon-Cumming bart. The trustees of the late Sir A. Hamilton-Dunbar bart. Sir W. G. Gordon-Cumming bart. George Ross Mackessack esq. the trustee of the late Edward Mortimer esq. and Thomas Duff Gordon Duff esq. are the principal landowners. The area of Duffus parish is 9,565 acres; rateable value, £16,042; population in 1911, 4,005, of which 1,595 were in the burgh. The population of Duffus ward in 1911 was 932, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 1,949.

CUMMINGSTOWN is a small village, situated on the road midway between Burghead and Hopeman, and has a Mission hall.

HOPEMAN is a village, situated 2 miles east of Burghead, on the coast of the Moray Firth, with a neat harbour, which in 1888 was greatly improved, but the shipping of the port is not extensive. It is a rising bathing place and has a nine-hole golf course, and also the terminus of the branch line from Alves, on the Highland railway, being the centre of the parish of Duffus. School Management Committee and Parish Council meetings are held here. There are United Free and Baptist churches. The population of Hopeman ward in 1911 was 1,478.

NEW DUFFUS is a small village near the parish church of Duffus, prettily situated, and entirely agricultural. Hopeman, 2 miles distant, is the nearest railway station.

ROSEISLE is a hamlet near Burghead, 6 miles north-west of Elgin. COLTFIELD, about 1¼ miles distant, is the nearest railway station. Population returned with the parish.

EDINKILLIE is a parish south of Forres and Rafford parishes, in the Nairn poor combination and Forres small debt court district. The river Divie, a tributary of the Findhorn, flows through the parish. The Dorboch, which unites with the Divie before its junction with the Findhorn, rises in Loch an Dorb in the south of the parish. The Highland railway passes from north to south through the parish, with stations at Dava and Dunphail, and crosses the Divie by a viaduct of seven arches, the height from the surface of the water to the rails being about 110 feet. There are several hills on the east side of the parish ranging about 1,500 feet. The woods of Darnaway on the west, and Altyre and Logie on the east, are very extensive. The church, which is in the centre of the parish, and about 9 miles south from Forres, stands on the banks of the Divie. Dunphail House, the residence of the Hon. Robert Bruce, stands a little north of the church, and near are the ruins of the old castle. The ruins of a castle also occupy an island in Lochindorb loch. The Earl of Moray, Sir W. G. Gordon-Cumming bart. Major the Hon. Robert Bruce, John McDonald esq. and Major Alastair Bruce Murray are the principal landowners. The area comprises 34,846 acres; rateable value, £7,397; population in 1911 was 832 in the civil and 789 in the ecclesiastical parish.

ELGIN

ELGIN is a city and royal burgh, and the capital of Morayshire, a parish and the seat of a presbytery in the synod of Moray, and is the head of a small debt court district, and within the Morayshire poor combination, 189 miles north of Edinburgh by way of Aberdeen and Huntly and 153 by way of Perth and Forres, 33 north of Brechin, 64 west of Aberdeen, 37 north-east of Inverness, 12 east-by-north of Forres and 9 west of Fochabers; pleasantly situated on the right bank of the river Lossie, about 6 miles above its mouth, and surrounded by hills clad with pine, beech, oak and elm trees. Railways from five different points meet here, viz.:—from Rothes on the south, Keith and Banff on the east, Lossiemouth on the north and Forres on the west; the lines from Keith and Forres being part of the Highland railway, the others Great North of Scotland. It is the general supposition that the town was originally a settlement of Helgy, a general of the army of Sigurd, the Norwegian Earl of Orkney, who, about the year 927, conquered Caithness, Sutherland, Ross and Moray, and it is said that from this person the name of Elgin is derived; and as the word "Helgyn" is still used in the inscription upon the seal of the town, it is probable that this etymology is correct. So early as the reign of William the Lion a castle was built here, the ruins of which are still visible on an eminence called Lady hill, on the north-west side of the town. A monumental column, erected by public subscription, in memory of the last Duke of Gordon, now stands on this hill. The Right Hon. Sir Archibald Williamson bart. P.C. Member of Parliament for the counties of Moray and Nairn, acquired subjects in High street, Elgin, for the purpose of converting the same into an open space and garden and constructing thereon caretakers' houses and providing a suitable access and approach to the Lady hill, Elgin, and generally with the view of effectuating improvements in the amenity and surroundings of Lady hill and vicinity; Sir Archibald gifted the subjects and also the sum of £300 to the city and royal burgh of Elgin for behoof of the community thereof, in grateful commemoration of the victorious peace after the sacrifices of the Great War, 1914-1918.

The royal burgh consists of parts of the parishes of Elgin, St. Andrews-Lhanbryde and Spynie. The government is vested in a lord provost, four bailies, and 9 councillors. The burgh, together with those of Banff, Cullen, Inverurie, Kintore and Peterhead, formed the Elgin District of Burghs, constituted under the Reform Act of 1832, returning one member to Parliament, but now, under the "Representation of the People Act, 1918," it has been merged into the counties of Moray and Nairn for parliamentary purposes. The water supply, under the control of the Council, is obtained from Blackhills, 5 miles distant, and Eastertown, 2 miles.

The cathedral of the Holy Trinity, Elgin, a majestic and beautiful ruin, belonged to the see of Moray, founded by Malcolm III. surnamed "Canmore," and for many years seated at Spynie, but in 1224 transferred to Elgin, which by that time had become a place of importance; in the same year also the cathedral was dedicated, but about 1240 received some damage, and in 1270 was injured by fire, and the necessary repairs involved various additions; in 1390 the fabric again suffered by fire at the hands of Alexander Stewart, Earl of Buchan, known as "The Wolf of Badenoch," and in 1402 was plundered by another chieftain: portions of the building were subsequently restored or rebuilt, but in 1658 the work of spoliation began, and the lead was stripped from the roofs in order to provide ammunition for the Scottish soldiers then campaigning in the Low Countries; in 1594 it was only in partial use, but up to 1640 services continued to be held within the ruins. The church, when complete, consisted of a choir of seven bays, with aisles of five bays, an octagonal chapter-house, approached through a vestibule from the north choir aisle, transepts, nave of six bays, with double aisles, south porch and central and western towers; the total length is 300 feet; the width across the nave, 98 feet, and through the transept, 114 feet. The earliest existing portions are the ends of the transepts, now only fragmentary, but representing the Transitional church of the 12th and early 13th centuries; the choir and the earlier part of the chapter-house date from 1270; the former is an extremely elegant example of Early English, the dog-tooth ornament being very freely employed; the chapter-house was restored in 1462, and still retains its clustered central pier and vaulting and the flamboyant tracery of one window: the central tower was begun during the period 1397-1406, but in 1506 it fell, and its re-erection was not completed till 1538; in 1711, owing to the weakness of the later piers, it again fell, destroying or seriously injuring the north transept and the nave arcades adjoining: of the nave nothing is left but some of the bases of the piers, most of which have been restored: the western towers are now reduced to the belfry stage, and reach a height of 84 feet; between them is the western entrance, a fine and deeply recessed portal of eight orders, with much carved work, and enclosing a double doorway of later date with a vesica panel in the tympanum, the whole being highly enriched; over the entrance are three panelled gablets, and the great west window above is an insertion of the early 15th century: another striking doorway is that of the south transept: in the choir and transepts are remains of a number of tombs of bishops and others, some of which retain more or less mutilated effigies; the sedilia are almost entirely destroyed, but piscinæ exist in several parts of the fabric, and in the choir stands part of the shaft of a Celtic cross, discovered in the town in 1823. In the graveyard to the south are the steps and shaft-base of a cross, and to the north-west stands the episcopal palace, built c. 1535-73, and till 1800 almost intact. The remains of the cathedral are now in charge of H.M. Office of Works, and are well cared for.

High street is about a mile in length; in the centre stands the Parish Church, a building in the Classic style, with a lofty tower at the east end: it will seat nearly 2,000; west of this, on the market pavement, is a fountain, and in the middle of the High street stands the "Muckle Cross," originally erected in 1650, destroyed in 1790 and rebuilt at the cost of William Macandrew esq. of Westwood, Essex, in 1888: it is hexagonal, with a centre shaft, from which all proclamations are made; there are several other places of worship.

The Academy, in Moray street, a building in the Classical style, with Roman-Doric portico, from the plans of Messrs. A. and W. Reed, of Elgin, was built in 1886, at a cost of £8,000, and a new wing for science teaching was added in 1901 at a cost of £2,500, and more recently an art department has been added to the science building.

Anderson's Institution was constituted under the bequest of Major-General Andrew Anderson H.E.I.C.S. who left between £70,000 and £80,000 to found and endow an institution in his native town, for the support of old age and the education of youth; the existing structure, a fine building of stone in the Classic style, was erected at a cost of nearly £12,000, including furnishing; the school is under the control of the Education Authority. Dr. Gray's Hospital, a fine building of stone with portico and dome, was founded under the will of Dr. Alexander Gray, of India, at a cost of £20,000, and was presented, about 1896, with £1,000 by Mr. John Munro, of The Knoll, Bishopmill, and in 1905, with £10,000, by the late James Shepherd esq. of Rossend Castle, Burntisland, whilst the estate of Flemington, in Inverness-shire, with a rental of about £240 per annum, was bequeathed by the late Dr. Urquhart, of Elgin, for the benefit of the hospital; there are 60 beds and 4 cots. Another fine building is the Elgin Club House, in Commerce street; this is in the Italian style.

In North street are several fine buildings, including the Episcopal church of the Holy Trinity, built in 1829, and improved and enlarged in 1876: it affords sittings for 300 persons. Here also are the Trinity Lodge Rooms.

On the south side of the town stands the Town Hall, a building in the Jacobean style, with lofty tower, erected from plans prepared by Mr. A. Marshall Mackenzie, of Aberdeen. The Free Library, in Cooper Park, was founded in 1892, Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle, presenting £500 for the purchase of books. The Mansion, in Cooper park, is now the library building, and the park, extending to about 70 acres, has been laid out for football, cricket, bowls and hockey, and also contains an artificial pond used for skating; both were presented to his native city by Sir George A. Cooper bart. of Hursley Park, Hants, and The College, Elgin, who also fitted up the interior. The reading room, lending and reference libraries, and the librarian's room are on the ground floor. The second floor comprises the museum and art gallery, and on the third floor are apartments for the librarian. The library contains over 8,000 volumes.

The leading hotels are the Gordon Arms, in High street and the Station Hotel, facing the Great North of Scotland railway station. Two newspapers are published here, the "Elgin Courant and Courier" and the "Northern Scot and Moray and Nairn Express." In High street are branches of the British Linen Bank, Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, Bank of Scotland, North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, Bank of Scotland (formerly Caledonian Banking Co. Limited), Union Bank of Scotland Limited and Royal Bank of Scotland, and there is also a Savings Bank. The old and new court houses, also in High street, were built at different periods, the former about 1843, and the latter about 1864. The church and convent of the Greyfriars, long in ruins, was partly rebuilt by the late Marquis of Bute K.T. The Victoria School of Science and Art, erected as a memorial of the Jubilee of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, is a building in the late Romanesque style, from a design by Mr. George Sutherland, Elgin, and cost about £3,000.

The trade of Elgin has been greatly increased by the opening up of railway communication. There are two woollen manufactories, which employ many hands, and two iron foundries and three saw mills. Here also is the establishment of the Northern Stud Limited, one of the largest of its kind in the United Kingdom. Of the other branches, a trade in corn, wool and timber is of some consequence, and there is a large tannery, while in the neighbourhood are the famous distilleries of Milton Duff, Glenlossie, Glen Moray, Coleburn, Linkwood, Glen Elgin and Longmorn, also several stone quarries. Alexander II. in 1224, granted to the burgesses of Elgin a guild of merchants, which still continues though the funds of the corporation were, for a considerable period, merged in the common good: connected with the guildry there is a flourishing charity fund from which decayed members and their families derive substantial pensions. There are several mineral springs in the vicinity of Elgin. The weekly corn markets are held on Friday; cattle auctions are also held every Friday. The feeing markets are 26th May, if Friday, if not, Friday before, the first Friday in July (harvest) and the Friday before the 28th November. The area of the parish comprises 19,159 acres; area of burgh, 993 acres; population of the parish in 1911, 10,375, including 25 officials and 158 inmates in the District Mental Hospital. The total population of the royal, police and parliamentary burgh drawn from three parishes (Elgin, St. Andrews-Lhanbryde and Spynie) in 1911 was 8,656, and the number of inhabited houses, 1,963. The rateable value of the burgh is £54,186; landward, £16,673. The land in the city is chiefly freehold. In the parish and about 6 miles south-west of the town, on the left bank of the Lochty, or Black Burn, are the ruins of Pluscarden Priory, partially restored in 1899 by the late Marquis of Bute K.T.

NEW ELGIN is a village in Elgin civil parish.

FINDHORN, a small village seaport, lying on the northern headland of Findhorn bay, in the parish of Kinloss, Morayshire poor combination and Forres Small Debt Court district, is virtually the port of Forres, from which it is distant in a northerly direction about 5 miles; it is the centre of the fishery trade of this portion of the coast, and has also a small coasting trade, chiefly in pit props, which are shipped to Newcastle and Sunderland. The harbour is well sheltered. Kinloss station, on the Highland railway, is distant about 3 miles; the line constructed from that station to Findhorn is now closed. There is a United Free church in the village, and also a Public Library. The population in 1911 of Findhorn Parish Ward was 420.

KINLOSS is a parish on the Moray Firth, 3 miles from north to south, and the same in width, with a station on the Highland Railway, and is in Morayshire poor combination and Forres Small Debt Court district; the village is 2 miles north of Forres, and has an Established Church and a school. Here, a short distance from the church, are the scanty remains of the Cistercian Abbey of Kinloss, founded in 1141 by King David I., and confirmed to the monks by papal bull in 1174; it was colonised by monks from Melrose in 1303, and the abbot was mitred and sat in Parliament. King Edward I. once stayed at the abbey for nearly a month. Sir George Macpherson-Grant bart. Mrs. Dunbar-Dunbar, Alexander Matheson esq. Doon Park, Mrs. Mackessack, Alexander Brodie esq. C. M. Bruce esq. Langcot, Montagu James Grant-Peterkin esq. and R. H. Mackessack esq. are the principal landowners. The area is 5,199 acres; rateable value, £7,618; population in 1911, 851.

Post Office, Kinloss; Mrs. Isabella Smith, sub-postmistress. Letters through Forres, which is the nearest money order office, & Kinloss station is the nearest telegraph office

FOCHABERS is a small town and burgh of barony, in the parish of Bellie, Morayshire poor house combination and Elgin small debt court district, 47 miles east of Inverness, 12 south-west of Cullen, 9 east of Elgin and 8 north-west-by-north of Keith, with a terminal station on a branch of the Highland railway from Orbliston, and another at Fochabers Spey, locally in Banffshire, and 4 miles north-east, on the Great North of Scotland Railway; situated on the north road from Aberdeen to Inverness, and lying in a deep valley, through which the Spey runs at a little distance to the west of the town, and was originally crossed by a stone bridge of four arches, 2 of which were carried away by the great Morayshire floods of 1829 and were replaced by a metal arch. The streets diverge from a square, on the south side of which stands the parish church. The water supply to the burgh was provided at the sole expense of the sixth Duke of Richmond and first of Gordon K.G., P.C. and the inhabitants have erected a fountain in the square to commemorate the gift. The streets are lit by electricity supplied from works at Oldmills, the property of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., G.C.V.O., C.B. and an electric lamp was erected in 1906 to the Duke in appreciation of his Grace's generosity in introducing the electric light to the town. The burgh is governed by a baron bailie appointed by the Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., G.C.V.O., C.B. There are Episcopalian, Established, United Free and Catholic churches. A new United Free church was erected in 1900, at a cost of about £3,000, left for the purpose by the late William Pringle esq. of Inverness, a native of this place. The Public Institution and Free Library was erected in 1905, at a cost of about £2,600: it is a fine building of stone, and contains a concert hall with stage scenery and fittings, a reference library, and reading and billiard rooms. At the west end of the town is a gate leading into the policies of Gordon Castle, the seat of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., G.C.V.O., C.B. The Castle is a fine modern mansion, standing in an extensive deer park of over 1,200 acres; the present building is grafted on to the old tower of the Earls of Huntly, who held it from 1450 to 1684; it then stood in a gloomy morass (known as Bog of Gight), over which a stone causeway was the only means of access; this tower, which is 90 feet in height, now forms the most conspicuous feature in a large quadrangular building of four storeys, flanked by lower wings which are connected to the main building by long galleries; the interior contains many valuable pictures and some statuary. The Public baths here were the gift of the late Duchess of Richmond and Gordon. The Free school at the east end of the town, founded by Alexander Milne esq. a native of Fochabers, is a building in the Elizabethan style, erected at a cost of £4,338; by his will, dated New Orleans, 17th October, 1836, the founder bequeathed to the parishes of Bellie and Ordiquish the sum of 100,000 dollars for establishing a free school, and a balance of about £17,000 was eventually invested in heritable security, and yields an annual income of about £550, by means of which 300 children are educated. A memorial fountain was erected in October, 1895, to Major Wilson, slain during the Matabele war of 1893. The population in 1911 was 1,110, and number of inhabited houses, 274.

BELLIE parish was formerly partly in Banffshire, but by an Order of the Boundary Commissioners it is now wholly in Morayshire; it is a flat agricultural district, bounded on the west by the river Spey, and extends about 5 miles from north to south and 9 from east to west; it is in the Morayshire poor combination. The Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., G.C.V.O., C.B. and the Countess of Seafield are the principal landowners. The area of the entire parish comprises 12,778 acres; rateable value, £9,806; the population in 1911 was 2,030 in the civil and 1,749 in the ecclesiastical parish.

FORRES is a royal burgh, in Morayshire poor combination, the head of a small debt court district and the seat of a presbytery; 201 miles north-by-west from Edinburgh by way of Aberdeen, 165 by way of Brechin and Huntly, 75 north-west of Aberdeen, 27 north-east of Inverness, 21 west of Fochabers, 20 east of Fort George, 12 west of Elgin and 11 east of Nairn, with a station on the Highland railway. It is a neatly-built, clean town, and stands on rising ground; at a distance of about 5 miles is the village of Findhorn, which is its seaport. Forres possesses one of the most remarkable stone obelisks of ancient date in Britain; this interesting object stands at the east end of the town, and is supposed to commemorate a pacification concluded here between Malcolm II. and Sweno, a Danish invader, about the beginning of the 11th century: it is an enormous slab of grey stone, upwards of 20 feet in height, supported by a socket which conceals at least three feet more, and the shape resembles that of a very long wedge, or, as some fancifully describe it, a highland broadsword; the figures upon the obelisk, which are presumed to represent a battle and subsequent treaty, are wonderfully distinct, considering that they must have withstood the assaults of wind and weather during the last nine centuries. At the western extremity of the town, on an eminence, once stood a castle, wherein Duffus, one of the early Kings of Scotland, was perfidiously killed by Donald, governor of the fortress, which circumstance, it is said, Shakespeare has made use of in his dramatic version of the murder of King Duncan by Macbeth; and it was on the waste in the neighbourhood that that hero, along with Banquo (according to the old historians) met the "weird sisters," who gave him so many fatal promises. The exact spot on which that meeting is asserted by the country people to have taken place is marked by a small clump of trees, about 200 yards north from the post road between Forres and Nairn, near the toll bar, 5 miles from the former of these places, 1½ miles from Brodie station and nearly on the confines of the two counties of Moray and Nairn. On the castle eminence is a granite obelisk to the memory of Dr. Thomson, who sacrificed his life by over exertion in his attention to the wounded Russians after the famous battle of Alma. Upon an eminence to the south-east of the town stands a tower, erected by the inhabitants of Forres in honour of Lord Nelson, the walk to which, as it winds round the hill, is extremely pleasant; from its elevated situation, a fine view is hence obtained, and the tower is conspicuous for a considerable distance. Sloping to the north, where the river Findhorn sweeps round from the south-west through the Forest of Darnaway, is a modern mansion, the seat of the Earl of Moray J.P.; adjoining it is the old Castle of Darnaway, in which is a fine hall, built by Earl Randolph, regent of Scotland during the minority of David Bruce, and capable of holding 1,000 men under arms. Here Mary Queen of Scots held her court in 1566. Altyre is the residence of Sir

William G. Gordon-Cumming bart.; Brodie Castle, of Major Ian A. M. Brodie D.S.O., M.C., L.L., J.P.; Sanquhar House, of Alexander Edward esq. and Drumduan, of Captain Edward Gilbert Hay. About 2 miles below the castle, the river, which debouches into Findhorn bay, is crossed by an elegant suspension bridge, which was erected by a joint stock company, in shares of £10 each. Forres is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and 11 councillors. A sheriff small debt court sits once in every two months for the recovery of debts not exceeding £20. The trade of Forres is not of an extensive character. Manufactories for woollens, bobbins, artificial manures, two distilleries, chemical works and flour mills being the principal branches. Three-quarters of a mile from the centre of the town is situated the Leanchoil Hospital, erected in 1891, at a cost of between £6,000 and £7,000, for the burgh of Forres and the six adjoining parishes. The North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, the British Linen Bank, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Bank of Scotland and the National Bank of Scotland Limited have branches here. In the centre of the High street stands the Town House, a substantial structure, with a tower in the Scottish Baronial style surmounted by a spire; the building comprises the gaol, a court house, a council room &c.; and near to this stands a handsome Gothic market cross of four storeys, the lower one having eight pointed arches with angle buttresses surmounted by finials. A newspaper, the "Forres, Elgin and Nairn Gazette," is published every Wednesday. Owing to the configuration of the country round about Forres, the burgh enjoys a remarkable immunity from rain, the rainfall for the past few years having been ascertained from accurate observations to be about the lowest in Scotland, and this circumstance, and the soil being porous, mark out Forres as an excellent health resort. Cluny Hill House, on one of the eminences in the vicinity of the town, was built for a hydropathic establishment. There are two masonic lodges in the town. There is an Established church, two United Free churches, a Free church, and others for Episcopalians, Roman Catholics and the Evangelical Union. Anderson's Institution, founded by Jonathan Anderson esq. a native of Forres, for educating children of the humble class from the parishes of Forres, Rafford and Kinloss, was built in 1824, and adjoins the institute; this school is now placed under the Forres School Management Committee. The Forres Public school stands opposite. The Mechanics' Institute, in High street, possesses a library, a reading room and three public halls; the large hall will seat 1,000 persons. A corn market is held every Tuesday; cattle sales are also held in the auction mart every Tuesday. Feeing markets for hiring servants are held on the Saturday before the 28th of May (called Whitsunday market) and the Saturday before the 28th of November (called Martinmas market). The area of the parish comprises 5,469 acres; rateable value, landward, £6,747; area of burgh 622 acres; rateable value, £24,849; the population in 1911 was 4,932, of which 4,416 were in the burgh. The Earl of Moray, Sir William G. Gordon-Cumming bart. Montagu James Grant-Peterkin esq. Alexander Edward esq. Captain Edward Gilbert Hay, the marriage contract trustees of the late R. D. Grant esq. and Mrs. Grant are the principal landowners of the parish

GRANTOWN-ON-SPEY

GRANTOWN-ON-SPEY is a burgh and modern village in the civil parish of Cromdale, on the north bank of the Spey, with a station on the Highland railway, and another, 1½ miles distant, on the Great North of Scotland railway, rather more than a mile south of Castle Grant, 35 miles south-east from Inverness, 22 south from Forres, 8 north-east from Duthil and 6 north from Abernethy and Nethy Bridge: it is the head of a small debt court district, and was made a police burgh in 1898, and is situated in the ecclesiastical parish called "Inverallan." The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. The town is supplied with water obtained from springs rising among the Gorton Hills, about 3 miles north-west from the town. The water is brought in large pipes to two reservoirs to the north and north-west of the town. The works are the property of the Town Council. Grantown was begun about the year 1774, under the patronage of the Grant family. Large numbers of visitors from Edinburgh, Glasgow and London come here during the summer months. Branches of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the Bank of Scotland are established in the town, and there is also the Grantown Savings Bank. There are also two excellent and commodious hotels —the Grant Arms and the Palace. The Established church for the quoad sacra parish of Inverallan is an edifice of stone, built in 1884 by the late Caroline Stuart, Dowager Countess of Seafield; there is also a United Free church, an Episcopalian church and a Baptist chapel. Free church services are held in the Institute buildings. A sheriff small debt circuit court is held on the third Monday in January, the second Monday in May and the first Monday in September. The Cottage Hospital was built in 1884 by the late Caroline, Dowager Countess of Seafield, in memory of Ian Charles, 8th Earl of Seafield (d. 18 Feb. 1881). The Young Men's and Women's Christian Association Hall, erected in 1897, is a building of stone, containing lecture and concert room, tea rooms and reading room; there is also an Orphan Institution. Castle Grant, a modern mansion, with which is incorporated an ancient structure called "Comyns Tower," is a seat of the Countess of Seafield.

Here are Golf links for ladies and gentlemen, a bowling green and tennis courts.

Sales for horses, cattle and sheep are held here periodically by Messrs. Macdonald, Fraser and Co. Limited, of Perth. A penny newspaper, "The Strathspey News," is published every Saturday and "The Strathspey Herald and Grantown Advertiser" every Wednesday for Thursday. The trustees of the late Caroline, Countess of Seafield, are the principal landowners. The area is 433 acres; rateable value, £11,188; the population in 1911 was 1,451; number of inhabited houses, 373.

INVERALLAN is a quoad sacra parish formed from that of Cromdale and Duthil and Rothmeechurch, in Inverness-shire, and a hamlet, about 3 miles from Grantown, the church being, however, in the latter. The population in 1901 was 2,587, and in 1911, 3,364, of which 355 were in Inverness-shire.

DULNAIN BRIDGE is a hamlet partly in Inverallan and partly in Duthil parishes. The hamlet is much frequented by visitors during the summer months. Here is a public hall and institute, erected in 1896.

KNOCKANDO is a parish lying north-west of the river Spey, which divides it from Banffshire, and having the parishes of Rothes on the north-east, Dallas on the north-west, Cromdale on the south-west and a short border of Edinkillie on the west; its length from north-east to south-west is about 16 miles, and breadth 5. The church lies about the centre of the parish, 10 miles south-west of Rothes and 19 south of Elgin.

There is a church at ELCHIES, which was in 1913 made a quoad sacra parish. The Margach Public Hall, erected in 1910 at a cost of about £1,000, from a bequest of Peter Margach, of Gracemount, contains a library and reading and committee rooms &c. At CARRON is a Public Hall, erected in 1909 and containing a reading-room and library. James William Hamilton Grant esq. D.L., J.P. Sir George McPherson-Grant bart. and the trustees of the late Dowager Countess of Seafield are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 28,128 acres; rateable value, £14,225; population in 1911, 1,488.

ARCHIESTOWN, a village in this parish, is about 6 miles south-west of Rothes, 2½ miles from Carron, the nearest railway station, and 3 from Aberlour station, both on the Craigellachie and Boat of Garten section of the Great North of Scotland railway. It has a United Free church. The population in 1911 was 243.

LHANBRYDE.

See ST. ANDREWS-LHANBRYDE.

LOSSIEMOUTH, which is composed of the districts of Branderburgh, Lossiemouth, Seatown and Stotfield, and was created a burgh in 1890 under the Lindsay Act, is in the parish of Drainie, 5 miles north from Elgin, situated on the banks of the Lossie, at its influx into the Moray Firth, in the Morayshire poor combination and the small debt court district of Elgin. it has a station on the Great North of Scotland railway (Elgin and Lossiemouth branch), and is the seaport for Elgin, and a resort for sea-bathers. Many residents in Elgin and elsewhere have erected houses here which they occupy during the summer months. The harbour was opened in 1839, and has since been improved, at a cost of £20,000, so as to render it a safe and commodious haven for shipping. In 1891 a grant of £20,000 was obtained from the Government for deepening the harbour to admit vessels of larger tonnage. The improvement of the harbour, and the facilities of railway communication which this place has enjoyed for several years, have given a stimulus to trade which has rendered it one of the most important seaports north of Aberdeen. The town is lit with electric light from works, the property of the Council, built in 1914. The Established church of St. Geraldine is a building with a square tower: there is also a United Free church, erected, at a cost of £2,400, in place of one destroyed by fire; it is in the Early English style, with an octagonal tower and spire, which serve as a landmark to mariners. An Episcopal church was built here in 1913. The Town Hall, erected at a cost of about £1,100, was opened 2 Feb. 1885, by the late Sir George Macpherson Grant, 3 bart. (d. 1907) and Mrs. Brander-Dunbar, of Pitgaveny; the Public Library, in High street, is a building of stone erected in 1903 at a cost of about £2,000.

DRAINIE is a parish on the shore of the North Sea, bounded east by Urquhart parish, west by Duffus and south by New Spynie; it is 5 miles from east to west, by 3½ from north to south, and is nearly devoid of hills. The parish church (now disused) is 2 miles south-west of Lossiemouth. The golf links here rank amongst the finest on the North-East coast.

Sir William Gordon Gordon-Cumming bart. and Capt. James Brander-Dunbar are the principal landowners. The area of the parish of Drainie comprises 6,948 acres; rateable value, £20,542; the population in 1911 was 4,700. The area of Lossiemouth is 423 acres; rateable value, £14,176; population in 1901, 3,904 and in 1911, 4,207.

ROTHES

ROTHES is a police burgh, and also a parish within the Morayshire poor house combination and Elgin small debt court district; it is bounded on the south by Knockando, on the north by Elgin, Birnie, St. Andrew's and Speymouth, and on the east by the river Spey: it is 9 miles in length by an average breadth of 3. The town, which was formed into a police burgh in 1884, is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors, and is about 60 miles west-north-west from Aberdeen and 10 south from Elgin, situated near the western bank of the Spey, into which the Rothes burn runs. The Great North of Scotland railway has stations at Rothes town and Dandaleith, and the Highland Railway Company one at Orton, in the eastern part of the parish. There is an Established parish church, and a United Free church, rebuilt in 1900, at a cost of £2,150. Adjoining is a lecture hall. A town hall was erected in 1897 at an estimated cost of £2,200. Castle Hill was presented to the town in 1897 by the Dowager Countess of Seafield, in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her Majesty Queen Victoria. There are distilleries in the town, the chief of which are the Glen Grant Glenlivet Distillery, established in 1840, Glen Rothes, Glen Spey and Speyburn-Glenlivet, and the Macallan Distillery is also in the neighbourhood. Auchinroath is the residence of Mrs. A. J. Mitchell-Gill. The Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., G.C.V.O., C.B. the trustees of the Dowager Countess of Seafield, John Wharton Wharton Duff esq. and Mrs. Margaret Emily Dunbar-Dunbar Rivers are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 19,841 acres: rateable value, £15,340; the population in 1911 was 2,016. The area of the burgh is 678 acres; population in 1911, 1,350; inhabited houses, 317. There is a fair for harvest feeing the third Monday in July.

URQUHART is a sea-coast parish, extending for 7½ miles between the mouths of the Spey on the east and the Lossie on the west, its boundaries west and south-west marching with those of Drainie and St. Andrews-Lhanbryde, and south-east with Speymouth; it is about 6 miles in extent from north to south, and includes the villages of Garmouth and Kingston on the Spey and a very small village around the United Free church, which is 5 miles east of Elgin; it is in the Morayshire poor combination and Elgin small debt court district. The ecclesiastical parish of Urquhart includes the larger half of the parish westward, while the eastern (including Garmouth) is in the quoad sacra parish of Speymouth. There are Established and United Free churches. Near the village is a station on the Elgin and Portsoy branch of the Great North of Scotland railway. The Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., G.C.V.O., C.B., A.D.C. and Francis J. Tennant esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 12,492 acres; rateable value, £8,584; the population in 1911 was 1,589 in the civil and 889 in the ecclesiastical parish.

NAIRNSHIRE

THIS is a small maritime county in the northern part of Scotland, once forming a portion of the ancient province of Moray, and bounded on the north by the Moray Firth, on the east by the shire of Elgin, and on the south and west by the county of Inverness. It extends from the coast, on the north, to the small lake of Lochindorb (situate at its extreme southern apex) on the south, 20 miles; the breadth along the shore is about 10 miles, and its sides vary from 1 to 20 miles asunder. The shire comprises 104,252 acres of land and water. The population in 1901 was 9,291, and in 1911, 9,319, viz.: males, 4,330, and females, 4,989. In size this county ranks as the twenty-ninth, but as regards population it is, with one exception (Kinross), the smallest in Scotland.

Ancient History.—In this shire is Cawdor Castle, the seat of the Earls of Cawdor, erected in 1454, and in which it is stated Macbeth, Thane of Cawdor, was murdered. In the roof of the highest part of the building is shown the apartment where Lord Lovat lay concealed from his enemies for some time after the battle of Culloden; upon the glass of the small window is rudely scratched the word "overcome," and the date 1665.
